The defendant was apparently surprised for his face suddenly reddened. He evidently had not expected such a verdict. Mr. Mills made a motion to set the verdict aside, but it was denied by the court.

District Attorney Ward moved for judgment and the court set the date for pronouncement of sentence for 10 a. m., Monday.

On Monday morning Judge Devendorf sentenced Brown to four years and ten months in Auburn prison at hard labor.

An appeal will be taken in the case.

To Fulton Residents.

The Chamber of Commerce officials desire to state that they will be pleased to hear from any one who may know of any industry that is seeking a new location and that might possibly be induced to come to Fulton. Such information may be sent to the secretary, N. L. Whitaker, and an active and earnest effort will be made by the President, E. R. Redhead, and the directors to secure the concern.

Well Deserved Promotion.

Mr. Robert Bell, who has been in the employ of the Fulton, Fuel & Light Company from the time of the building of its plant, and who since Feb. 15 has been acting manager, was on Saturday formally appointed general manager.

Mr. Bell is largely responsible for the splendid proportions to which the business has grown, and his promotion is in recognition of this fact, which is appreciated by his company. He has not only been singularly able, but a most faithful and consistent worker, and it is doubtful if he has enjoyed an hour of recreation or relaxation since he came here, a stranger, three years ago. He has had an eye single to his company's interests nor has he forgotten that the successful protecting of these interests could only be attained by a just rendition to the public. In every transaction that has come under Mr. Bell's jurisdiction, both parties have been fairly dealt with, and satisfaction has been the inevitable result. The Times congratulates the gas company and the citizens of Fulton on the excellence of appointment.

Universalist Society Adopts Resolutions.

The following is an extract taken from the minutes of a business meeting of the Universalist Society, held in the parlors of the church on Wednesday evening, March 22:

We, the trustees and members of the First Universalist Church of Fulton, N. Y., wish to express our sincere regret in accepting the resignation of our pastor, the Rev. James Vincent, D. D., and we also wish to express our appreciation of the zeal he and his estimable wife and family have shown in the welfare of the church, fully realising how greatly the church has prospered under their care.

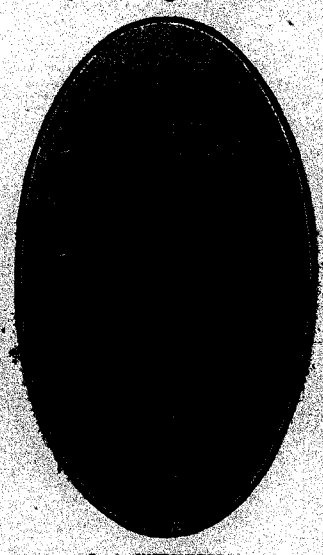
We wish them all possible success in their new field of labor and congratulate their new parish on securing so able a man.

Ministerial Association Resolutions.

At the regular meeting of the Ministerial Association, held at the Baptist Church in this city on Monday, March 27, 1905, the following resolution was unanimously adopted, and it was directed that it be spread upon the minutes of the association, and also published through the newspapers of the city:

Resolved, That we, the members of the Fulton Ministerial Association, desire to express our regret at the departure of the Rev. James Vincent, D. D., from our city and association. His long and successful pastorate in Fulton has testified to the value placed upon his work by the members of his congregation, and the city is about to lose one of its most welcome and familiar faces with his going away.

As a member of our association he has ever been ready and willing with his part in our programs and other work, and has labored for the promotion of brotherly charity and true Christian fellowship.



We wish Dr. Vincent and his estimable wife every divine blessing in their new home and field of work, and we assure them that our prayers and best wishes continue with them always.

BUSINESS EXPANSION.

Negotiations Completed By L. A. Witherill of Syracuse for Two Adjoining Stores to Accommodate Rapidly Increasing Business.

L. A. WITHERILL.

It will hardly be necessary to introduce our readers to the genial gentleman whose features adorn the head of this column, as his acquaintance with Fultonians is only limited by the length of years which he has been in business in Syracuse. He is one of the oldest advertisers in The Times and one of the most persistent. As a result he has built up a splendid trade from this city and Witherill's coats and suits are seen at every turn. It will thus be of more than passing interest to our readers to know how this house has prospered and what it contemplates doing in the future. Mr. Witherill recently completed negotiation for a long time lease of the stores at Nos. 304 and 306 South Salina street, Syracuse, occupied by Leiter Bros. Possession will be given May 1. These stores adjoin the present store at No. 300 South Salina street, corner of West Fayette street, and they are made necessary by the rapidly increasing business.

Improvements that will cost from $10,000 to $15,000 will be made on the property this year. The present entrance to the upper floors of the Pike block will be changed from Salina street to Fayette street and this will make it possible to throw the present store and the two Leiter stores into one big establishment with a frontage of sixty-five feet on Salina street, and 150 feet deep. A modern and handsome plate glass front will be placed in both the Salina street, with a central entrance.

It is not Mr. Witherill's plan to establish a department store. On the contrary, he will devote his energies to enlarging his dry goods, cloak and suit business along the same lines as heretofore practiced.

All of the business will be conducted on one floor and that floor will be the street level. All of the partitions will be done out and the extra floor space obtained will be 5,000 square feet. All of these stores have high ceilings and it will be possible to produce one of the most attractive stores in Syracuse. The location is most desirable and gets plenty of natural light. It will be possible to light the store well, and to ventilate it much better than the average establishment of this character.

Mr. Witherill started in business in his present location twelve years ago, and as he insisted that the girl employes a garment with the proceeds of her first experience at service, and the gentle dame who came to his store in a carriage, should each have the same courteous treatment, he has been obliged to increase his floor room until he now occupies five times what he did when he opened the store. His success is entirely due to his earnest desire to please his clientele and he has been successful beyond his most sanguine expectations.

A Carnegie Library Astride a River.

Isaac F. Marcesson tells in the April World's Work how Carnegie Libraries are given away. Among interesting stories of unusual complications connected with the gifts, the following is one of the best:

Mr. Carnegie believes in home rule in all matters pertaining to the location and conduct of buildings. But sometimes complications arise, as in the case of a city through which a river flows. Then there is a controversy as to which side shall have the library. This happened at Waterloo, Iowa. The city met the usual requirement for taxation, but a discussion arose between two factions representing the people on both sides of the river. Neither side would give in. Finally the compromise was effected, by which it was agreed to build the library in the middle of the river. When Mr. Carnegie heard of this, he good-naturedly decided to end the controversy by giving money for a library on each side of the river.

Champion Liniment for Rheumatism.

Chas. Drake, a mail carrier at Chapinville, Conn., says: "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the champion of all liniments. The past year I was troubled a great deal with rheumatism in my shoulder. After trying several cures, the storekeeper here recommended this remedy and it completely cured me." There is no use of anyone suffering from that painful ailment when this liniment can be obtained for a small sum. One application gives prompt relief and its continued use for a short time will produce a permanent cure. For sale by H. C. Giesler druggists.

He Waited.

"Supposing you wait here in this comfortable seat by the elevator while I match these two samples of ribbon," said Mrs. Mayfair sweetly to her husband, who had been entrapped into going shopping with her. When she came back she said contritely,—

"Have I kept you waiting an unpardonably long time, you poor dear?"

"Oh, I haven't minded it," he said cheerfully. "I just jumped on to a car and ran out to the league grounds and saw most of the ball game, and then I took a little spin in the park with Dorton in his new auto. Did you match the samples?"

"One of them. Its so provoking. I'll have to come in again to-morrow, for they're closing the store now."—April Lippincott's.

QUESTION OF THE FAMILY.

Should Such Matters Be Settled Without Getting Women's Views?

That was indeed a most momentous occasion when the delegates to the interchurch conference on marriage and divorce called on President Roosevelt a few days ago. He impressed upon them that they must not be satisfied with simply regulating marriage and divorce, but they must also prescribe the size of the family. All other reforms "shall profit us nothing," he said, "if we have lost our own national soul," and this calamity is coming "through the diminishing birth rate and the loosening of the marital tie among the old native American families."

Now we have something to look forward to, the plan which the president and the interchurch conference on marriage and divorce will devise to increase the birth rate in the "old native American families." Must the federal constitution be amended, or can it be accomplished by an act of congress? Perhaps it will come under the head of state rights, and in that case it must go to the legislatures for action. The ministers might see what can be done through the medium of the church; in times past they themselves have set a good example. But, on the other hand, there is the Catholic church, which is more strenuous than any other on the subject of large families, and yet out of its best manhood it makes priests and out of its best womanhood nuns and imposes celibacy on both. This is principally on the ground that they can render more effective service to the church and its institutions if their interests are not divided by family ties. Why would this not be equally true in the Protestant church, and why should it not also have an army of the unmarried? And, if this is true of those who labor for the church, why would it not apply to all men and women who wish to consecrate themselves to any great work? Could they not render a more unselfish and complete service if they abjured all family relations? But suppose a man and a woman conscientiously believe they could do better work for humanity together than separately. Would they be under sacred obligations to divert a portion of their time, means and energy to a family of their own? Is there any one thing which so develops selfishness toward the rest of the world as our own children?

This question of increasing the birth rate is a very important one, and we must have no hasty legislation upon it. It really should be referred to a commission to be considered carefully during the summer vacation, and it should be empowered to summon expert testimony. No women must be on this commission, even in an advisory capacity. There is a National Divorce association, composed principally of lawyers; there is also this interchurch body, made up mostly of clergymen. Both have been studying the questions of marriage and divorce for years, and they never yet have admitted a woman to membership or asked a woman's advice. This proves conclusively that as women are not supposed to have any knowledge worth considering or any opinions worth listening to on those subjects they could not be expected to have any on the question of large or small families. They must wait in patience and humility until man, with his infinite and infallible wisdom, has these matters all figured out to his own satisfaction. Then he will kindly put them into civil codes and canon laws for women to obey, as he has been so generously doing since the time of Moses.

IDA HUSTED HARPER.

A RETROGRADE STEP.

Denial of Suffrage to Women in the New Statehood Legislation.

When the statehood bill was under discussion in the United States senate Senator Patterson of Colorado offered an amendment, the effect of which, if adopted, would have been to permit women of full age in the proposed two new states to vote for members of the constitutional conventions and then the ratification or rejection of the constitution. In defending his amendment Senator Patterson said:

"Who will say, Mr. President, that such a privilege should not be given to the women of these now four territories? It is the crucial time for the future of these four territories in connection with the proposed statehood. The constitutional conventions will have everything with which women are most deeply concerned to consider—the question of divorce, the question of the right of parents to children, the question of the ownership of property by wives, to the proceeds of their own labor and the question of schools. Who is more deeply interested in these different questions than are the women of these now four territories? Whatever may be said of the bravery, the courage, the self sacrificing devotion and the patriotism of those who left behind them the civilization of the comforts of their eastern homes, as applicable to the men, may be emphasized fivefold as applicable to the women. Mr. President, this is in the line of the progress of civilization."

The amendment was rejected, but history will not have to record of Thomas M. Patterson that he was one of those who made himself "the laughingstock of posterity" by standing in the way of evolution.

The Bismillah Ceremony.

A little Moslem when she is four years four months old goes through the "name of God," or Bismillah, ceremony, which begins her real life. She is dressed in cloth of gold, with a veil and wreath of flowers, and friends are invited to salute the little queen. She sits on a gold cushion, which must be borrowed if she hasn't one, and all the rest sit on the floor. Then an old mollah recites very slowly a certain verse from the Koran, which is also written in saffron on a silver plate Bibi holds in her hand. She runs her fingers over the words and stammers them after him. "Say it now, Bibi. Be a good girl, then you shall see your presents." Soon they all cry: "Shabash! Shabash! Wah! Wah!" and the ceremony of the little girl's first lesson in reading, writing and religion is over. She salaams mamma, then shows her presents to her sahelis (girl friends).—Edmund Russell in Everybody's.

English Prison Pits.

Prison pits were vaults in which criminals in England were kept at night, chained together. There was one at Bristol which was in use as late at 1815. Down eighteen steps, it was only seventeen feet in diameter by nine feet high, and seventeen men were consigned to it every night. Even more typical was Warwick jail pit, which was occupied at least until 1707. It was an octagonal dungeon twenty-one feet in diameter and almost nineteen feet underground. In the middle was a cesspool, and beside it ran a stream of water which served the prisoners for drinking purposes. To this awful cell forty-two men were consigned every afternoon at 3:45, to remain there until after daylight the following morning. The inmates had to sleep on their sides, and their jailer never visited them without guarding himself with an antidote against sickness.

The Deodand.

Deodand (Latin, Deo dandus, to be given to God) was formerly in English law any agent or instrument by which a person was accidentally killed and which for that reason was to be given to God—that is, forfeited to the king to be applied to pious uses and its value distributed in alms by his high almoner.

Thus a kind of expiation was arranged for such fatal accidents as might be due to the fall of a ladder, the toss of a bull or the heavy wheel of a cart, when the victim was, without any fault of his own, deprived of the last sacraments of the church. The right to these deodands, which were abolished in 1846, was frequently granted to individuals or annexed to lands.

They are mentioned in "Hudibras:"

For love should, like a deodand,
Still fall to the owner of the land.

A Story of Tennyson.

Dante Rossetti used to tell a story of Tennyson, with whom he was walking one sultry summer night through High Holborn. They passed a building brilliantly lighted up and from which issued the sounds of joyous music. "What is that place?" asked the bard. "It is called," replied Rossetti, "the Holborn casino." "I should like to look in," pursued the bard, "only I should be at once surrounded by a crew of groundlings, who would mob and pester and jostle me." "My dear sir," quietly remarked Dante, "if you were to get on one of the tables, announce your name and recite three of your poetic masterpieces into the bargain probably not 2 per cent of the audience would have the slightest idea of who you are."

Three Methods of Derision.

There are very few allusions to storks in Latin authors, but one of these is interesting. The birds have a curious custom of snapping their bills, making quite a sharp noise. Young and old birds, both during and after the breeding season, constantly do this. In the writings of Persius there is a reference to this habit. "There are," he says, "three favorite ways of deriding a man—by putting the hands beside the head like asses' ears, by putting out the tongue like a dog and snapping the fingers against the palm of the hand like a stork's bill." The first two methods of mockery are plain, but what was the cause of the last?—Notes and Queries.

Warding Off Old Age.

A famous French general when asked how it was that he had such an erect carriage replied that it was because he bent over and touched the floor with his fingers thirty times every day. If he had acquired rigidity of the spine so that he could not do that he would have had with it weak abdominal muscles, which result in portal congestion. This portal congestion interferes with stomach digestion and with the action of the liver. The poison destroying power of the liver is lessened, auto intoxication results, and arteriosclerosis and old age come on at a much earlier day. But by keeping the spine flexible and the abdominal muscles strong and taut the portal circulation is kept free, and old age is held off.—Good Health.

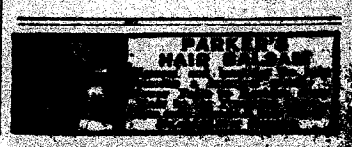
Some Real Giants.

Brewer tells us that "no recorded height of any giant known has reached ten feet." If a cubit is twenty-one inches, Goliath of Gath was eleven feet nine inches in height; if it is eighteen inches, he was just the size of the Arabian giant, Gabara, who was nine feet nine inches. Josephus mentions a Jew who stood ten feet two. Kintolochus Rex was fifteen feet six inches high, five feet through the chest to the spine and ten feet across the shoulders. John Middleton was nine feet three inches. His hand was seventeen inches long and eight and a half broad. Patrick O'Brien was eight feet seven. Turner, the naturalist, says he saw in Brazil a giant twelve feet in height. But Og, king of Bashan, held the record. According to tradition, he lived 3,000 years and walked beside the Ark during the flood. One of his bones formed a bridge over a river.

In the Doldrums.



We may hear it said of one who is in low spirits, "he is in the dumps," or "he is in the doldrums," but many who use the latter of these phrases have caught it up without any knowledge of its real significance. The region of calms is a belt which stretches across the Atlantic and Pacific almost on a line with the equator. Here meet the north and south trade winds, and squalls and heavy rains are frequent, but the characteristic of this region, which is known also as the doldrums, is an oppressive calm. The name nowadays loses much of the significance attached to it by sailors in the past, who, if their ships ran into that region, might whistle in vain for wind, as their sails hung heavily, and all seemed to be

Cures For Witchery.

Rev. Joseph Doderidge in his "Notes of the Settlement and Indian Wars in Pennsylvania and Virginia," in that portion of the work treating of "Witchcraft" says: "The diseases of children supposed to be inflicted by witchcraft were those of dropsy of the brain and the rickets. These were diseases which could neither be accounted for nor cured, consequently they were ascribed to some supernatural agency. For the cure of diseases inflicted by witches the picture of the supposed witch was drawn on a stump or piece of board and shot at with a bullet containing a little bit of silver. This silver bullet transferred a painful and sometimes mortal spell on that part of the witch corresponding with the part of the picture struck by the bullet."

Don't Coddle Rubber Plants.

Of all the freak remedies that are sometimes proposed for sick house plants those which are recommended for rubber plants are the worst. They run all the way from applying beefsteak and castor oil to the roots to coating the leaves with milk. Give your plants a properly prepared soil and sufficient light and keep the leaves free from dust and scale, and you will find no necessity for such nostrums as these. Make it a practice to go over the plants daily with a soft cloth and remove any indication of dust, scale or insects.—Country Life In America.

ISRAEL ZANGWILL, who has been in this country in connection with the staging of his plays, was in Philadelphia during the presidential election and at a literary club told a story of a crafty electioneering boss.

"This boss," he said, "desired votes for his candidate and hesitated at nothing in order to get them. He sent for a poor man one day and asked this man to vote as he desired.

"'Oh, no,' the poor man said firmly. 'Oh, no, I can't do that. I am already promised to the opposition.'

ISRAEL ZANGWILL.

"'You are, eh?' said the boss. 'And how much is the opposition paying you?'

"'Twenty dollars,' the poor man answered.

"The boss assumed an expression of disgust.

"'That was a low price, my friend, an unfairly low price,' he said, 'to give you for your vote. We'd have done better by you. We'd have given you $25.'

"It was not yet too late. The election was two days off. The poor man wavered.

"'Would you?' he said. 'Would you?'

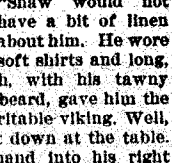
"'To be sure we would,' said the boss. 'Here, it isn't too late yet. Give me the other party's twenty, and I'll give you our twenty-five now.'

"The poor man made the exchange joyfully, and thus the crafty boss had the satisfaction of causing his opponents to pay four-fifths of one of his own bribes."

George Bernard Shaw, the English playwright, is very eccentric in his ideas, his personal habits and his writings. "You Never Can Tell," his new play, now running at the Garrick theater, New York, has a dentist for a hero. It opens with the dentist pulling a tooth and his pretty patient reclining in a dental chair and crying "Ouch!" as the refractory molar is extracted.

Mr. Shaw is fond of saying sharp things and giving people a shock. He remarked recently: "We are too squeamish about killing. There is an immense number of people living in Mayfair who ought to be guillotined."

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW.



Sir Charles Wyndham recently told an interviewer of his first meeting with Mr. Shaw. "In those days," he says, "Shaw would not have a bit of linen about him. He wore soft shirts and long, flowing ties, which, with his tawny hair and long, red beard, gave him the appearance of a veritable viking. Well, he came in and sat down at the table. Then he put his hand into his right trousers pocket and slowly drew out a small pocket memorandum book; then he dug into the left side pocket and brought out another. I waited. He thrust his hand into a coat pocket and fished out another of the little books, then still another and another. Finally he paused in his explorations, looked over at me and said: 'I suppose you're surprised to see all these little pocket-books. The fact is, however, I write my plays in them while riding around London on top of a bus.'"

Some years ago the late Charles H. Hoyt, the playwright, was anxious to obtain the services of a clever actor for a part in one of his plays. An actor whom Hoyt did not like personally heard of this and sent a dispatch to the playwright reading:

"I desire very much to play the part."

Hoyt immediately wired back, "You are absolutely alone in your desire."

Mrs. W. G. Jones, who takes the part of Nannie Webster in "The Little Minister," is said to be the oldest American actress now that Mrs. Gilbert is no longer alive to claim that honor. Mrs. Jones created the part of Eliza in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and in the course of her long career she has studied more than 500 parts and has appeared in nearly every theater in the United States. Her maiden name was Julia A. Wagstaff, and she was born in Chatham, England, April 15, 1828. Her father was a bandmaster in the British army and was sent to Bermuda. He became tired of the treatment accorded him by the military authorities and, purchasing a small pleasure yacht, put his family, consisting of a wife and six children, on board and sailed for the United States. On the yacht, besides his family, he carried a piano, brass musical instruments and a store of household goods. They went to Philadelphia, and Mrs. Jones' first stage appearance as a girl of eight was in her father's band, made up of her father, her five brothers and sisters and herself. That was in the thirties, and after that time she appeared with the elder Booth, Charlotte Cushman, James Murdoch, Julia Dean and other players whose names are almost like those of characters of ancient history to the present generation of playgoers. She has also acted with Edwin Booth, Mme. Modjeska, Joseph Jefferson, Margaret Mather, Maude Adams and other leaders of the dramatic profession in more recent times or at the present. For years she played at the Old Bowery theater and often in those days acted in tragedy, melodrama and farce all in the same evening.

MRS. W. G. JONES.

Charles Hawtrey, who is playing in "A Message From Mars," tells a story of a first night he once attended at an Australian theater. A gentleman arose during the third act and, standing on his seat in the gallery, shouted:

"This is a bad play, and the acting is even worse than the play."

CHARLES HAWTREY.

The leading actor came to the footlights and retorted:

"You have no right to interrupt. If you don't like it, go outside."

"Excuse me," rejoined the malcontent. "I have the right to criticise what I have paid for. If I buy a pound of butter and find it is bad, I say so. I have bought a shilling's worth of this show, and it is an imposition. I want my money back."

At this point an attendant interposed. Clawing, unparliamentary language and smashing of furniture ensued. Eventually the champion of playgoers' rights emerged triumphant from the fray. Holding a shilling on high, he exclaimed:

"It's all right; I've got my money back. The play can now proceed."

Frank Daniels is fond of telling jokes even when the laugh is on himself. He relates that last season a friend showed him how his signature on a check could be easily forged. It was suggested that if Daniels put a private mark on his checks in addition to his signature his bank account would be safer.

Daniels adopted the suggestion, decided on the secret mark and place and notified his bankers. He ended his season a month or so later, and on reaching home found a bundle of bills due to the number of over 100. He devoted the next morning to sending checks for them. Two days later he received word from one of the men to whom he had sent a check that the check had been refused and that there were $2.50 protest fees. Before he could get over his astonishment another mail brought two similar letters, each with a $2.50 protest fee notice.

FRANK DANIELS.

With visions of having in some way been despoiled of his bank account, Daniels made a dash for the train, missed it, and then, being unable to reach the bank in time, was compelled to wait till the next day. That afternoon's mail and the next morning's mail brought fourteen more checks, every one having attached to it a protest fee notification. His bank never seemed so far away before. But he reached it at last.

"What," he pantingly asked the teller—"what is my balance?"

"Twenty-three thousand dollars," said the clerk. Then Daniels, with a look of injured dignity, said:

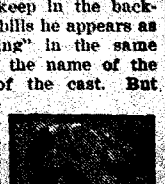
"Why, then, have my checks been refused payment?"

"Because they didn't have the secret mark you notified us of."

"Holy smoke!" the comedian exclaimed. "I forgot it! Great jumping Jehoshophat! And I have sent out over 100 checks."

Fifty-one checks went to protest, and the fees amounted to $127.50.

Joseph Fields, the eleven-year-old son of Lew Fields, the comedian, attends a private school where the pupils are being taught bits of French history. Napoleon was the chief topic of discussion the other day, and the teacher was leading up to the emperor's life with Josephine and their subsequent divorce.



"Now, children," said the teacher, "who can tell me what mean, contemptible thing Napoleon did to Josephine?"

"I can!" shouted young Fields eagerly.

"Well, what was the mean thing he did, my boy?"

"He married her!" proudly responded Fields.

Sir Henry Irving, who was born plain John Henry Brodribb, has always shown a desire to keep in the background. On the playbills he appears as simply "Henry Irving" in the same type as is used for the name of the humblest member of the cast. But some years ago he was acting in the provinces and those responsible for the bills issued posters on which he was mentioned as "the famous Mr. Henry Irving."

HENRY IRVING.

Irving at once sent for the head printer.

"Look here!" he said. "You are not to print another bill with all those flourishes before my name. You are to see that in future my name reads as simple Henry Irving and in quite small type."

The printer retired. Next day Irving was horrified to find the town flooded with posters which announced that "Simple Henry Irving" would that night fill a certain role at the theater.

A GLARING INJUSTICE.

An Old Paper With Power From Which His Superiors Are Barred.

I defy any man who prizes his right to vote to give any good reason why the average intelligent, conscientious, law abiding and taxpaying woman has not the same equitable right to a voice in the government that he insists upon having. There is not one of the tenets of our theory of government which justifies man's claim to recording at the polls his will as a free man which does not guarantee in theory the right of every free woman to record her will at the polls.

I once saw a dozen ladies undertake to exercise what they had been advised was their right. The inspectors refused to receive their votes, and the ladies quietly turned away. While the discussion was going on an old pauper stood by, intently interested in the proceedings. His large family had been a charge upon the town for years. These very women had given of their time and money to preserve that family from cold and starvation, had paid taxes year after year to enable the poor master to honor the drafts of the old pauper to keep him alive through the winter. And yet as those ladies turned sadly away with their ballots still in their hands the face of the besotted old brute was wreathed in smiles. He had been declared their superior before the law. All their knowledge, their piety, their philanthropy, their ardent patriotism, went for naught in the scale when weighed against the attribute that he was a male. No depth of mental, moral and physical degradation could disfranchise him. No height of learning, refinement, loving service to humanity or peril for their country could by any possibility enfranchise them. And when I saw that old wretch laugh and realized the outrageous injustice of the law I decided that while I had a voice and a vote they should be given at every opportunity to terminate that wrong.

HON. LOUIS M'KINSTRY.

CLEARING OF THE WATERS.

Giving Women Votes Like Mingling a Clear Stream With a Foul One.

I do not hesitate to say that the best women of Colorado have far more conscience in fulfilling their responsibilities as voters than the men of the same class. It is also true that women of standing in the community have great influence with men who are not particularly interested in public affairs.

We are constantly asked by visitors to Colorado, "But how do prominent women, with their many duties and obligations, have time for politics?" To speak to one's grocer, butcher, stationer, to a conductor on a car or to a cabman takes only an instant, and it takes just about one hour in a year to cast all the ballots necessary and allowable.

The women of the half world generally do not vote. They are constantly changing their residences and their names. They do not wish to give any data concerning themselves, their age, name or number and street; they prefer to remain unidentified. Occasionally some disreputable master compels these slaves to vote for his own purposes, but it is a rare occurrence.

Has the woman vote wholly purified politics, and have we banished saloons? No to both questions. It would be beyond reason to expect such a result. Women have been in churches and in society since the beginning of time, but there are still vicious minds and sinful deeds in both religious and social circles. The most we assert is that if we pour a clear stream into a muddy one we shall have a "moving of the waters" for betterment.

There is a splendid womanly independence in being a voting citizen, an absorbing interest in fulfilling the duty of citizenship, and there is a much more chivalrous devotion as well as a greater respect on the part of men who look upon their sisters not as playthings or as property, but as equals and fellow citizens.

SARAH PLATT DECKER,
President General Federation Women's Clubs.

GIVE WOMAN HER DUE.

She Is Allowed to Have Duties, but Rights Are Denied Her.

If womankind is good enough to raise children, superintend all of the household duties, have the meals ready on time, make home cheerful and attractive, sit up nights and plan how to keep the churches out of bankruptcy while she is darning her husband's and children's stockings and sewing on buttons in place of those lost, strayed or broken we see no reason why she should not be allowed to go anywhere the law will allow a man to go.

She is allowed to pay taxes on property, but she is robbed of the right to vote. It is taxation without representation, and still noble mankind (?) will take her down to Philadelphia and show her Liberty bell, that rang when the Declaration of Independence was signed, and ask her to admire it, but he will not let her vote.

He will accept her assistance in saving up $150, and he will take it down to New York and "blow it in," but she must not accompany him because it would spoil his fun.

For concentrated nerve mankind holds the record. All of this talk about class legislation to preserve the morality of women is bosh and buncombe. Give her a vote and she will protect her own morals and her family as well. No, we do not need any new laws for the restriction of womankind, but we need them to give her more liberty—all the rights the national constitution gives to men—and then change the test for the right to vote from one of sex to one of educational qualification.—Fulton Patriot.

GENERAL LINEVITCH.

Career of the Successor to General Kuropatkin In Manchuria.

Lieutenant General Linevitch, who has been appointed commander in chief of the Russian forces in Manchuria as successor to General Kuropatkin, is sixty-six years old, has been a fighter since his twenty-first year and has seen service in every section of the Russian empire from the Caucasus to Vladivostok. At the outbreak of the war with Japan he was governor of Amur. He was a friend and ally of Viceroy Alexeieff and before Kuropatkin's arrival in Manchuria had been in command of the Russian forces which were in the province at that time. He took hold of the situation at Liaoyang, established the military supply stations there, worked out the Yalu river campaign and was in general command until Kuropatkin relieved him.

The latter changed all his plans for the defense of Liaoyang. Linevitch wanted to fight the Japanese in the mountains east, southeast and south, but Kuropatkin believed in "luring them on." In the battle of the Sha Linevitch had Kuroki's army in jeopardy twice, and success for the Japanese was won on each occasion with reenforcements from General Nodzu's center army. It was Linevitch who kept Kuroki out of Fushun for two days, and it was the left of his army, with Rennenkampf's cavalry, that forestalled Kuroki's rush farther east. This, if carried out, would have cut off the Russian retreat.

LIEUTENANT GENERAL LINEVITCH.

Linevitch as commander in chief of the Russian forces is now fighting men who fought under him in 1900. He led the 22,000 allies in the march for the relief of Peking, and in his command as the senior officer of the allied forces were 12,000 Japanese under Generals Yamaguchi and Fukushima. In the Russo-Turkish war Kuropatkin and Linevitch quarreled bitterly, being of equal rank. When Kuropatkin became the head of the Transbaikal army Linevitch was one of his division commanders, and the quarrel was renewed. Linevitch challenged Kuropatkin, who refused to fight a duel on the ground that it would not be proper for him to take the field with an officer of inferior rank.

Schools In France.

The French system of education is intensely national. Its plan is exactly the opposite from our own school system. With us the local community controls primary schools. In France the local community has no voice in the matter. The French system is the most centralized, the most strictly regulated, the most autocratic and the farthest removed from democratic ideas of any school system in existence. The exact uniformity of the schools is almost unbelievable. The minister of instruction, sitting in his office in Paris, can tell at any moment just what fable of La Fontaine each child of a certain age throughout the whole of France is reciting. Teachers are not allowed any latitude at all. The result is to leave both teachers and scholars almost completely lacking in mental originality.—F. A. Vanderlip in Scribner's.

PREVENT APPENDICITIS

What Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. Kennedy's NEW Medicine, did for Mr. George A. Owen.

Appendicitis is prevented by the prompt use of Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. Kennedy's new medicine. When the bowels are not performing their functions regularly and constipation results then there is danger of an attack of appendicitis. The proper treatment is to strengthen and at the same time cleanse the bowels. For this purpose Cal-cura Solvent has been found extremely certain and thorough.

Mr. George H. Owen, of Hardenburgh, N. Y., was advised by four physicians to enter a hospital and have an operation for appendicitis performed, but he heard of Cal-cura Solvent and used it with the most gratifying results. All symptoms of appendicitis were removed and he has been in perfect health ever since. The Valuable Palmyra Palm.

A Hindoo poem enumerates 800 purposes to which the Palmyra palm alone is put. Among other things it supplies paper for writing upon, an intoxicating drink called "toddy," large quantities of sugar fruit and a vegetable for the table when the plants are young. Palm wine is also obtained from the juice of the sago palm, which yields excellent sugar candy when boiled. The pith of the trunk forms a large part of the food of the natives in many parts of India. Ropes, brushes and brooms are manufactured from the fiber of the leaf stalks.

A Chicago Alderman Owes His Election to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

"I can heartily and conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for affections of the throat and lungs," says Hon. John Shenick, 220 South Peoria street, Chicago, "Two years ago during a political campaign, I caught cold after being overheated, which irrifated my throat and I was finally compelled to stop, as I could not speak aloud. In my extremity a friend advised me to use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I took two doses that afternoon and could not believe my senses when I found the next morning the inflammation had largely subsided. I took several doses that day, kept right on talking through the campaign, and I thank this medicine that I won this seat in Council." This remedy is for sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Colonel Clark E. He had a sort of confiding way, as much as to say, 'I am going to tell you—I feel that I can trust myself to say to you,' as though you were the one person in whom he could confide. He was only five feet four and was well called 'the little giant.' I was astonished to find he had so good a figure."

The Confusion of Wives.

Occasionally the excess of wives in Utah leads to amusing consequences, as when one of the apostles invited a visiting gentile to dinner. The guest lost the address and looked up the apostle in the directory. He observed that his hostess, though she answered to the proper name, seemed unprepared for him, and presently he heard her at the telephone.

"Oh, Emma! Is John living at your house this week? Is he expecting somebody to dinner today? Very well. The gentleman will be there in a few minutes."

Then returning to the stranger she handed him a paper slip.

"You came to the wrong house, sir. This is the address you want."

On another occasion a little girl came running into the parlor while a visitor was calling.

"Mamma, mamma! Papa wants his suit case packed. He is going to live with Aunt Emma this week."—Leslie's Monthly.

Meats and Digestion.

Of all known meats veal is the hardest to digest, requiring five hours and thirty minutes. The Italians are a happy people. They are healthy and hopeful. Their favorite meat is veal. Veal in the New York markets must weigh exactly 120 pounds to the carcass to be perfect. That is the standard of quality and price. All sorts of tricks are resorted to to hit the mark precisely. The question is, What is best for the human race, food that requires a long time to digest or a short time? Roast beef is digested in three hours. We Americans are great eaters of pork, which is nearly as hard to digest as veal, requiring five hours and fifteen minutes. We are a nation of dyspeptics, reveling in fresh bread, which takes three hours and fifteen minutes. China and Japan live on rice, which digests in one hour.—New York Press.

A Dinner Invitation.

After a hearty meal, a dose of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure will prevent an attack of Indigestion. Kodol is a thorough digestant and guaranteed cure for Indigestion, Dyspepsia, gas on the stomach, Sour Risings, Bad Breath and all stomach troubles. N. Watkins, Lesbus, Ky., says: "I can testify to the efficacy of Kodol in the cure of Stomach Trouble. I was afflicted with Stomach Trouble for fifteen years and have taken six bottles of your Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, which entirely cured me. The six bottles were worth $1,000 to me." Kodol Dyspepsia Cure will digest any quantity of all the wholesome food you want to eat while your stomach takes a rest—recuperates and grows strong. This wonderful preparation is justly entitled to all of its many remarkable cures. Sold by H. C. Giesler and George T. Boyington.

Coined In Bedlam.

The phrase "to sham Abraham" was coined in Bedlam, or Bethlehem hospital, where there was at one time an Abraham ward, the inmates of which upon certain days were permitted to go out as licensed beggars on behalf of the hospital. These mendicant lunatics were known as "Abraham men," and their success in invoking the pity of the charitable was such that they had many unlicensed imitators, who, when discovered, were said "to have shammed Abraham."

By the Tonic Route.

The pills that act as a tonic, and not as a drastic purge, are DeWitt's Little Early Risers. They cure Headache, Constipation, Biliousness, etc. Early Risers are small, easy to take and easy to act—a safe pill. Mack Hamilton, hotel clerk at Valley City, N. D., says: "Two bottles cured me of chronic constipation." Sold by H. C. Giesler and George T. Boyington.

His Bitter Experience.

"Can't you swallow even a sugar coated pill?"

"No. You see, the blamed thing seems to take its coat off before starting on its trip."

In reply to inquiries we have pleasure in announcing that Ely's Liquid Cream Balm is like the solid preparation of that admirable remedy in that it cleanses and heals membranes affected by nasal catarrh. There is no drying or sneezing. The Liquid Cream Balm is adapted to use by patients who have trouble in inhaling through the nose and prefer spraying. The price, including spraying tube, is 75 cents. Sold by druggists or mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.

Restless Nature.

Nothing in nature is absolutely permanent. Changes are going on slowly, but steadily, every moment, parts of the earth being elevated above the sea, parts sinking below it, the ocean wearing away the coast in one place and building it out in another, and so on to infinity.

The Bitter and Washing.

We have come to look upon water as meant primarily to wash in, as an aid to ablution rather than a thing of beauty. A story of a Somersetshire peasant will illustrate what we mean. The individual in question had never seen the sea until he was taken to Weston-super-Mare on a "choir treat" excursion. Naturally the vicar, the curate and the rest of the tenors, trebles and basses as soon as the esplanade was reached gathered around to see how the first sight of the ocean would strike the natural man. Will it be believed that the words struck from him by the view of "the unfurrowed deep" lying in vast expanse before his eyes were these: "If I'd known what her were like, I'd have brought down a bit of soap and had a good wash." The iron, or, rather, the soap, had entered so deeply into his soul that he could only conceive the sea as a huge washing place.—London Spectator.

Wagner's Shorn Locks.

Wagner, the composer, at one time became afflicted with headaches and determined to have his hair cut. He accordingly arranged with a barber to perform the operation on a certain day. That worthy resolved to make a good thing of it and informed all his customers of Wagner's impending sacrifice. Most of them paid him a certain sum down in advance to make sure of a lock of the great musician's hair. To the barber's horror Mme. Wagner superintended the cutting and when it was over appropriated the whole of the coveted locks. The barber, in despair, confessed that he had sold them many times over, whereupon madam suggested that her butcher had hair very much like Wagner's. And the story goes that that night half Dresden slept with the butcher's hair under its pillow.

Reflected Brightness.

"Why does that congressman say so many more clever things than the rest of us?"

"He is shrewd enough to pick out the brightest reporters to interview him."—Washington Star.

When an old maid bamps her head against the door in the dark she never has to worry over the way people will wonder if her husband did it.—Baltimore American.

For Thin Babies

Fat is of great account to a baby; that is why babies are fat. If your baby is scrawny, Scott's Emulsion is what he wants. The healthy baby stores as fat what it does not need immediately for bone and muscle. Fat babies are happy; they do not cry; they are rich; their fat is laid up for time of need. They are happy because they are comfortable. The fat surrounds their little nerves and cushions them. When they are scrawny those nerves are hurt at every ungentle touch. They delight in Scott's Emulsion. It is as sweet as wholesome to them.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S VACATION

To Be Spent With the Rough Riders and Among Wild Animals.

The energy with which President Roosevelt works is the wonder and admiration of those familiar with his habits and achievements. For some days after his recent inauguration he was under almost constant strain and worked at a pace which few men could have maintained. Change of occupation gives him rest, and life in the open air and exercise of the most strenuous sort serve to restore his exhausted energies. That is why he planned to spend his vacation this spring in attending the reunion of the rough riders in San Antonio, Tex., and in hunting in several states of the west and southwest where game abounds and civilization and its ways can be left far behind.

While in Texas he will enjoy coursing jack rabbits on the open prairie and also coursing wolves. In hunting the wolves greyhounds are used, and the sport often develops much zest, as the larger wolves put up a good fight when cornered. The president expects to meet Abernathy, the man who catches wolves with his bare hands, while in Texas. Abernathy has won many a bounty by bringing in alive wolves that he has thus taken. The president will probably be buried in some of the wildest parts of Colorado for about a month. In a letter to Philip B. Stewart of Colorado, who is arranging the details of the outing, Mr. Roosevelt said: "I am coming out to hunt and be a hunter for a month. Bacon, bear meat, bread and butter, with black coffee, is all I want. Remember, I want to rough it, so the trip will do me some good."

IN ANCIENT MUKDEN.

Picturesque Manchurian City Recently Captured by Japanese.

The walls of Mukden were built to protect its inhabitants from possible assault, but they were erected before the invention of modern artillery. General Kuropatkin gathered a large store of supplies and munitions of war at Mukden, but he did not trust his men to the shelter of the mud rampart or picturesque inner wall of the sacred city. Neither of these would have protected the Russians long against soldiers who had pushed through even such almost impregnable barriers as surrounded Port Arthur.

When the great Manchu monarch of the sixteenth century, Nurachi, made Mukden the capital of his kingdom he devoted himself to the improvement of the city and beautified it in many ways. In the center of it he built palaces of much grandeur and surrounded them with a wall. This part of Mukden, formerly constituted a forbidden city, like that of Peking, to which no foreigner was admitted and within which were many treasures and valuable objects of oriental art. The wall around the Chinlantien, or forbidden blue pavilion, was later taken down, but the high wall of stone and brick, erected between three and four centuries ago, still remains and is in an excellent state of preservation. This incloses a portion of Mukden a mile square, including the ancient parts of the town. The wall is forty feet high and sixty feet broad at the base, narrowing to twenty-five feet at the top.

After the wall around the inner city was built shops grew up outside of it, and inns were established to shelter travelers who arrived after the city gates were closed. In time there was quite a community outside the city's high wall, and, thinking that they needed protection from some kind of a rampart, but not having money enough to erect one like that encompassing the city proper, they constructed the mud wall that now surrounds the native city of Mukden. This is but fifteen feet high and is plowed, like the fields with eight sides.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by druggists at 75 cents.

The Pomelo of China.

Probably the best all round fruit in China is the pomelo. It is grown in the south central and southern provinces and is said to be the original citrus fruit. It resembles the grape fruit of the United States in size, shape, color and somewhat in flavor, being sweeter than grape fruit, with less of the bitter quality, with flesh more perfectly separated in the sections and capable of being pulled apart and separated from all surrounding sacs or membranes. The natives cut through the peel about one-third of the way from the top, crimping the edge of the section all the way round the fruit, then remove the flesh, tear the section apart, replace them in the peel and serve thus divided and prepared. The fruit is attractive, refreshing, wholesome and comparatively cheap. Generally speaking, the pomelo seems to be a cross between a shaddock and a good orange, but it is more hardy than either. It has better keeping qualities than the orange.

"GET-RICH-QUICK-MAN"

Visits Fulton but Meets with Little Success—"The Gold Star Pure Food Man" Is Now an Historical Personage—Belonged in Syracuse.

The Times office was favored last week with a call from William E. Lay, who stated that he represented the Gold Star Pure Food Company of Boston, importers and manufacturers of teas, coffees, extracts, spices, soaps, toilet articles and perfumes, which had branches in almost every city in the country. Mr. Lay was desirous of establishing a branch in Fulton and secured temporary offices in the Kenyon block. He placed orders for printing with the Patriot, Observer and also favored the Times in the deal. It is currently reported that he borrowed $50 from the editor of the Observer, but this Mr. Bradt stoutly denies.

At all events, a number of clerks and a stenographer were secured by Lay and placed on the payroll with a promise of advancement and higher wages in the near future.

The plan was to establish a mail-order business—prospective customers being invited to send $1 with their order and they would receive $2 worth of tea, coffee, etc. The circulars were mailed throughout the county in the hope of a speedy return.

A glowing description of the mammoth concern was furnished the Times by Manager Lay, together with numerous local paragraphs and display advertising with a request for their publication.

Before pursuing such a course, and in order to protect our readers, the Times began an investigation. Neither Bradstreet nor Dunn's commercial agencies gave the Gold Star Pure Food Company a rating. Manager Lay was called upon to explain. He seemed surprised, but asked that the advertisements be published and the president of his concern, C. U. Rogers of Boston would reach Fulton on Thursday and make the crooked path straight, so to speak.

The Times insisted on Lay furnishing the name of some one of reputation who would vouch for him, but the proposition was treated in an indifferent manner. It seemed to him incredulous that he should be regarded with suspicion.

The adroit manager called at S. D. Wells' shoe store and secured two pair of shoes on approval. One pair was found at his boarding house and one pair he is still wearing.

Chief of Police Ross was notified and he called at Manager Lay's office simply to look him over. This appeared to be sufficient, as the manager left Fulton for his home in Syracuse early on Wednesday morning. Lay neglected to tell his landlady where he was going or when to expect his return.

The clerks in the office of the Gold Star Pure Food concern spent Wednesday and Thursday sending out circulars and watching the trains for Mr. Lay's return, but he failed to appear and they discharged themselves.

Our contemporaries published the advertisements of the "get-rich-quick" man.

Eighty-four houses in the City of Fulton are now painted with the famous Detroit paint. All first-class jobs. For sale by Briggs & Gayer.

DIED.

Stephen R. Horton, aged 85, a former resident of this city, died in Pasadena, Cal., on March 27. The remains were brought here on Monday and on Tuesday the burial service was read at Mt. Adnah vault by the Rev. John Richards. Interment was made in Mt. Adnah. The deceased was a G. A. R. veteran.

Mrs. Susan Theresa Linsley, widow of the late William C. Baldwin, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. B. S. McKinstry on Friday, March 31.

Mrs. Baldwin was born in Greene County, N. Y., in 1824; she came to Fulton in 1847 making the journey a bridal trip with horse and wagon, as the incomplete railroads across the State made that the only comfortable way of reaching this place.

Thus nearly sixty years of her life have been spent here—a quiet, Christian life, full of interest in the welfare of others. While not always in close personal touch with the world, she never lost interest in the events of the day and never failed to be thoroughly posted therein. Up to the week of her death, the daily papers, the weekly and monthly magazines, were read as understandingly as in her youth, and the criticisms upon her readings and repetitions from them were proof of a retentive memory and an active mind.

In sickness or trouble, both of which had fallen to her as to others, she ever kept a brave and cheerful spirit, strengthening and encouraging those about her by her wonderful faith and love.

Among those who mourn her are two uncles, one of whom she visited at Walton last Fall; an elder and younger brother and two younger sisters.

She was one of the oldest if not the oldest member of the Presbyterian church in this city and now at full fourscore years she has entered into her rest leaving a precious memory.

The funeral services were held from the late home on Sunday afternoon, the Rev. W. L. Sawtelle officiating. Interment was made in Mt. Adnah.

Sarah B., the 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Carvey, died at their home in Ontario street on Tuesday from scarlet fever. Burial will be made at Mt. Pleasant.

The remains of John Kilfoyle, who died in New York City last week, were brought to this city for interment on Friday and the funeral was held from the Catholic church on Saturday morning. Interment was made in St. Mary's. The deceased was aged 48, and is survived by his widow, one sister, Miss Mary Kilfogle of New York City, and two brothers, Patrick of this city and William of Calgeria, Can.

CURRENT EVENTS CLUB

Alleged Niagara Falls Grab Bill, Rockefeller's Gift to the New England Congregational Society and Salvation Army Anniversary Discussed.

At the meeting of the Current Events Club on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. E. R. Redhead, the Executive Committee, through Mrs. Redhead, reported that the recent lecture given by Prof. Flick on "Russia," under the auspices of the Current Events and Timely Topics Clubs, would result in about $55 being placed to the credit of the Public Library fund.

In the absence of Mr. Redhead, Mrs. Emens became the presiding officer, and she very gracefully introduced the leaders for the evening, Mr. Louis W. Emerick and the Rev. Nelson Reynolds.

Mr. Emerick deprecated the tendency to elaborate current events with which the members were more or less familiar. He thought a more frequent discussion and an interchange of ideas regarding important happenings would be more interesting and helpful. The speaker went into detail regarding the alleged Niagara Falls water-power grab bills which were now being considered in the State Legislature. Ten in all had been introduced which practically aimed at unrestricted control of a valuable franchise, giving the new corporation unlimited power to condemn property for its own use—an advantage no other corporation enjoyed, besides establishing a dangerous precedent.

The principal embodied in the measure was discussed by Mr. G. B. Duell and the Rev. John Richards, the contention being that the franchise should be controlled in the interest of the whole people.

On motion, the secretary was instructed to write to our representatives at Albany and obtain information in regard to the matter.

The Rev. Nelson Reynolds spoke of the relations existing between Venezuela and the United States and the bearing on the question of the Monroe doctrine. The people of South America had evinced a desire that the United States should safe-guard them in any reprehensible act they choose to commit against a foreign power.

The protest against the acceptance of the $100,000 gift from Rockefeller by the New England Congregational ministers, was discussed by Mr. F. D. Van Wagenen from a commercial and ethical viewpoint.

Mr. Duell took the position that a question of principal was involved and that the ministers were justified in the rejection of the gift. A general discussion of the question followed.

The return of the captured Confederate battle flags was discussed by Mr. A. J. Snow, who read the resolution adopted by Congress and dwelt at some length on the matter. He agreed with others that it was a most gracious act.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of the Salvation Army in this country proved an interesting and instructive topic by Mrs. Helen Emens, who furnished statistics regarding its growth and prosperity.

Mr. Thomas Hunter called attention to the completion of the Simplon tunnel through the Alps.

The next and last meeting of the season will be held at the home of Mrs. Earl S. Brown, on Monday evening, April 17, when election of officers will be held and it is expected that each member will take some part in the program.

BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS.

Business of Importance Transacted—More Lights Ordered—New Sidewalks to Be Constructed.

The Board of Public Works met on Monday evening. All the commissioners were present.

The first business of importance transacted was the correction of an error of assessment on the property of A. J. Snow and Mrs. Thayer. The matter was referred to the Common Council for final adjustment.

The Fulton Light, Heat & Power Company was instructed to erect an arc light on Oneida street at the city limit; one in the vicinity of Bellejean Park; one on the center of the canal bridge at the intersection of First and Oneida street, the same to be 2,000 candle-power; the exact location to be determined by the Board. The foregoing was done in compliance with petitions presented to the Board.

It was also ordered that no person or corporation should be permitted to build or construct any sidewalk within the city limits of Fulton until such person or corporation fulfills the guaranty on such sidewalk they have already constructed and such work shall have been accepted by the Superintendent of Public Works, and that a notice to this effect be inserted in all the city papers.

A notice to build sidewalks was ordered served on the following named persons:

William Moon, John Winters and Patrick Kilfoyle, West First street, between Broadway and Voorhees streets; Willard estate, Frank Fancher, Aaron Blakeman, Mrs. Michael Fitzgerald, Mrs. Mollie Hennessy, Daniel Hickey, Dwight Wilcox, J. B. Simons, Frank Betts, Mrs. VanCamp, West First, south; Warren Ware, 401 South First street, west; W. E. Bidwell, South Second street; J. R. Humphrey, South Fourth street; McGinnis' hotel, corner of First and Hannibal streets; C. H. Gardner, corner of Oneida and Seventh streets; E. M. Boomer, Seventh street, between Oneida and Seneca streets; T. H. Webb, corner of Third and Utica streets.

A resolution was carried to the effect that the pay of Wallace Brown shall be $13.50, and the pay of Frank Robinson shall be $10 per week, beginning with the week ending April 15.

A number of bills were audited and ordered paid and an adjournment was taken.

STEPHENS OPERA HOUSE.

Two Married Men.

The question has often been asked, Why is "Two Married Men" so popular with the patrons of the theatre? One word will answer that,—"Realism." The characters are natural, in fact, studies from real life. The story is interesting; the scenes and incidents are realistic. The great trouble with many of the plays of today is too much stageism and not enough naturalness. In "Two Married Men" Managers Swafford and Colton have used all their elements of success, comedy, pathos and sensational effects and they select their company to fit their respective parts and rehearse them as they wish the parts played. They get the results that the public appreciate. The scenic effects are original and the company is competent. The patrons of Stephen's Opera House will have a chance to pass judgment, as the play will be presented next Tuesday, April 11. Prices, 10, 20, 30 and 50 cents.

The Missouri Girl.

Dramatic critics unanimously agree that "The Missouri Girl" stands first among domestic comedies. The New York Telegraph pronounces it "one of the best written comedies ever seen in New York." The New York World calls it a "good play," and adds that the production includes "an unusually clever lot of people."

The Chicago Chronicle, as well as the News, Record-Herald and Tribune, strongly endorse the production. The St. Louis Globe-Democrat pronounces the company "exceedingly clever;" the Times-Star of the same city says "play and company made a decided hit." The Toledo News was quite enthusiastic in its praise and says it is "a clean, wholesome, mirth-provoking play which can never fail to please." The Cincinnati Commercial Tribune pronounces the company "thoroughly competent one." The Times-Star of the same city says it was "the most enjoyable offering of the season," and even the conservative Enquirer praises the production. In Pittsburg the Dispatch, Post and Times, do not hesitate to endorse it. It is the same in smaller cities. If newspaper praise is a criterion by which the theatre-going public can judge an attraction, "The Missouri Girl" will easily be the comedy treat of the season. It comes to Stephens Opera House on Thursday, April 13.

Half a Cent An Hour

This is getting things down to a pretty fine point—½ a cent an hour for an 80 candle-power gas light.

Of course there are other lights, ancient and modern, one or other of which no doubt you have in use, but the brilliant, the steady, the restful, the pleasing and the cheapest of all lights is the Welsbach incandescent gas-light.

Add to life's comforts, life's enjoyments—use this best light, which also fortunately is cheapest. Choose the most convenient time at which to have the piping done—house-cleaning time would seem to us to be that time.

FARM AND GARDEN

CORN LAND.

Good Soil More Important to Corn Than to Many Other Crops.

By C. P. HARTLEY.

While it is true that proper attention to seed selection and methods of cultivation will greatly increase the average production per acre for all land now devoted to corn growing, it is equally true that the cultivation of corn will never be found profitable on very poor land. Some growers from force of habit every spring plant corn on land which they know is too poor to produce a profitable crop. The plowing and cultivating of poor soil are as expensive as the plowing and cultivating of fertile soil. The man who cultivates poor soil and harvests poor crops cannot profitably compete with his neighbor who grows good crops with but little if any greater expenditure of labor or capital. Corn growing should not be attempted on poor land until it is brought into a fertile condition by the growing and plowing under of leguminous crops, the application of manures, etc. In the meantime some crops that require less fertility than corn may be grown. It should be remembered that the nature of the corn plant is such that it will not produce grain unless the soil is rich enough to afford a considerable growth of stalk and that the best yield of ears is not obtained unless the stalks have made a maximum growth. For this reason some other plants will produce small or fair crops on soil too poor to produce corn. A cotton plant adjusts its yield of lint to the fertility of the soil, a small plant producing a small number of bolls containing lint of as good a quality as that from a larger plant bearing many more bolls. A hay crop is also in quite regular proportion to the fertility of the soil. This is not true, however, of corn. When poor soil dwarfs grass to half its normal size the crop of hay is reduced by about one-half, but when poor soil dwarfs the corn plants to half their normal size it is probable that there will be no grain yield, or if any ears are produced they will be small and inferior.

In planting low wet land, underground drainage will prove most profitable in the end, but as this is rather expensive it is sometimes desirable to use low flat land for corn before it is possible to have it tile drained. Sometimes such fields are plowed in small strips or "lands" four to six feet wide, and a row of corn is planted on the ridge or back furrow of every land. This places the plants above surface water and for this reason is satisfactory during wet weather, but the high situation of the stalks is a disadvantage during dry weather.

The method of planting illustrated in the cut gives more general satisfaction for such fields. The ground is back furrowed in lands eight feet wide, making thereby dead furrows every eight feet. On each side and two feet from each dead furrow shallow rows are marked off, and in them the corn is planted. By this method the plants have drainage during wet weather and are better situated for enduring drought than when standing on ridges.

PLANTING SYSTEM FOR LOW WET LAND.

Good Prospect For Sugar Corn.

Generally speaking, the memory of last year's frost will have little effect upon the acreage devoted to sugar corn in Maine the coming season. Farmers in the Pine Tree State have for the past few seasons become accustomed to cold weather setting in early in the fall, and from the tenor of reports received by the Homestead it is evident they are willing to make another good trial with the crop this summer. Out of a set of replies from inquiries directed to the leading sugar corn growers of Maine not a single one tells of a general intention on the part of farmers to fight shy of sugar corn in 1906. In spite of the somewhat liberal pack of corn in the United States last year the Maine product continues to fully hold its own. Vermont conditions are hardly so uniform as are those of Maine.—New England Homestead.

Another Good Word For Alfalfa.

For feeding purposes there is no plant that is so promising as alfalfa—first, because of its high feeding value; second, because of its rapid growth and consequently large yield, and, third, because it is a perennial and may be harvested from year to year without expense of reseeding or [illegible] Experiments [illegible]

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS.

Current Events and Intimations In Progressive Farming.

By B. BENJAMIN, Jr.

Washington, D. C.—An idea of much interest to the producer and consumer of milk and also the milk dealer is the new paper bottles which are being tested in Philadelphia and upon which the bacteriologist of the board of health is said to have reported favorably. These bottles, of a conical shape, handy for packing, are stamped out of heavy paper and put together with the design of being very strong, absolutely tight and waterproof and are then sterilized. It is claimed that milk contained in paper bottles keeps longer than in glass. Among minor advantages urged for the paper bottle is its weight, which is very little in comparison with that of the glass bottle. There being no old bottles to collect, the carrying capacity of milk delivery wagons would be much increased. There would be no loss through broken or unreturned bottles. As to cost, the paper bottles are estimated at a cent apiece as against 3 cents for pints and 5 cents for quarts in glass. Not the least valuable of all the results which the advocates of the paper milk containers foresee is the bottling of the milk on the dairy farm where it is produced instead of at the city milk dealer's establishment.

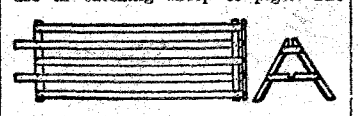
Yellow Pine of the Southwest.

Forestry authorities state that commercially the most important tree of Arizona, New Mexico and southwestern Colorado is the western yellow pine. It is known locally as black jack and in the lumber trade is frequently called white pine. The quantity of western yellow pine lumber shipped to other parts of the country at present is small, but it is rapidly increasing.

The Next Corn Crop.

From the persistency with which corn is talked and written about this spring it seems that the agricultural world in general is set upon making another big corn crop, and nothing short of most unfavorable weather conditions can prevent it. All sorts of good advice are circulating. Farmers tell in their favorite papers how they have made or expect to make a good crop. People have been educated in the selection of seed by the great corn exhibits and corn judging contests of the past fall and winter, and the experiment stations, both north and south, are spreading abroad information on the testing of seeds, injurious insects and general culture.

Cheerful Statistics.



According to the latest estimates for the last fiscal year, our increasing fruit trade is shown by a gain of $3,000,000, the total domestic exports of fruits for 1904 being valued at more than $20,000,000. At the same time our imports of fruits gained $100,000 and nuts $600,000, while alcoholic liquors declined $500,000, all facts of cheer to vegetarians, the Apple Consumers' league and the nut growers.

Good Business.

There is a good business done in some sections of New Jersey in the forcing of early potatoes. The earliest varieties are chosen, and everything done is with a view to earliness, with the result that a net profit is realized far in advance of the ordinary late potato crop.—Joseph Barton, New Jersey.

A Simple Portable Fence.

A portable fence which I have used several years and like better than any other I have seen is not only simple, but can be put together in any position from the straight line (by the use of the bracket shown) to zigzag or a very sharp angle, which is handy for yard use in catching sheep or pigs. The ends of panels are fastened together as closely as position will permit by a piece of fence wire. Half of the panels should be made with cleats on the reverse side from that shown in cut unless the spaces in the top and bottom are the same, which will permit the use of half of the panels the other side up.—Cor. A Nice Point of Law.

During Queen Victoria's reign one of the solicitors of the queen who had jurisdiction over capital cases chanced to be a man named Bacon. By a curious chance a man named Hogg was condemned to death under his jurisdiction. The day before the execution Hogg sent for his executioner, Bacon. The prisoner pleaded for interference in his case because of his claims of relationship to Bacon. The solicitor, always ready with a reply, answered: "I have no proof of our relationship. You are doubtless mistaken. At any rate, the execution must take place, for only in that way can matters be set right. Hogg is not Bacon until it is dead." It is said the prisoner laughed in spite of himself.

THE WORLD'S WORK

The magazine which tells of the progress of the world through wonderful pictures and terse articles.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & COMPANY

N. B.—ANDREW CARNEGIE says: "I think THE WORLD'S WORK remarkable."

In mediaeval England fish pies were a very favorite dish at Christmas time, and lamprey pies were regarded as a special luxury. The cost of such delicacies was very great. In 1314 the sheriff of Gloucester provided forty-four for the royal table at a cost of £12 5s. 8d., a sum nearly equivalent to £100 at the present day. Those taken from the Severn were especially noted, and it became an annual custom for the city of Gloucester to send a lamprey pie to the king. There is a record of such complimentary presents being sent to Cromwell and to Lenthall, the speaker of the long parliament. Owing to the municipal corporation act Gloucester's annual custom ceased in 1836, but in 1893 the mayor revived it and sent a pie to Queen Victoria at his own expense. His successors have followed his example.—London Mail.

"Lady" and "Woman."

As to the rather subtle question of "gentleman," "lady," "man" and "woman," there is a difference (writes a correspondent) between the sexes. A duke must always be a man, unless he be, for the purpose of the conversation, a "gentleman," with great emphasis of voice. Without emphasis every man of gentleman's rank is a "man" always and in every social circumstance. But with women it is entirely a matter of the adjective. Without an adjective a woman is a "lady." Who ever asked, on hearing that a friend was to marry, "Who is the woman?" Nor do we say that we met a woman at dinner who told us so-and-so. But introduce the adjective and the "lady" is at once a pretty woman, a well dressed woman, rather a dull woman.—London Chronicle.

THE GARDEN KEYBOARD

Spinach should be sown early.

Sow artichokes for next year's crop.

Sow early carrots as soon as the ground can be worked.

Start the early cabbage at once in pans or boxes in the house, in the cold frame or in the open ground.

If young blackberry plants are to be dug up it should be done before the buds start.

For a very early crop sprout the seed potatoes and plant on rich soil which has never shown signs of blight or scab.

Peas will stand transplanting. Therefore they can be rushed along by sprouting the seed in a box of moist sand in a warm cellar and planting out the little seedlings.

The making of a good and spacious lawn is a very practical consideration. In home grounds the central feature is the house. To scatter trees and bushes over the area defeats the fundamental purpose of the place—the purpose to make every part of the grounds lead up to the home and to accentuate its homelikeness. Keep the center of the place open. Plant the borders. Avoid all disconnected, cheap, patchy and curious effects.

Cankerworms begin to climb the trees as soon as the ground thaws, and if you rely upon bands to keep them down these must be put early on the trees.

MR. CULLINAN'S RETIREMENT.

The withdrawal of the Hon. P. W. Cullinan from the Supreme Court contest, in the interest of party harmony, was a generous act and reflects credit on Mr. Cullinan's sense of honor. By retiring he placed party fealty above self, and Republicans will not soon forget the sacrifice he has made.

Had Mr. Cullinan continued in the race he would have probably secured the delegates, but the strife would have been bitter and the animosities created would have had a most injurious effect—a condition which might have caused the Republican party in this county sorrow and indignation for years to come.

MAYOR BROOKER is giving Fulton a clean, business-like administration, such as was promised previous to his election. He has solved every problem presented in a straightforward and fearless manner, and no detail however unimportant in our civic affairs has been overlooked or slighted.

JAPAN is not desirous of a prolongation of the war, but is not yet ready to accept any terms of peace which Russia feels like imposing. Before peace can be established the Russian government will have to concede points to Japan which that nation might deem vital and essential.

CHEVALIER MARCONI, who has recently returned to this country, accompanied by his bride, states that he has perfected a magnetic detector, on the principle of the Wheatstone recorder, which will record 100 words a minute. DR. YAMEL KIN, the first Chinese woman to take a degree in medicine in the United States, delivered a lecture in New York before the League for Political Education, in which she stated that it was a mistake to imagine that the morality of the west was better than that of the east. She had spent many years in this country and had seen both sides of life. She asserted that innocent women and helpless children were protected in China and man was compelled to bear the consequences of his own actions.

Wedding bells were merrily ringing at the Clark House last Tuesday evening about 6 o'clock; the management was unexpectedly called upon to furnish suitable apartments for two couples desirous of being married without delay. Of course they were accommodated. The grooms were young men of shrewd business tact, taking no chances in procuring the services of a local minister, but brought instead a divine of their own to tie the knot. Shortly after the ceremony, the bridal couples, with the pastor were conducted to the dining room, where a reserved table, decorated with a large bouquet of carnations, with the compliments of The Clark, were spread with the wedding supper. The grooms were Charles and Garfield Gridley of Syracuse and Pennellville. We regret we were unable to obtain the names of the brides. The happy couples left on Wednesday morning with sincere congratulations and best wishes for their future prosperity.

Extremes in Clothing Meet

ECONOMY and LUXURY

FOR the satisfactory and economical outfitting of men we offer certain inducements which never fail to be appreciated by those who understand them.

One of these inducements is originality in style, fabrics and every other essential of a gentleman's attire—not the originality that trespasses in the slightest upon GOOD TASTE or Correct style, but that which rather illustrates and emphasizes both.

There was a time when the chief distinction to ready-to-wear clothing was its economy—No man who was indifferent to cost would have been induced to stray from the influence of the custom tailor—'tis different now and we have no hesitancy in addressing ourselves to men who want the best—irrespective of price—for we have Suits in Better Style than nine out of ten custom tailors can conceive the equal in workmanship—the peer in fit—the third to a half in price.

That the cost of this clothing is so much less than than the best custom tailor's is only an incident—created through the talent and energy of the 3,000 skilled tailors concentrated in the shops of SCHLOSS BROS. & CO. of Baltimore and New York, the Great Clothes Makers. These are craftsmen worthy of their craft and if you are as particular about your clothes as they are in the making of them you will always wear such clothes as bear the Schloss label, a sure sign of the best made. No fashion plate can surpass the style embodied in our Spring Suit Models, and no matter what build of men, the stout chubby sort or the tall slender, we can fit them.

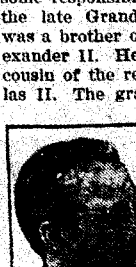
The Mystery of Health.

Whenever any one is released from jail or penitentiary after a long sentence we read that while he was in liquor or downright bad health when he entered he comes out as hearty as a fiddle. Yet almost without exception jails and penitentiaries are insanitary, sunless places, with no facilities for precautions usually taken by those who wish to get or keep healthy. The mystery lies in two words—regularity and diet. The first is perhaps the more important. Clocklike regularity; everything done on the second and on the same second every day; a recognition of the fact that the body is a machine. Then, as a supplement to this, a simple diet—plain, not too varied and enough to eat, but not too much.—Saturday Evening Post.

Folk Who Are In the Limelight Of Publicity

THE battle of Mukden has added new laurels to those already won by that great Japanese soldier, Baron Gentaro Kodama, lieutenant general and Marquis Oyama's chief of staff. The battles won in Manchuria were but the execution of his plans. He began scheming out the Manchurian campaign almost ten years ago, soon after the Chino-Japanese war. Time and again his assistant, Major General Fukushima, who has ridden all over Manchuria on horseback, has drawn charts for him showing every mountain and road, every stream and town and hamlet, and it is said that Kodama laid out the main features of the plan of battle against the Russians about three years ago while assistant minister of war. He has since been minister of war and at the outbreak of hostilities was assistant chief of the general staff. Under his direction the Japanese officers and military students who attended the school of the general staff at Tokyo played the game of war invented by the Germans and known as kriegspiel, and Manchuria was always the scene of action and the Russians the enemy. Kodama, now fifty-two years of age, is bronzed by exposure, and his mustache and goatee are almost white, while the top of his head is bald. He is very short and weighs less than 120 pounds, has been wounded several times and has lost the use of one arm. An English correspondent who interviewed him at Liaoyang found him just emerging from a hot bath. He was in a kimono and slippers; but, sliding up into a leather covered chair, he dropped the slippers, and from beneath the kimono the bare toes of the great little man were to be seen. He talked with a merriment and disregard of formalities that would have shocked a stickler for the dignity of gold lace and epaulets.

GENERAL KODAMA.



One dollar a word is pretty good pay for a short story. That is what Rowland Thomas of Peabody, Mass., received for his story which won the $5,000 prize in the Collier's Weekly short story competition. There were three prizes at stake in the contest. He won the first with a story whose scene of action is the Philippines and whose title is "Fagan." It is a tale of an untamable savage life; the story of a robust negro who became a soldier in the Philippines, who deserted and reverted to a sort of savage state and was at last killed by head hunters in whose country he sought refuge.

ROWLAND THOMAS

Mr. Thomas was born at Castine, Me., in 1879 and is the son of the Rev. Lewis J. Thomas, a Congregational minister. Young Thomas graduated from Harvard, summa cum laude, in 1901, and at once went to the Philippines, where he devoted himself to gathering material for writing. He traveled extensively in the archipelago and spent two years there studying the condition of the natives and of the American troops. Since his return home he has been engaged in writing for various newspapers and magazines.

All boys like to earn a few pennies now and then, but Mark Twain tells of a very unusual way in which he once made the princely sum of $5 as a small boy. At one school he attended there was a strict rule against marking the desks. Any boy discovered mutilating a desk must be punished, being offered his choice between paying $5 or taking a public whipping. The irresistible combination of a shiny topped desk and a brand new knife in his pocket was too much for Mark. He succumbed to the temptation and whittled away until the teacher caught him. The punishment was set for the following day, and Mark's father, thinking it a pity the lad should be publicly whipped, gave him a lecture and a five dollar bill. Five dollars looked pretty big to Mark. He thought it over carefully, and when the time came, with the bill in his pocket, went up and took the whipping.

In the reorganization of the Russian forces in Manchuria for future operations against the Japanese the Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaevitch is likely to have a prominent part and to fill some responsible post. He is a son of the late Grand Duke Nicholas, who was a brother of the late Emperor Alexander II. He is therefore a second cousin of the reigning emperor, Nicholas II. The grand duke was born in 1856 and served with credit in the Russo-Turkish war. His training has been that of a cavalry expert, and his position in the army is that of inspector general of cavalry. He is honorary colonel of regiments in Austria and Prussia, is credited with intelligence and good sense and is famous for his horsemanship. On a visit to England some years ago he astonished the sportsmen with whom he hunted by his hard riding. Although a pretender to the French throne, he does not actively push his claim, and he never meddles with politics. When M. Felix Faure visited the czar during his term as president Grand Duke Nicholas rode past him at a review and saluted him, although, of course, he regarded him as an usurper of his own place. President Faure returned the salute, and they afterward became good friends, the czar introducing them to each other.

GRAND DUKE NICHOLAS.

Charles H. Treat, recently appointed United States treasurer at New York by President Roosevelt, is a native of Maine and began life as an associate of his father in the Cuban sugar industry. He afterward located in Delaware and became a manufacturer. He was prominent in the politics of Delaware at that time. On his removal to New York he became a member of the Republican club and was chairman of its campaign committee. In 1898 the late President McKinley appointed him collector of internal revenue for the Second district of New York. His recent appointment came as a promotion from that position.

C. H. TREAT.

When the "economy bug," as it was called, was infesting every congressional committee which had to do with supply bills, a man who was smoking a cigar went into the room of the senate committee on appropriations. Senator Spooner was there.

"Is smoking permitted here?" the man asked.

"Everything is permitted here," Senator Spooner replied, "except appropriations."

Lord Charles Beresford, who is a frequent visitor in America, is a great admirer of American institutions and has come to feel very much at home among Americans. "Condor Charlie," as he is known for his heroic exploits in the Mediterranean, has fought for the interests of the British navy both in the admiralty and on the floor of the house of commons. He is not afraid either of an enemy's guns or of the powers that be in the British empire and always speaks out what he thinks. Many stories are told illustrating his breezy personality. Lord Charles was once breakfasting in a small country hotel and accidentally upset a cup of coffee over the clean white tablecloth, which the good lady of the house had dug up from her most sacred linen cupboard for the benefit of the British admiral. Unfortunately the upsetting of the steaming coffee also upset the lady's temper, and she soundly rated Lord Charles for his want of tact. "It's a good thing for you," she said, "that the coffee has not left much stain on my cloth." "It was too weak, madam," replied the admiral. "You'll have to stain your coffee before you can expect to stain your table linen. Use more beans, ma'am; use more beans."

LORD CHARLES BERESFORD.

The admiral tells this story on the king's physician, Sir Frederick Treves; Lord Charles fell ill, and Sir Frederick was called to his bedside. "Tell me," said Sir Frederick, "your symptoms."

The patient said he had a pain here, an ache there and a stiffness somewhere else. To each of these announcements the physician exclaimed, chuckling delightedly: "Excellent! Charming! Splendid!"

When Lord Charles had concluded the enumeration of his troubles Sir Frederick slapped him heartily upon the back and cried:

"My dear fellow, let me congratulate you. You have the rarest disease of the century. You have, you lucky dog, a disease that heretofore was thought to be extinct."

General Stephen D. Lee of Mississippi, the distinguished ex-Confederate officer who is now commander in chief of the United Confederate Veterans, recently issued a proclamation praising congress for passing the measure relating to the return of Confederate battleflags and commending President Roosevelt for his prompt signature of the bill. He says this action is fresh evidence that no sectional lines now exist in the United States and that all within the bounds of the republic are Americans devoted to one common flag. General Lee is one of the last surviving officers of the Confederate army who held the rank of lieutenant general. He succeeded the late General Gordon as head of the United Confederate Veterans. General Lee was born at Charleston, S. C., in 1833 and educated at West Point. A captain at the beginning of the war, he commanded the artillery of Beauregard's army at the bombardment of Fort Sumter. He rose to the rank of lieutenant general by exceptionally distinguished service and was in command of the department of the Mississippi during the latter years of the war. Since its close he has labored to dispel sectional bitterness and bring about a reunited country. He was for some years president of the Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical college and has taken much interest in the work of historical societies.

GENERAL S. D. LEE.

WHO WANTS A DIAMOND?

The Cullinan, Largest in the World and Worth $45,000,000.

The question is what to do with the Cullinan diamond, the largest and most valuable in the world. How much is it worth and who wants to buy it? Estimates of its value vary widely and there is debate whether it should be cut into small stones and sold to many people or be preserved as one jewel.

CULLINAN DIAMOND AND FRED WELLS, ITS DISCOVERER, HOLDING IT IN HIS HAND.

This largest of known gems was found quite by accident on the Premier diamond mine near Pretoria, in the Transvaal, on the 26th of last January. The mine manager, Mr. Fred Wells, while on a tour of inspection saw the rays of the setting sun reflected from a projecting corner of the diamond high up on the mine face. He climbed up the bank in much excitement and, taking his pocketknife, succeeded after considerable effort in digging it out.

In the rough the diamond weighs 3,024 carats, or about one and three-quarter pounds. In general dimensions it is 4 by 2½ inches and is "water white" and without any defects such as to impair its value. Large as the Cullinan diamond is, examination shows it to be only a fragment of a much larger stone, and the question naturally arises whether other fragments of the original stone may not be found lying around in the mine near by. Of course diligent search will be made for them, but geologists say that the fragments might be far apart. Diamonds were formed at great depths from carbon dissolved in the molten basic igneous rock. Enormous pressure and high temperature caused the carbon to crystallize in the form of a diamond. When the eruptions occurred the diamonds were often carried to the surface with great force, and this caused fragments to be broken off in transit. Such fragments might lie together or some might be buried far beneath the surface.

Valuations as high as $45,000,000 have been placed upon the Cullinan diamond. There is a sentiment against cutting it up into many smaller stones, and the proposition has been made that a popular subscription be started to raise a sum with which to buy it and present it to King Edward VII. of England to be kept in the collection of crown jewels. It is said if this should be done the Premier company might be willing to let it go at the mere nominal price of $2,500,000.

SENATOR ELECT WARNER.

Career of the Successor of Senator Francis M. Cockrell.

The recent senatorial contest in Missouri, which resulted in the choice of Major William Warner as the successor of Francis Marion Cockrell in the senate chamber at Washington, was watched with much interest throughout the country. For the first time in the history of the state the Republicans possessed a majority in the legislature, but owing to the aspirations of rival candidates a deadlock was created, which continued until the eve of adjournment. Then amid exciting scenes Major Warner was chosen for the coveted seat. He has long been prominent in the Republican party in Missouri. Born in 1860 and educated at Lawrence university in Wisconsin and the University of Michigan, he entered the Union army at the outbreak of the civil war and served with distinction. At its close he took up the practice of law in Kansas City, Mo. He has been city attorney and mayor of Kansas City, circuit attorney, United States district attorney, member of congress and an unsuccessful candidate for governor.

MAJOR WILLIAM WARNER.

Major Warner is not a man of wealth, and he says he spent just $29.80 in connection with his election as senator. He is popular in the G. A. R., of which he has been commander, and President Roosevelt offered him the position of pension commissioner, but he declined it.

SHE WON A GRAND DUKE.

Story of Former Baroness Pistolkoff, Now Wife of Czar's Uncle.

The Grand Duke Paul of Russia, who is the youngest of the czar's uncles and a brother of the late Grand Duke Sergius, has had a number of affairs of the heart, some of which have not been much to his credit. His present wife is one of the most beautiful women of St. Petersburg, but she was married to another man when she won the heart of the grand duke. As the spouse of the Baron Pistolkoff she was a favorite with the czarina. Her husband was a colonel in the army and principal aide-de-camp of the Grand Duke Vladimir.

The Grand Duke Paul's attentions to her caused comment, and one evening she appeared at a court ball wearing a necklace bequeathed to Paul by his mother, the late Czarina Marie. This incident caused both the fair baroness and the grand duke to incur the disfavor of the czar and led the Baron Pistolkoff to obtain a divorce from his wife. Some time afterward at Leghorn she married the Grand Duke Paul. He was banished from Russia and deprived of title and estates. Not long ago the decree of exile was rescinded, and on the death of Sergius the czar decided to forgive him and permit him to resume his rank and once more take possession of his estates.

Cupid and the Recruits.

"Cupid is one of the best recruiting officers that Uncle Sam has," confided one of the sergeants attached to the recruiting headquarters. "Back of nearly every enlistment there is a woman in the case. Lovers' quarrels chase a lot of fine lads into the service. Your romantic youth gravitates to the recruiting officer after a serious break with his sweetheart as naturally as a duck takes to water. It seems to him the most fitting way in which to sacrifice himself when love's young dream is apparently dispelled. Way down in his heart he nursed the idea of making his erstwhile inamorata sad, and it's the army or navy, with the possibility of death in battle, for him. Again, other first class material is recruited by the desire of young fellows to sport a uniform before their girls. In such cases Cupid does his recruiting through vanity. But in both ways he manages to fill up big gaps in the ranks of Uncle Sam's fighters."—Philadelphia Record.

Earning Their "Dot."

The manager of a large dressmaking establishment in New York says: "I suppose that the most un-American immigrants we get in this country are not the Chinese or the Poles or the Hungarians, but the Parisian seamstresses, milliners and lingerie workers. These women come here to save the price of a 'dot' out of our high American wages. It takes from two to five years to do that. In all that time they never mix with Americans, never visit a theater, never make the first attempt to learn the language. Some of them go to the French church on Sundays; otherwise they never leave their rooms except to shop. This prenuptial period in New York is just a time dropped out of their lives. They talk of nothing day after day but what they'll do when they get back to Paris and begin to live again."

It is a wonderful discovery, this new medicine, that swiftly removes Stone, Red and White Gravel, from the Kidneys and Bladder, avoiding the intense suffering produced by these foreign bodies, and often rendering a dangerous surgical operation unnecessary. Cal-cura Solvent does this. The greatest work of Cal-cura Solvent, is that it prevents the formation of stone and gravel by dissolving uric acid and phosphatic sediments, thus purifying the blood and correcting all those uric acid conditions of the stomach which are responsible for the formation of uric acid or gout poisoning and rheumatism. Dr. David Kennedy said: "I consider Cal-cura Solvent the crowning achievement of my life. It will not disappoint."

Too Busy to Work.

The luxury of physical inactivity appears to be fully appreciated in the south, writes Mr. Bradford Torrey in "Nature's Invitation," and as an illustration he tells of a walk he took near Miami, Fla., and of a conversation he overheard:

I was walking away from the city at a rather brisk pace one morning when I passed a lonesome shanty. A white man sat upon the rude piazza, and another man and a boy stood near.

"Are you going to work today?" asked the boy of the occupant of the piazza.

"No," was the answer, quick and pithy.

"Why not?"

"I ain't got time."

I do not expect to hear the philosophy of indolence more succintly and pointedly stated if I live a thousand years.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, the Best and Most Popular.

"Mothers buy it for croupy children, railroad men buy it for severe coughs and elderly people buy it for la grippe," say Moore Bros., Eldon, Iowa. "We sell more of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy than any other kind. It seems to have taken the lead over several other good brands." There is no question but what this medicine is the best that can be procured for coughs and colds, whether it be a child or an adult that is afflicted. It always cures and cures quickly. Sold by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Teaching Him to Mind.

For a Weak Digestion.

No medicine can replace food, but Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets will help you to digest your food. Thousands have been benefitted by their use. They only cost a quarter. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Needed Encouragement.

"I remember," said an old naval officer, "hearing of an incident on board of a ship which was commanded by a religious captain who would not allow the mate to use profane language or violence toward the crew and where the work and discipline were carried on more by moral suasion than by force, with the result that things went very slowly. The men did not jump to the braces or ropes, and the general work of the ship was slow.

"While at anchor one day in the harbor of Rio two of the sailors, leaning over the rail, were watching work going on on board of another ship anthored close to them, where the opposite system prevailed. The air on that ship was lurid with the language of the mate, and the men were treated with a violence that was far from necessary, but the work went on quickly. The sails were furled and the yards braced in a smart and seamanlike manner. As they listened to the sulphurous orders of the mate one of the sailors on the good ship remarked sententiously to the other:

"'Bill, d'ye see now what it is we want aboard here? We want a little encouragement.'"

You will find poetry nowhere unless you bring some with you.—Joubert

A Tired and True Friend.

One Minute Cough Cure contains not an atom of any harmful drug, and it has been curing Coughs, Colds, Croup and Whooping Cough so long that it has proven itself a tired and true friend to many who use it. Mrs. Gertrude E. Fenner, Marion, Ind., says: "Coughing and straining so weakened me that I run down in weight from 148 to 92 pounds. After trying a number of remedies to no avail, One Minute Cough Cure entirely cured me." Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

The Saw of the Mosquito.

The bill of the mosquito is a complex institution. It has a blunt fork at the head and is apparently grooved. Working through the groove and projecting from the angle of the fork is a lance of perfect form sharpened with a fine bevel. Beside it the most perfect lance looks like a hand saw. On either side of the lance two saws are arranged, with the points fine and sharp and the teeth well defined and keen. The backs of these saws play against the lance. When the mosquito alights, with its peculiar hum, it thrusts its keen lance and then enlarges the aperture with the two saws, which play beside the lance until the forked bill with its capillary arrangement for pumping the blood can be inserted. The sawing process is what grates upon the nerves of the victim and causes him to strike wildly at the sawyer.

Forget About Your Stomach.

If your digestion is bad the vital organs of your body are not fed and nourished as they should be. They grow weak and invite disease. Kodol Dyspepia Cure digests what you eat, cures indigestion and all stomach troubles. You forget you have a stomach from the very day you begin taking it. This is because it gets a rest—recuperates and gradually grows so strong and healthy that it troubles you no more. E. L. Babcock, Amherst, Minn., says: "I have takvn a great many remedies for indigestion but have found nothing equal to Kodol Dyspepsia Cure" Kodol digests what you eat, cures Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach, Belching, Heartburn and all Stomach Troubles. Its preparation is the result of many years of research. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Hymns In Theaters.

In South Wales when the people are pleased with the work of an actor they have a custom of showing their appreciation by singing hymns at the close of the performance. Henry Irving was once playing at Swansea when he was surprised to hear the audience burst into "Lead, Kindly Light," when he appeared before the curtain in response to a call. At the close of the engagement the great actor was deeply touched by the singing of "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," rendered in the most reverent manner.

Avoid all drying inhalants and use that which cleanses and heals the membrane. Ely's Cream Balm is such a remedy and cures catarrh easily and pleasantly. Cold in the head vanishes quickly. Price 50 cents at druggists or by mail.

Catarrh caused difficulty in speaking and to a great extent loss of hearing. By the use of Ely's Cream Balm dropping of mucous has ceased, voice and hearing have greatly improved.—J. W. Davidson, Att'y at Law, Monmouth, Ill.

Logical Reasoning.

The law imposing a tax on bachelors had gone into effect.

One morning a little baldheaded man appeared before the tax commissioners.

"I've just married my fourth wife," he said. "I'm entitled to a bounty, ain't I?"—Chicago Tribune.

Economy of Heat and Health.

The average humidity in artificially heated houses is about 30 degrees; the average temperature, 70 to 74 degrees. It has been found by conclusive tests that a room with a humidity of 60 degrees and a temperature of 65 degrees seems warmer and more comfortable than a room of 72 degrees of heat and humidity of 30 degrees. Dr. Henry M. Smith says that if a room at 68 degrees is not warm enough for any healthy person it is because the humidity is too low, and water should be evaporated to bring the moisture up to the right degree. In other words, water instead of coal should be used to make rooms comfortable when the temperature has reached 68 degrees. As water is cheaper than coal, the rule should become a popular one.—Chicago Tribune.

A Clever Retort.

Sir William Fraser records a clever retort made by Lord Adolphus Fitz Clarence when in France in attendance on the English queen. He met the Prince de Joinville, who, as a French admiral, professed to be patriotically bellicose toward England in particular. He said to Lord Adolphus in a friendly manner: "You, my lord, and I are seamen. I have had but one dream in life—to command a smart French frigate and to lay my own alongside of an English ship of the same strength for twenty minutes." Lord Adolphus replied in a perfect spirit of courtesy, "I think, sir, that ten would be enough."

Sawing Brass.

Almost all hack saws or jig saws will cut soft brass very well. The teeth must be very fine and some judgment employed in their use. The jig saws are extremely light, not larger than a small wire, and must be used in a spring frame that will hold them tight so that they will not double up. Jewelers' saws will be needed for spring brass.

What's the Use of Food

unless it is turned into good, red blood that rushes through the arteries and carries life and strength to every part of you? Many hearty eaters are thin, pale, languid and weak because they are in the clutches of nervous dyspepsia. With the friendly help of Vernal Iron Nerve Food Tablets you get rid of this and all other forms of nerve-weakness. You tackle your day's work with snap and energy and when bed-time comes you sink into the sweet, dreamless sleep of a tired school boy. Urinary troubles, sluggish circulation and fretfulness are put to flight by this glorious tonic. This is joyful news for all who are thin-blooded, melancholy and unequal to the duties of life. Surely they will not neglect this means of obtaining full and lasting strength of mind and body. All druggists sell the tablets at 50 cents a box, or by mail. Sample free. Meanings of Some Old Words.

Many words once written with dignified motive now cause us to read passages of standard literature with a guffaw. The word "imp" was once a term of high honor, but how now sounds the line from Spenser, "Ye sacred imps that on Parnasso dwell?" Over many a grave of the old French nobles may be read the line, "Here lies that noble imp." A sacred poem, written by Gascoigne three centuries ago, begins a stately address to the posterity of Abraham with the words, "O Abraham's brats," brat being then a word of stately meaning. Opening an old dictionary at random one day, my eye happened to fall on the word "tragedy." A note explained that it comes from a Greek word which means "a goat song," because the oldest tragedies were exhibited when a goat was sacrificed or given as a prize to the best actor. The word "infant" means literally "not speaking." Have you a pug dog? Did you ever think his face looks like that of a monkey? The monkey he most resembles is the pug monkey, which gets its name from Pug or Puck, as Shakespeare writes, the sprite of mischief.—London Queen.

The Better Way

The tissues of the throat are inflamed and irritated; you cough, and there is more irritation—more coughing. You take a cough mixture and it eases the irritation—for a while. You take and it cures the cold. That's what is necessary. It soothes the throat because it reduces the irritation; cures the cold because it drives out the inflammation; builds up the weakened tissues because it nourishes them back to their natural strength. That's how Scott's Emulsion deals with a sore throat, a cough, a cold, or bronchitis.

FARM AND GARDEN

BEETS FOR THE GARDEN.

Some Good Varieties For Market or For Home Use.

Many varieties of beets exist, but the majority of people are interested only in knowing what are the best two or three, and the question is constantly being propounded what are the best for general use. On the New Hampshire experiment station's list of vegetables for best success in market gardening or in the home garden the opinion is expressed that Eclipse is the leading variety for early bunching or later cutting for market. It is globular in shape, color dark red, quality excellent, being fine grained and sweet. It is very early, maturing only a few days later than the Egyptian.

ECLIPSE. BASTIAN EARLY. CROSBY'S EGYPTIAN. ARLINGTON FAVORITE.

Crosby's Egyptian is recommended for its value as extremely early, but not for fall or winter use. It is of flattened shape, desirable for bunching or cutting when small, but almost worthless for market when matured owing to its irregular appearance. Color deep red, tops small and dark.

Arlington Favorite is reported not equal to the Eclipse or Egyptian for early bunching or cutting, but valuable for later use owing to the fact that it does not become overgrown as quickly as most varieties. Size medium, nearly round, color very dark red, quality good, tops large.

Bastian is an early, light colored turnip beet.

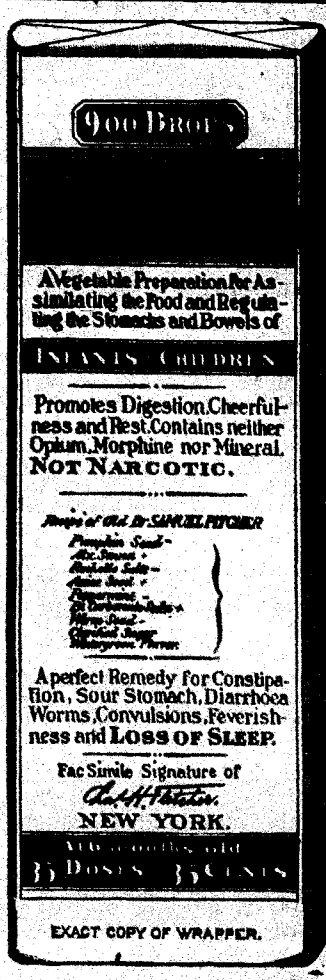
THE SEEDLESS APPLE.

Practical Comments on This Much Talked of "Novelty."

At the farmers' institute at Port Clinton, O., a great peach and apple growing region, attention was called to the new seedless, coreless apple, and it was briefly discussed as to possibilities and probabilities of success. Referring to this discussion, Dr. W. I. Chamberlain makes the following comments in Ohio Farmer: The success of the navel or seedless orange has been immense. Is there as good a chance, as great probability of success, for the seedless apple?

Its Chances.

First, the need does not seem to us to be so great. The thirty or forty large seeds all through the old fashioned orange were a nuisance in eating "from the hand" or in slicing for dessert. The core of the apple gives little trouble in either case. The corer removes it for baking, with little waste of time or apple, and leaves a place for sugar. In quartering or slicing, after paring, for pies or sauce, the core gives little trouble.



Second, the opportunity does not seem to me so good and the difficulties greater. Of oranges there are but two varieties known to the average consumer—the navel and the seedy. Of apples there are twenty or more varieties, each well known to consumers (and hundreds less known), each with its peculiar, distinctive and inviting color, shape and especially flavor. To make the seedless apple as successful as the seedless orange we should need to produce a seedless Belmont, Jonathan, Fameuse, Peck's Pleasant, Seek No Further, Bellefower, Grimes' Golden, etc., each with its delicious and peculiar flavor; also varieties for all the seasons of the year.

Children, Weeds, Cows and Hens.

A Tennessee woman says in an exchange: The children are given ground and seeds and are encouraged to watch things grow. They can be of help in pulling weeds good for pigs and cows. Purslane is the only weed I let grow in my garden, for the only "good weed is a dead weed," but I always like to pull big bunches of purslane for my cows and chickens, both of which like it. As the cow, the hens and the garden are three money makers each should help the other.

Silage For Dairy Cows.

Facts reported by the Ohio experiment station are thought to justify the conclusion that silage can be made to take the place of a considerable portion of the grain ration for dairy cows. It is believed that by growing more of the feeds rich in protein—clover, alfalfa, soy beans, cowpeas, field peas, vetches—and ensiloing them or feeding them as hay it will be possible to further reduce the amount of grain fed.

Getting Rich Slowly.

Ordinarily a great fortune is built up like a stone wall—a stone at a time. The young man who declines to lay the first stone because it comes so far short of a wall will never make progress in financial masonry. An immense proportion of the people of this country live up to their incomes, laying aside nothing for the traditional rainy day. Because they cannot save $1,000 in a bunch they save nothing. The greatest financial kings of the world have not been above taking care of the pennies even. The great financial institutions look after even the fractions of pennies.—Troy Press.

Venus.

Venus is both a morning and evening star because she always accompanies the sun, never receding from him beyond certain limits, while the rest of the planets, with the exception of Mercury, are seen at all possible angular distances from the sun. When Venus is to the west of the sun she rises before him and is a morning star, but when she is to the east of the sun she rises after him and is an evening star.

About Rheumatism.

There are few diseases that inflict more torture than rheumatism, and here is probably no disease for which such a varied and useless lot of remedies have been suggested. To say that it can be cured is, therefore, a bold statement to make, but Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which enjoys an extensive sale, has met with great success in the treatment of this disease. One application of Pain Balm will relieve the pain and hundreds of sufferers have testified to permanent cures by its use. Why suffer when Pain Balm affords such quick relief and costs but a trifle? FASHION FOIBLES

Excellent Display of Seasonable Silks, Dry Goods and Millinery By Fulton Merchants.

J. C. O'Brien.

Things new and things beautiful attracted the attention on all sides at the J. C. O'Brien store during the three formal opening days last week. The spacious store had blossomed as a flower under the hands of Mr. W. A. Smith, the clever decorator, and blossom-laden apple boughs, many colored butterflies, Easter lilies and vari-colored electric light bulbs, coupled with the most magnificent stock of Spring and Summer fabrics ever exhibited in this city, formed a scene of rare beauty. There is a finish about Mr. Smith's work that is very noticeable and he was showered with compliments and congratulations upon the skill displayed in the planning and executing of his original ideas.

There was an apparent charm about the dress goods and silk department which could only be assuaged by the purchase of gown, waist or shirt-waist suit pattern and the sales in these fabrics were large. The Covert coats and tourist coats, too, moved off like the traditional "hot cakes," the low prices proving a sale lever. The wash goods were exceedingly sheer and pretty as were the laces and dress trimmings.

Rugs, carpets and curtains were not forgotten, and the display was almost metropolitan in its completeness. Any taste or price limit could be suited here.

The Spring hat is a vital question at this time with all ages of the fair sex, and Miss O'Hare and Miss Lubey had fashioned exquisite models for inspection. The show rooms looked most inviting; the hats received a large meed of praise and at no previous opening time have so many been sold.

Mrs. Walker was too busy to make a display of dresses, but she cordially greeted her friends and was pleased to show them her countless new patterns, fresh from the centers of fashion.

During the day piano music was furnished and Buell's full orchestra supplied music during the evenings.

W. H. Patterson.

Mr. Patterson did not attempt elaborate store decorations for his Spring and Summer opening of dry goods, but Mr. Burr Sheldon had displayed good taste in the arranging of the materials in stock and the interior presented a pleasing appearance. Perhaps the most popular sections of this store were the suit and millinery departments, and both were fully stocked with the most desirable offerings of the season. Covert coats from $5 to $25; silk coats from $10 to $30; suits from $10 to $35, and an immense line of silk dresses and shirt-waist suits at $12, found numerous purchasers. Mrs. R. B. Hubbard and her assistants had kept well their reputation for fashionable head wear, and the hats were artistic and wearable. In fact, there seemed to be two would-be purchasers for each trimmed hat. The wash goods were shown in quantity and were desirable. Among the newest things shown for waists was exquisite ombria messaline in shaded grey, green and pink and blue and brown. Each department carried a good assortment and each proved popular. Music was furnished each evening by the Mandolin club, which proved enjoyable, as their selections were all well rendered.

F. P. Connell & Co.

This store did not have a formal opening last week, but the store had been tastefully decorated by Mr. Holden Pratt, and the shelves and counters were full of tempting dry goods for the Spring and Summer season. The price concessions proved very popular too, and the sales were large. Many new and fashionable weaves in dress goods were shown; silks for waists and shirt waist suits and the wash goods were never so pretty. In trimmings this store had a choice variety. The new store is one of the most popular trading centers in the city.

M. Katz & Co.

This large department store makes a constantly increasing demand for popularity and the Spring opening last week was no exception to this rule.

Mr. Maurice Hiller had carried out a well planned scheme for decorating, and Spring on her throne surrounded by the seasons, greeted each guest of the store. Music throughout the days and evenings was enjoyed. The dress goods, silks and wash goods were in profusion, as were laces and trimmings. Suits, coats and shirt waist suits were noted in numbers, and in the millinery department hundreds of hats were exhibited. A larger line of furniture than ever before was displayed this year and the prices were amazingly low. Carpets, rugs and mattings too, were in large assortment. M. Katz & Co., announce, that they are better prepared than ever before to serve you swiftly, satisfactorily and well.

M. E. Young.

Miss VanSlyke had prepared beautiful hats for the Spring opening last week and the prettily decorated store was a fitting setting for them. The sales were larger than ever before, proving that the popular cord had been more skillfully struck. All the leading styles were shown in pleasing combinations and the prospects are that even a larger patronage than before will be bestowed upon Miss Young.

Morton & Shattuck.

The First street shoe store of Morton & Shattuck has undergone complete renovation and many improvements this Spring. The shelf room has been increased by half, as has also the floor space and four new settees have been added for the purpose of expediting the service to their many customers. A new steel ceiling and side walls have been placed, adding greatly to the beauty of the interior, and a plate glass show case will soon adorn the room. The popular firm are now better prepared than ever to please all. Their new goods are being unpacked daily.

Pathfinder Lodge Banquet.

The fourth annual banquet of Pathfinder Lodge, No. 373, Knights of Pythias, will occur at The Clark this Wednesday evening at 9:30 o'clock An informal reception will be held at the club rooms at 8:30 o'clock. The remains were brought to this city from Oswego on Saturday afternoon and funeral services were conducted in the State Street M. E. Church by the Rev. S. D. Robinson. Burial was made in Mount Adnah Cemetery, where Post Schenck took charge of the remains, as the deceased had been one of its oldest members.

Fulton Newsboys Entertained.

The newsboys' supper given at Grace Chapel on Thursday evening, proved most enjoyable to the fifty boys who assembled at Conley Bros. news room at 7:30 o'clock and under the leadership of Mr. Maurice Conley marched to the scene of the feast. Riley Harding, George Harding, Lawrence Ranger, William Hackett, John Barker, Lee Keeler and Don Williams acted as waiters and served the oysters, ham sandwiches, beans, cake, ice cream, coffee, etc., in a satisfactory manner. At the conclusion Miss Lelia Church and Mr. Parker VanBuren entertained the boys with musical and literary selections and a social hour followed. A quantity of provisions were left over and given the Rev. Charles Atwood for distribution to the needy. The newsboys return hearty thanks to all who contributed toward the evening's pleasure, especially to the "Y's" for their large share in providing for the evening's entertainment.

False Alarms of Fire.

Two false alarms of fire on Thursday night and one on Friday night called out the paid department for the first times. Some slight difficulty with the indicator of the alarm system, caused the bell to do rather confusing stunts in the way of numbers not on the card on Thursday night, but the boxes were soon located by the firemen as was also the knowledge ascertained that the call was a hoax. The alarms were sent in from Division street hose house and from Buffalo and Sixth streets on Thursday and from West Broadway and Second streets on Friday night. It will be an exceedingly expensive and uncomfortable piece of business for the law breakers if they are caught sending in a false alarm and considerable vigilence will be exercised from this day, for the purpose of apprehending the miscreants.

The song recital to be given at the home of Attorney and Mrs. G. S. Piper on Thursday evening, April 27, for the benefit of Zion church building fund, will be of rare enjoyment to lovers of good music. Mr. Morton Adkins, the baritone soloist is known to many Fultonians, but for the benefit of those who are unacquainted with the work of the young artist, we will quote from the Syracuse Herald of Dec. 10: "Mr. Adkins has an exceptionally fine baritone voice of remarkable purity and roundness, commanding a repose and naturalness of method that few singers might excel. There was breadth and charm in his style of interpretation and he made his work all the more enjoyable by his sincerity and directness of purpose. In operatic arias, and in oratorio work, Mr. Adkins shows himself to be possessed of a great deal temperament and a fine sense of the dramatic.

PLEASANT REMINISCENCES.

EDITOR FULTON TIMES: Sixty years ago Gilberts Mills was a stirring little village. A grist mill, saw mill, two tanneries, blacksmith shop, boot and shoe shop and a store. The grist mill, owned by Hiram Gilbert was patronized by farmers for many miles around; did a large business for a custom mill. The saw mill owned by Mr. Gilbert did a good business. The yard every Winter was piled high with hemlock and pine logs. The other branches of industry did good work. The place was noted for its select schools, well attended by young ladies and gentlemen from the surrounding country. The select schools were taught by L. L. Pierce, O. O. Strumway, Nathan Rowe, Truman Crandall, E. A. Fish and Dr. Coy, all good teachers. The public schools were looked after by one man in each township, called school inspector. My first school, the Winter of 1846 and 1847 was at Pennellville. The inspector asked me to spell a few words, a few questions in arithmetic, then wrote me a certificate. My next was in the Ellis District, Frederick VanWagenen, trustee; Dr. Avery of Phoenix, inspector. He asked me a few questions for an hour, then told me to go to teaching and in a few days he would visit the school, which he did, and wrote me a certificate. My next was at Gilberts Mills; sixty-eight pupils on roll; James Gregg, inspector. He gave more time to inspection, visited the schools and was interested that the schools should be improved. A little before this Dr. Carroll came to the village nd is a l most, if not the oldest resident there at this time. We had no teachers' institutes as you have now. Each teacher stood alone. At this time Falley Seminary, d rected by Prof. Griffon, was very popular, having seven-hundred students. But how changed, fifteen years ago, my last visit to Fulton, t e great building was used as a dwelling This week I was introduced to a man who lives at Homer, N. Y. He said he was a student at Fulton many years ago at the Seminary when Prof. Griffon was there. He asked me if I had ever heard the story of the pig. I told him that I had. He went on to relate it Some students caught a pig, stuffed and tied its mouth so it could make no noise and in the night placed it in the Professor's chair. When Professor came in the morning and saw it, he was so indignant he threw it out the third story window.

ECONOMY and LUXURY

FOR the satisfactory and economical outfitting of men we offer certain inducements which never fail to be appreciated by those who understand them.

One of these inducements is originality in style, fabrics and every other essential of a gentleman's attire—not the originality that trespasses in the slightest upon GOOD TASTE or Correct style, but that which rather illustrates and emphasizes both.

There was a time when the chief distinction to ready-to-wear clothing was its economy—No man who was indifferent to cost would have been induced to stray from the influence of the custom tailor—'tis different now and we have no hesitancy in addressing ourselves to men who want the best—irrespective of price—for we have Suits in Better Style than nine out of ten custom tailors can conceive the equal in workmanship—the peer in fit—the third to a half in price.

That the cost of this clothing is so much less than than the best custom tailor's is only an incident—created through the talent and energy of the 3,000 skilled tailors concentrated in the shops of SCHLOSS BROS. & CO. of Baltimore and New York, the Great Clothes Makers. These are craftsmen worthy of their craft and if you are as particular about your clothes as they are in the making of them—you will always wear such clothes as bear the Schloss label, a sure sign of the best made. No fashion plate can surpass the style embodied in our Spring Suit Models, and no matter what build of men, the stout chubby sort or the tall slender, we can fit them.

TAXATION OF MORTGAGES

Measures Passed to Avoid Return to a Direct Tax Levy.

A Mortgage Tax Which Cannot Be Dodged by the Great Corporations.

One-half of 1 Per Cent Instead of Local Rate After July 1.

The two revenue bills, one laying a tax of one-half of 1 per cent on mortgages when filed for record and the other a tax of $2 on every 100 shares of stock sold on the exchanges in this state, have just been passed by the legislature.

They will provide revenue enough, together with what is now raised indirectly, the leaders believe, to meet all expenses of the state government, including the proposed liberal appropriations for good roads, and make any return to direct taxation unnecessary.

Without these or some other revenue measures it would have been necessary to resort to a direct tax or cut down the appropriations for the care of the public institutions, the schools, grade crossings and the highway improvement beyond the amount absolutely needed for these branches of state work.

The mortgage tax bill proposes to tax such mortgages as are filed on and after July 1 next at the rate of one-half of 1 per cent in place of the local tax to which they are now subject. One-half of the tax will go to the state treasury and one-half to the locality where the property is situated.

Mortgages now running or which may be given between now and July 1 are not subject to the new tax unless the holders choose to take the five mill tax instead of the local rate now imposed. The new tax must be paid before the mortgage is recorded so there will be no possibility of the rich nonresident dodging the tax, as is so largely done now.

This rather radical change is considered a just one by those who have made taxation a study. The town where the land lies and where the money must be produced to pay the mortgage will have the benefit of the tax.

Advantages Claimed.

Some of the advantages which the friends of mortgage taxation claim for the proposed measure are:

That by doing away with a direct levy any inequalities and dissatisfaction arising from the work of equalization will be avoided.

That all mortgages will be put on the same basis as regards taxation, and the great bulk which now avoid local taxation will pay their fair share.

That the tax on the few which are now assessed and which can least afford to pay it will be decreased.

That it will be impossible for wealthy persons having properties in the great cities to dodge all taxes on the plea of nonresidence.

That when once the rate is uniformly fixed this class of investments will be more eagerly sought and at a rate of interest which will be less than under existing laws where there is a liability to high taxes for local purposes.

A few years ago a legislative committee, headed by Hon. Nevada N. Stranahan, then a senator from Oswego county and now collector of the port of New York, thoroughly investigated the subject of taxation. This committee came to the conclusion that a mortgage tax of the same rate as the present bill would be of advantage over the present system to property whose owners desired to mortgage it, and the committee expressed the belief that such a mortgage tax would be a relief rather than a burden. The committee's report said:

Many Mortgages Now Escape.

"This tax has much to recommend it. This species of property is now subject to the local tax rate in every locality in the state except where held by savings banks, life insurance companies, building and loan associations and nonresidents. The local rate, we believe, will average at least 2 per cent in the state and probably more. In the city of New York the rate this year is 2.48 and in some localities 3 per cent.

"It has been shown to our satisfaction that mortgage indebtedness, while legally taxable, is not actually productive of much revenue. Because of the exemptions enjoyed by particular classes of mortgagees and the apparent inability of assessors to find this particular class of property and for other reasons, the fact is that owners of mortgage debts as a class do not contribute to the public revenue. In the few cases in which property in mortgages goes upon the assessment roll the local rates operate with great and undue severity. Sometimes more than 50 per cent of the income has to be turned over as a tax. These cases of supreme hardship are usually those where a trustee or executor is taxed for the property of widows and orphans, a body of our citizens who are least able to support themselves and often dependent upon a small income for their subsistence. The property is usually brought to light in the surrogate's court and is easily placed upon the roll That these classes of persons should be assessed at the rate of 50 per cent of their income while the great mass of mortgages escape is a glaring injustice and one in which the appeal for relief at the hands of the legislature, as shown by the correspondence of the committee, must not be denied or delayed."

A Measure of Relief.

It was the opinion of this committee that a law taxing mortgages as high as one-half of 1 per cent and bringing all mortgages under the law's operation would be of advantage. Under such a law the lender would know precisely what return he could count on, and he would neither be subjected to an exorbitant rate, if taxed at all, nor have any inducement to try to dodge the assessor. This would give to lenders a feeling of certainty which would make them more eager for investments of this nature and result in actually decreasing the rate which the borrower would be called on to pay. The committee reported its belief that a five mill rate for state purposes, accompanied by exemption for local purposes, "would not operate as an additional burden upon real estate, but will improve the condition of the borrowers." This conclusion was based on the testimony of prominent business men who had appeared before the committee. The report said:

"It was stated to us by Mr. J. Harsen Rhoades, the president of the State Association of Savings Banks, that if mortgages were entirely exempted from taxation the result would be a reduction of the average rate of interest paid by borrowers of at least one-half of 1 per cent. Mr. Rhoades was confirmed in this opinion by the presidents of four of the chief savings banks in New York city. This means that, although mortgages generally escape taxation, the inability to tax under the existing law affects the interest rate to the extent of at least one-half of 1 per cent. If, then, we exempt mortgages from all taxation except to the extent of one-half of 1 per cent, there will naturally be no substantial change in the average rate of interest."

In Other States.

Mr. Frank Bailey, the vice president of the Title Guarantee Trust company of New York city, testified that the result of laying a single tax of 4 mills on mortgages in Pennsylvania was that in new loans two rates were indicated, one for interest and one for the four mill tax, but that the two combined were less than the interest alone had been before the change in the methods of taxation.

Senator's Hill's Views.

Senator Henry W. Hill of Buffalo gives a summary of the matter in an interview with the editor of the Buffalo News. He notes that the barge canal must be paid for and the half of the mortgage tax that goes to the state will be needed. Senator Hill also pertinently remarks:

As matters now stand a comparatively poor man owning a cottage and a small piece of ground is taxed for all the property will stand for local purposes, but a man around the corner may have hundreds of thousands of dollars invested in bonds and mortgages and not pay one dollar of taxation.

At present there is a state tax on mortgages which, combined with the local taxes on mortgages, amounts to 2½ to 3 per cent. But how does this tax work out? Many owners of mortgages escape taxation on them altogether, while other mortgages are heavily taxed. When a man dies his executors or the trustees of his estate have to make a sworn statement as to the property at its full value. In this case there is no escape. The assessors immediately get after this property and tax it to its full value, with the result that the income on 5 per cent securities is squarely cut in two at a time when the widow and the fatherless need this money for their support the most.

This bill substitutes for a burdensome tax which is actually paid by a few a slight tax which must be paid by all mortgage owners.

Another effect of the new mortgage tax will be the release for investment in mortgages of many millions of dollars which are now being withheld because of this present mortgage tax. One man told me that his concern had $30,000,000 which would be invested just as soon as the law passed.

So, you see, the statements that the new tax will increase the burdens of either mortgagor or mortgagee are not warranted in fact. The only ones whose burdens will be increased will be those who have been unfairly escaping taxation. And, besides, the revenues from this new tax will go to lighten the burdens of real estate from local taxation.

The official statement is made that two-thirds of all the property of this country is in personal property, including corporation franchises, bonds, mortgages, etc., while only one-third is in real estate. But the official statement also says that this one-third represented by real estate pays nine-tenths of all the taxes. This should give the opponents of taxation of personal property something to think about.

COMPELLED TO CHANGE THEIR TUNE.

For years the free traders opposed the protective tariff on the ground that under such a system it was hopeless to expect any large sales abroad of American products. Now that the experience has shown the falsity of their arguments and the United States has a larger export trade than any other country they are compelled by the irrefutable logic of facts to change their tune somewhat. But nothing will make them honest enough to frankly admit that they were mistaken in both premises and conclusions.—Milford (Mass.) Journal.

The Tammany members of the legislature, who will be shouting for the dear "people" next fall, voted solidly against the bill to tax Wall street brokers $2 a hundred shares on sales on the Stock Exchange.

THE NEW MORTGAGE TAX.

Argument In Favor of It by a Utican Will Benefit Investors.

The passage of the mortgage tax bill has started a general discussion of the subject all over the state. There are wide differences of opinion as to its effects. Some who have made a study of the question believe it will be of advantage to both investor and borrower. The following statement of its effect is the subject of editorial indorsement by the Utica Herald-Dispatch:

To the Editor of the Utica Herald-Dispatch:

The opponents of the mortgage tax bill, which has been passed by the senate and assembly, in urging that it places a double tax upon real estate and a consequent greater burden upon investors have lost sight of the fact that the new bill is a decided reduction of the tax as it now exists. The present law (laws of 1896, chapter 908) provides that mortgages shall be taxed as personal property and consequently are taxed at the prevailing rate. Hence an investor loaning on realty in the city of Utica under present conditions is forced to pay a tax of 2¼ per cent on his mortgage, which for individual investors is practically prohibitive. The bill now under consideration provides for a tax on one-half of 1 per cent on all mortgages, a clear saving to the individual investor in the city of Utica of 1¾ per cent. The present law is not generally enforced throughout the state. Utica, however, being one of the few cities where a systematic search of the records by the assessors for the purpose is made. The investor is forced to place his money elsewhere or to evade the law by nominally assigning the mortgage to some party residing either outside of the state or in some part of the state where the present law is not enforced. The fact that a law can be thus evaded is not, however, an argument for its continuance on the statute books.

Under the existing law mortgages given to charitable and loan associations and savings banks are exempt from the tax, while the new law makes no discrimination in that regard, the effect of the present condition being that a person desiring to mortgage his real estate in Utica must of necessity borrow from those who are exempt, as the individual cannot afford to loan at 6 per cent and pay the tax of 2¼ per cent. And the opposition to the bill comes largely from those who are at present exempt, but under the new law will be taxed at the reduced rate, or from districts where the present law has not been enforced.

The present tax falls heavily on a class who can ill afford the increased burden entailed by it. Widows and orphans who have as their whole inheritance bonds and mortgages and who are not willing or desirous of evading the law of the state are forced to see their income cut in half.

The pending measure, if it becomes a law, will relieve individual investors of a large burden, will render it possible for them to loan money in the city of Utica and will result in a more equitable distribution of this taxation and will undoubtedly prove of great advantage to Utica real estate.

CHESTER W. DAVIS.

Utica, April 6.

SIMPLE TAX FACTS.

[New York World, April 7.]

Governor Higgins' statement on the tax bills emphasizes what the World repeatedly has said—that the present tax laws are an incentive to dishonesty and provocative of perjury. As the governor says, "Any effort to compel the tax dodger to contribute his just share to the cost of government deserves approval and not censure."

Under the present law mortgages are taxed at three times the rate of the mortgage tax bill, and if the tax is not paid it is either because the assessors do not do their duty or because the mortgage owner "is willing to commit perjury." The mortgage tax bill removes the temptation to fraud and perjury and substitutes a fixed low tax rate for a variable high tax rate.

The World coincides with Governor Higgins that the ultimate result of a mortgage tax will be "to reduce rather than increase the rate of interest by releasing vast sums now deposited in savings banks or invested outside the state in order to escape the heavy burden of general taxation."

The stock transfer tax is simply the best devised method of taxing a wealth which has escaped the burdens of taxation. The market value of the Stock Exchange seats, more than $90,000,000, has been free from taxation, and this tax proposes to remove that exemption. The governor very properly says that a system which exempts the wealthier classes from taxation "breeds a righteous discontent among the people."

As the real facts become known and the cloud of misstatements regarding these two bills disappears the public approval of them will increase and the public generally will recognize that they are both proper measures to distribute the burdens of taxation and to put a stop to the perjury and evasion by which the wealthier classes of the community have been enabled to shift the burdens of taxation to the poorer classes.

HOW IS THIS FOR HIGH?

In February we increased our output of manufactured goods the most of any month in our history, this, be it recalled, under the Dingley tariff. We also sold an unusually large amount of agricultural exports, although our sales of manufactures exceeded those of our farm products. In February we sold over $100,000,000 worth of goods to foreign customers, an increase of $14,000,000 over February of a year ago. We sold less cotton and wheat, but our other exports have increased. In February we sent abroad $12,560,000 of gold that we had no use for in this country. The past eight months we have sent out $43,000,000 of our gold to the foreigner, and we have a lot yet to spare. The American financial position was never so strong as it is today. We lend money to Europe as well as pay for all we want from foreign nations, and still we have plenty to spare at home. Would tariff tinkering improve the status?—Lewiston Journal.

HANDSOME NEW APPLE.

Fruit a Good Shipper and Trees Good Bearers.

Handsome one naturally expects a Kentucky product to be. So it is no surprise that the name Fall Beauty has been selected as appropriate for a new apple which has originated in the Blue Grass country. The apple, according to the description of H. Garman of the state experiment station, is not only a beauty, but has other good qualities. The apples are sometimes deeper on one side than the other, but generally quite symmetrical. The weight seems to average a fraction above half a pound. Other points are:

Color, deep purplish red, sometimes completely so, again only or largely on the exposed side; striped, with deeper purple and pale waxen yellow; when fully ripe, with ocher yellow, the stripes contracting and extending into the cavity at the calyx end; marked with evident ocher yellow dots, these becoming especially conspicuous where the purplish red is deepest; region about the calyx end sometimes extensively waxen yellow.

Flesh white at first, becoming creamy when thoroughly ripe; flavor not striking, but pleasant; subacid; skin rather tough, thus calculated to protect it from insect and fungous injury and to render it a good shipper. Ripe Sept. 22.

Mr. Garman says: While it is adapted only for fall use, it ripens at a time when few apples as good are in a condition for the table, the early ones being long gone and the late ones not yet sufficiently ripe. It keeps very well, becoming finally in October mellow and agreeable as an eating apple. It cooks well before this final change, making good sauce, but proving especially acceptable when baked.

SECTION OF FALL BEAUTY APPLE.

Unfortunately the cut cannot show the richness of the coloring of the Fall Beauty.

According to Mr. Piper, the propagator, the growth and foliage of his trees resemble those of the Rome Beauty. In bearing, he says, it is as regular as Rome Beauty or Bep Davis.

Not a Commercial Quantity.

The Uruguay potato (Solanum commersonii), which has attained considerable newspaper notoriety of late, has been given some attention in this office on account of the disease resistant qualities claimed for it. We have succeeded in obtaining a few tubers for our own trials and have also become acquainted with the results of several experiments made last year with seed introduced by our office of seed and plant introduction and distribution. Our representatives abroad have also acquired some information regarding it. We have, however, not been able to secure any confirmation of its meritorious qualities. It is a wild variety with very small tubers. Those that we have had in this office have rarely exceeded one inch in diameter. They are said to be bitter. The plant is very stoloniferous (putting forth suckers), and it is doubtful whether it is adapted to our climate. The question of disease resistance also remains unproved. Further use will be made of the species in our plant breeding work. We will state to your readers that the plant is not a commercial quantity in any sense of the word; that, aside from its possible value to plant breeders, it possesses no interest whatever to any farmer in this country; that there is little or no seed on the market; that seed is difficult to obtain from foreign sources, and that the department has no seed for distribution and no printed information concerning it.—W. A. Orton, Department of Agriculture, in Orange Judd Farmer.

HANGING OF A WOMAN.

Sentimental Considerations and Others Should Render Her Immune.

If it is right to hang a man, then the hanging of a woman is, in the opinion of many, equally justifiable. John Stuart Mill has said in "The Subjection of Women," I believe, that women are the natural equals of men, that they reason in the same way as men do, that they are capable of achieving the same results and that there is no valid argument against their having the same chances and opportunities. Statutes in many jurisdictions now place women on the same, or nearly the same, basis with men, and the weak assertion of Lord Macaulay (I think it was he) that women are incapable of competing with men and that it is folly to confer on them equal rights, privileges and opportunities with men has been abundantly disproved by the achievements of women themselves.

The logical conclusion, in the judgment of many, is that women guilty of murder should suffer the penalty imposed upon men for the commission of that crime. In this we do not agree. In the first place, women are often subject to impulses, more physical perhaps than mental, of which men know nothing and for which men are not always inclined to make due allowance. Women endure suffering of a physical nature of which men know nothing, and often the eccentricities of women are the product of their physical condition and, from the standpoint of justice and right, entirely excusable. Again, women play a part in the generation and perpetuation of the human species which men do not always appreciate. The writer is unmarried, but he understands that it is a common saying among women that if the wife should give birth to the first child and the husband to the second there would never be but three children in a family. I wish Theodore Roosevelt could have some practical experience in this matter.

Finally, despite the present equality of the sexes before the law, there are considerations of something more than sentiment involved. There is no reason in the world why women should receive the same punishment as is given to men for the commission of murder. Few women take the lives of others, and, however horrible the circumstances of any particular case, regard for womanhood and for the exacting cares and responsibilities of the sex should secure for woman exemption from the punishment which the law places upon man.

On Tuesday night a false alarm was sent in from box 54, calling out the entire department. This is the fourth false alarm within a week and it is proving rather expensive to the city. It is safe to predict that those engaged in the doubtful fun are irresponsible parties and the sooner they are apprehended, the better it will be for law abiding and the tax paying residents.

GARDEN SNAPSHOTS

Cauliflower seed is best sown toward the last of April, as it is essential to quality that there should be no check in the growth from seed sowing to harvest.

Evergreens may be set several weeks later than deciduous trees, but the sooner even these are planted the better.

The germination of parsley seed is hastened by soaking it in warm water before sowing. It is usually very slow to come up.

If you have a bit of damp soil try water cress, sowing early and at intervals for a succession.

It is a good plan to sow peppers in a window box for plants to set out later.

The beauty of an evergreen depends upon its being furnished with branches to the ground, and, as a general practice, it is opposed to the correct notion of evergreen beauty to prune away the lower branches and display the naked trunk.

To grow celery by the latest method Bailey advises that plenty of manure and moisture are required. Sow the seed in light, rich soil in the house, hotbed, cold frame or open ground. Transplant the plants once before setting them permanently.

PRESIDENT MAKING AND PARTY MANAGEMENT

Interesting Chapter of Unwritten Political History Given by Senator Chauncey M. Depew at the Dinner at Albany, Saturday Evening, April 1 1905, in Celebration of the Seventy-fifth Anniversary of the Founding of the Albany Evening Journal.

SUBJECT: "THURLOW WEED AS I KNEW HIM."

Gentlemen—The rounding out of three-quarters of a century of the life of an American daily political newspaper is an event of unusual interest. When that paper has been the state organ of the party for so long a period it is still more interesting. The flood of recollections of men, of measures, of party triumphs and defeats, of the lights and shadows of political life, is overwhelming. They would fill a volume. I have been upon the political staff of the Albany Evening Journal as a lay reader since 1858 and have been more or less intimate with every man who has risen above the surface in either party sufficiently high for State recognition during that period. Most of those acquaintances were formed in the heat and fury of political contests. The friendships have all lived; the enmities have long since passed away.

My first meeting with Mr. Weed at the Republican State Convention in 1858 is a picture as clear upon my mind as if it occurred yesterday. I was a law student in the office of Judge Nelson in Peekskill, but had stumped the State for three months when just out of college in the Fremont campaign of 1856. Without my knowledge, for I was not at the district convention, I was elected a delegate to the State convention from the Third District of Westchester. With the bumptiousness, audacity and ignorance which seems wisdom at the time to the very young man in politics I immediately formed a plan to reform the party and redeem the State from that machine rule which at all times is the first antagonist against which the young enthusiast breaks his lance and gets unhorsed. A few young men immediately commenced a correspondence to nominate a distinguished Judge as against the candidate of the organization. Those two veteran organization men who were my colleagues, Judge Robertson and General Husted, were more amused than terrified with my boyish zeal.

We arrived at the Hotel in Syracuse where the convention was to be held about 2 o'clock at night. As the crowd from the train surged in to register Mr. Weed stood by the counter and called most of them by name. I never had seen him before. He towered above the crowd with his great height, but there was something in the look which he fixed upon the man whom he spoke to or to whom he was introduced which created a lasting impression. Judge Robertson presented me. A simple word of greeting and "good night," the same as hundreds of others received, was mine, and I went to bed. The next day, passing through the corridor of the hotel, Mr. Weed called my name, asked me if I was admitted to the bar and with whom I was studying. I said, "Judge William Nelson." He remarked, "I remember Judge Nelson very well on account of his activity in Westchester in the campaign of 1828." That he should have remembered me after the introduction with so many others the night before and recall the activities of Judge Nelson after thirty years impressed me deeply. There is no compliment so delicate as for a man of distinction to remember by name a casual acquaintance. It was the strength of Henry Clay. More than all other things it made the popularity of James G. Blaine, and the power to always remember names and faces was one of the elements of strength of Mr. Weed. He said, with a deference more in manner than speech, which was most flattering to a green and bumptious boy, "Mr. Depew, who is your choice for governor?" I said, "The Judge," and then tried to impress the veteran by volubly describing the necessity for the talent and character possessed by my candidate in the gubernatorial office. "An admirable man, and all that you say is true," said Mr. Weed, "but he has no popular strength and can contribute nothing to the campaign. Senator Edwin D. Morgan, on the other hand, will have the merchants of New York behind him." And then very confidentially, "You know, my dear friend, that with the national and city administrations against us and the tremendous assessment there will be for the campaign funds from office-holders on the other side we cannot hope to succeed unless our ammunition wagon is supplied. I can assure you Mr. Morgan will supply it." That was my first introduction to practical politics.

Governor Morgan was nominated. I canvassed every County in the State, and while under the direction of the State Committee in the speaking tour I met Mr. Weed several times. His qualities as a party leader had been displayed in the skillful management of the convention which nominated the ticket, but he showed greater elements of leadership in his intimate knowledge of not only the counties, but the towns of the State, of the men who could do effective work in them, the methods by which our vote could be got out and the doubtful ones brought to our side. His suggestions were as accurate as prophecy as to the line of argument which would be effective in one place, while a different appeal would accomplish the result in another. It was mainly from that experience that I adopted an elastic form of political address instead of the cast iron written argument common then, as now, with political speakers.

In the winter of 1862 I was a member of the Legislature, with Henry J. Raymond as Speaker. There began early in the session between the Speaker and myself a close friendship. Mr. Weed and Mr. Raymond were very intimate, and through Mr. Raymond I saw a great deal of our leader that winter. His directing mind was behind every measure of importance and the inspiration of every caucus, and yet he never appeared openly as directing, commanding or advising. He was not the masterful leader who will brook no opposition and is offended by advice. He invited the leaders of both houses to his residence and was a most courteous listener to their programme and plans. The talking was mostly done by others, but every now and then a suggestion so wise would drop from Mr. Weed that it was accepted as a solution. He did not display the slightest pride in having his view adopted, but won by rather deprecating its acceptance except after the fullest discussion and mature deliberation. In fact, he would often advise coming again the next day before it was done. The pride of the leaders of the Senate and Assembly was never injured. On the contrary, it was strengthened. The statesman at the capital in advocating and carrying out the programme which gave him fame in his district and possibly in the State, with the promise of future promotion, never gave the slightest credit to Mr. Weed, and in many instances his mind had been so deftly moved that he had not the slightest doubt of the divine inspiration in himself.

I was again elected to the Legislature and served in 1863. The House was a tie. Mr. Weed was exceedingly anxious to elect Governor Morgan United States Senator. The Senate was overwhelmingly Republican. As the law was then, the two Houses could not go into joint ballot until each had nominated. Now they are compelled to go into joint ballot by a certain date. It was the plan of the Democrats to prevent a nomination by the Assembly and thereby defeat the election of a United States Senator and have a chance of electing an Assembly the next year. I was the Republican candidate for Speaker. One of the Democratic members came to me and said that his ambition in life was to be Speaker, and if I would withdraw in his favor, thereby electing him by one majority, he would vote for a distinguished Democrat for Senator, and if the Republican members would also vote for the same Democrat the Assembly would make its nomination. Then under the law the joint convention would be compelled to meet, and, the Democrats having one majority in the House and Governor Morgan having a large majority in the Senate in the comparison of votes, the Governor would be elected. At the same time three leading Democrats, who knew of this, came to me and said that if I would not accept this proposition they would vote for me for Speaker. To be the youngest Speaker the Assembly ever had was a mighty temptation. I went to Mr. Weed. He said: "For yourself this is the opportunity of a lifetime. For the State and country it is a Republican United States Senator, and I advise making the Senator. You are young and can wait." I said, "Very well, Mr. Weed, I will then let the Speakership go." And Mr. Morgan was elected United States Senator. I was assured that night—and the more the champagne was opened the more vociferous and ardent was the assurance—that this sacrifice would never be forgotten, but that the highest honors of the State and country would come to me on account of this self immolation. At 12 o'clock they had me a Governor, at 2 o'clock Vice President and at 6 President of the United States. Politics, like business, is intensely selfish. The man who gets the persimmon is the one who has power and commands the promotions and not the patriotic gentleman who handles the pole and knocks it off the tree. Before the session was over the event and my relation to it were absolutely forgotten.

In the general overturning of organizations and interests on account of the War a new ticket came into the field next year, and I was elected Secretary of State. On taking up my residence in Albany I came into still closer relations with Mr. Weed and was a delegate to the National Convention in 1864 for the renomination of Mr. Lincoln. It was generally conceded that Mr. Lincoln's running mate should not be the Vice President, Mr. Hamlin, but a war Democrat. The sentiment of the country was for Daniel S. Dickinson of our State. Mr. Weed thought it should be Andrew Johnson of Tennessee to encourage the Union sentiment in the border States of the South. He saw no point in having a northern Democrat on the ticket, and he did not like Mr. Dickinson. After an interview with Mr. Weed, John Robertson and I went to Washington and had a conference with Secretary Seward. When we arrived at the convention it was nearly unanimous for Dickinson, but the choice was given to New York. The delegation met and debated from early evening until early morning. Judge Robertson and I enforced the argument which we had received from Mr. Weed and Mr. Seward. About daylight a vote was taken and Andrew Johnson selected for Vice President by one majority. It is safe to say that when the convention met Johnson had no votes except his own State of Tennessee. The event was epoch making. It illustrates by what little things the history of nations is changed. Mr. Weed had created a President of the United States out of the apparently impossible. When through the assassination of President Lincoln Johnson became President he never forgot his creator, and, while Mr. Weed could not restrain him in his swing around the circle and estrangement from his party, yet from the commencement of his administration to its close Mr. Weed had more influence with him than all others combined. It was through that influence that he kept Mr. Seward as Secretary of State, and it was Mr. Seward who saved the Administration from dissolution and disgrace. It was during this administration that Mr. Weed's room, No. 11, Astor House, became the Mecca of political pilgrimages. These pilgrims did not go to Washington, they did not invade the White House, but if admitted to Room 11 they regarded their salvation as certain.

When it was suspected that President Andrew Johnson intended to break with his party the Collectorship of New York had become vacant. Mr. Weed presented me for the place, backed up by both United States Senators, the entire Republican delegation from the State in Congress, the Governor and all the State officers, the Republican members of the Legislature, the State Committee and the Chairmen of the County Committees. It was intended as a supreme test of President Johnson's loyalty to the party. The President summoned Mr. Weed, Governor Morgan and Mr. Raymond to the White House on Sunday morning. He sent for the Secretary of the Treasury and said, "Gentlemen, such a party presentation as this I have never seen before, and Mr. Depew's name will be sent to the Senate tomorrow morning." Then, turning to Senator Morgan, he said: "By the way, Senator, suppose you be the messenger, come for the message and take it to the Senate yourself." The proceeding was unprecedented, but there were no precedents for Johnson. The Collectorship at that time was politically the most powerful office in the United States. There was no Civil Service, and its appointees came not only from the State of New York, but from all over the nation. The net income, owing to the enormous importations and the confiscations from smuggling in the years following the Civil War, was in the neighborhood of $200,000 a year. A distinguished citizen and rival was another applicant. He had a conference with the President on Monday morning and persuaded him to wait until he saw how the New York Senators voted on the veto which he was then contemplating to the Civil Rights Bill. He waited. The New York Senators voted to override the veto. Happily for me and my future, the appointment went to sleep and slumbers yet in the innocuous desuetude of the Treasury Department, and I was compelled to continue the strenuous and laborious life, which promotes health, happiness and longevity.

I often saw Mr. Weed in the evening of his days at his house in Twelfth Street, New York. His was a beautiful old age. The eminent men of all parties passing through New York invariably called upon him. From his past experience and intimate knowledge of affairs he could always draw lessons of inestimable value to the statesmen of the hour. When the party was rushing to defeat in the madness for a third term for General Grant, which the General really did not want, Mr. Weed saw clearly that the traditions against the third term were too strong to be overcome, and by voice and pen, though then in the eighties, he did more than any one else to prevent the Republican party testing that question. If time permitted I could tell an interesting story of how another President of the United States was made and the course of politics in our own State and in the country changed. The campaign against a third term was vital to the fortunes of the Albany Evening Journal. This newspaper had staked its existence, under the advice of Mr. Weed, against it, though the whole power of the State organization was on the other side. It was on the slate to establish in Albany a rival party organ.

I remember when Mr. Weed came up at the Fiftieth Anniversary of the founding of the Journal. I doubt if any creator of a great newspaper has continued in active association with it for so long a period and been privileged to participate in its Fiftieth Anniversary. I remember that there passed in review as living realities the mighty men of New York who had been its leaders in both parties since Mr. Weed, as a boy, threw up his rimless hat in wild joy for the election of Governor Tompkins, over seventy years before. The portraits of these statesmen are in the executive chamber and the State Library, and their fame is part of the best history of our State.

Vigor and heredity are happily illustrated here tonight by the presence as our host of the grandson of the founder, who worthily maintains as controller and editor of the Journal the traditions of its origin.

Horace Greeley, James Gordon Bennett, Henry J. Raymond and Thurlow Weed formed the quartet of journalists who were the fathers of modern political and independent newspapers. Alone among them Mr. Weed was also a political leader, with the rarest sagacity and ripest judgment. He held power uninterruptedly for thirty years because, unlike most leaders, he never distrusted youth. Wherever a young man rose above the surface, upon the platform as a political speaker, at the bar as a lawyer, as a writer in the newspapers, Mr. Weed's eye was instantly upon him, and the local leaders were instructed to give him his chance. Differing from other leaders, he preferred to accomplish his purposes not by holding office himself, but by keeping in office the man best fitted for that mission. He early selected William H. Seward as the most brilliant, intellectual and moral force to fight slavery. Mr. Seward had not the first qualification of a politician, but this unequaled politician kept him in office until the end was accomplished, jealously guarded his political interests, warded off the attacks of his political enemies and failed only by the narrowest margin to make him President of the United States. Mr. Weed's talents as an editor were not in long editorials, but to compress in short ones characterizations of political opponents, laudations of political friends, the principles of his own party and the evils of the declarations of the other party. These were so quotable that they furnished matter and texts for the press of the State and often of the country.

Gentlemen, I feel that the time is inadequate to speak more in detail of Thurlow Weed as I knew him, but happily he is so enshrined in the best history of our State and the most patriotic part of our country's story that his name and fame will be familiar to every generation. In commemorating him here tonight we wish continued and ever increasing prosperity and power to the great paper which he founded seventy-five years ago.

Totally Depraved.

The late Professor Edwards A. Park of Andover was not only of great reputation as a theologian and orator, but was also noted for the scimiter-like keenness of his wit and his readiness at repartee.

On one occasion he preached in the seminary chapel a sermon on total depravity. The inexorable logic of his mind compelled him to push the doctrine to its remotest consequences and to postulate total depravity not only of men and women, but also of infants and children.

In the congregation was a young mother, the wife of a theological student, who, attracted by the great reputation of Professor Park, had come to the service, bringing her three-month-old child with her. Her indignation was naturally aroused at what she heard, and when the service was completed she pushed forward to the pulpit. The baby had slept all through the service and was now laughing and cooing.

"Professor Park," said the young mother as she held up the smiling little one in her arms, "you don't mean to tell me, do you, that this dear little baby is totally depraved?"

"Certainly, madam," said the professor in his most courtly manner. "It looks like an unusually bright child."—Boston Herald.

The Folly of Fear.

A great deal of talent is lost to the world for the want of a little courage. Every day sends to their graves a number of obscure men who have only remained in obscurity because their timidity has prevented them from making a first effort, and who, if they could have been induced to begin, would in all probability have gone great lengths in the career of fame. The fact is that to do anything in this world worth doing we must not stand back shivering and thinking of the cold and danger, but jump in and scramble through as well as we can.

It will not do to be perpetually calculating risks and adjusting nice chances. It did very well before the flood, when a man could consult his friends upon an intended publication for 150 years and then live to see its success afterward. But at present a man waits and doubts and consults his brother and his particular friends till one day he finds he is sixty years of age. Then he has lost so much time in consulting his first cousins and particular friends that he has no more time to follow their advice.—Sidney Smith.

The Sign of Equality.

Mathematical readers will be interested in the following quotations from Robert Recorde, who introduced the sign of equality into algebra. Recorde was the first English author who wrote on the subject of algebra. In his treatise called "Whetstone of Witte," published about 1557, he says: "To avoide the tediouse repetition of these words, is equalle to. I will sette, as I doe often in worke use, a paire of parallel lines of one lengthe, thus: —, because no 2 thynges can be more equalle."

How Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. David Kennedy's LATEST Medicine, Cured Mr. Eldridge,

Let the people speak for themselves. Praise from those who have been cured is praise indeed, and comment would be a waste of words. This is what Mr. H. W. Eldridge, of Cherry Valley, N. Y., writes to the manufacturers of Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. Kennedy's new medicine, Dr. Kennedy Row, Bondout, N. Y.

"Gentlemen:—I should like to tell you, in a few words, of the good Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. Kennedy's latest medicine, has accomplished in my case, one of kidney trouble.

"Before I took Cal-cura Solvent my urine was of a brick dust color, and there was always a sediment of a reddish tinge. I procured a bottle and gave it a thorough trial. I noticed that the sediment gradually disappeared and the urine became clear. I have not taken any of the Cal-cura Solvent for a long time, and no sediment has appeared." All druggists, $1.00.

A Stern Justice.

A Virginia justice of the peace undertook to temper justice with mercy in the case of a boy charged with "petty larceny." The evidence against him was conclusive, but he was very young It was his first offense, and there were some extenuating circumstances. The old farmer justice decided to give the boy a stern lecture. He looked at the culprit severely through his spectacles and began his lecture. "Young man," said he, "this is awful—this is right down awful—and I want to warn you I want to say"— Here the old man's sense of justice suddenly conflicted with the pity awakened by the sight of the lad, who stood trembling before him. He cleared his throat twice, and then, half in mercy and half in indignation at his own weakness, he cried "Clear out o' my sight, you onery scamp!" and sat down to mop his forehead amid the merriment of the court room.

Blueberries In Maine.

"The blueberry owner divides his land into three portions. Each year he picks the berries from one portion, burns another portion and allows the third to rest. The first year after the land is burned over the blueberry bushes sprout and grow a few inches. The second year they yield a full crop of berries. The third season the crop is small and of little value, and the bushes reach a condition in which they can be burned most effectively.

"Under this system of blueberry culture the land does not 'run out' with constant use for the same crop," says a circular of the department of agriculture.

Historic Relic.

The Chesapeake, famous for her encounter with the British ship Shannon in the war of 1812, is still in existence. When she was captured by the British she was taken to England by her captor, Sir Philip Broke, and some years later her timbers were sold. The purchaser was a miller in Wiskham, and when he pulled down his old mill he built a new one from the timbers of the Chesapeake. Many of these timbers still have the marks of the Shannon's grapeshot, and in some places the shots are still to be seen deeply imbedded in the pitch pine. If the builder who made this ship knew that its timbers were being used in a mill which is making money for a subject of Great Britain there is no doubt that he would at least try to rise from his grave to right the wrong.

A Great Painter's Beginning.

Sir Thomas Lawrence was one of the great portrait painters in England. His parents were poor, his father being a country innkeeper. One day Lord Shaftesbury's father and mother stopped at the inn, having their younger son, the future lord, with them. In conversation the innkeeper spoke of the genius of his boy in drawing and wished them to test it by a picture of their son. They assented, thinking to gratify a father's pride, but not looking for any evidence of superior talent. The boy came in modestly, with chalk and paper, and in a few minutes had drawn a picture of their son on which the parents looked with wonder. They recognized the genius and the promise of future greatness and bestowed the young artist, giving him the help needed to develop his wonderful gift.

His Enviable Estate.

"When I come into my landed estate I'll bet nobody will put me out," said a philosopher after listening to a tale of woe by a friend who had recently lost his place in the country through the foreclosure of a mortgage.

"Why, I didn't know you owned any real estate."

"I don't now, but I am very positive of having some later on. It will be a very snug retreat, too—absolutely private, although in a populous neighborhood. There will be several other advantages too. It will be free from taxes, and I'll be exempt from jury duty."

"Isn't that fine! I congratulate you. Wish I could inherit something like that. Where is your place?"

"The grave."

The other man said nothing further about the injustice of foreclosing mortgages.—New York Herald.

LOGIC IN COLORADO.

The Ballot Granted to Women as a Right, Not as a Privilege.

A good deal of editorial nonsense is now appearing in certain eastern newspapers relative to woman suffrage and its supposed bearing on the Denver election frauds. In some unaccountable way these papers hold the women of Colorado responsible for the political corruption of the state and because such corruption exists now, just as it did before the privilege of voting was conferred upon them, conclude that woman suffrage has been proved a dismal failure.

The same argument was heard after the Bonynge-Shafroth contest, when it developed that some of the repeating in the lower wards of Denver was done by women of the half world. When this became known the hypercritical press announced that women repeaters elected Shafroth; hence female suffrage was a failure and women should not be permitted to vote. It does not seem to occur to people who take this view that it would be just as reasonable to urge the disfranchisement of all men because a relatively small number of them had registration lists and stuff ballot boxes at each election.

Another point overlooked by the critics of woman suffrage is that the voting privilege was not conferred upon women in the hope of purifying politics. The real reason why women have the franchise in Colorado is that they have a right to it. It belongs to them as properly as to man, for it is not likely to be denied that the average of intelligence is as high in one sex as in the other and there is no difference in the extent to which each is concerned in good or bad government. It is often said that women do not understand political and governmental affairs, but this is true only in states where they have never had occasion to apply themselves to the study of such questions. In Colorado and other states where women vote they have shown themselves quite capable of grappling with any problems that may arise.—Colorado Springs Gazette.

Only one dose a day is necessary. Write at once to the Vernal Remedy Company, Le Roy, N. Y., as they have so much confidence in this remedy that they will cheerfully send you free of charge a trial bottle of Vernal Palmettona (Palmetto Berry Wine(, so that you can quickly convince yourself of the wonderful results to be obtained from its use. Illegible Signatures.

"Among a lot of letters I received in answer to an advertisement," said a business man, "there was one that inclined me toward its writer, except that I couldn't read the signature. Every word in the body of the letter was clear, but the signature was illegible. I don't know how many people there are who write plainly enough until they come to write their own name and then write that blindly. I suppose it is more from force of habit than anything else, for they may be otherwise the most careful people in the world.

"Every man should write his signature with perfect distinctness, so that it can be read easily and without mistake by those unfamiliar with it, and also as a mark of his own care and exactness.

"One letter that I received, its body written, had its signature put on with a hand stamp. I didn't know just what to think of this, but it had at least the merit of perfect plainness."—Washington Post.

FIFTY CENTS

IN some conditions the gain from the use of Scott's Emulsion is very rapid. For this reason we put up a fifty-cent size, which is enough for an ordinary cough or cold or useful as a trial for babies and children. In other conditions the gain is slower—health cannot be built up in a day. In such cases Scott's Emulsion must be taken as nourishment; a food rather than a medicine. It's a food for tired and weak digestions.

WHITELAW REID'S CAREER.

Successor of Joseph Choate Eminent as Editor and Diplomat.

Whitelaw Reid, the successor of Joseph H. Choate as ambassador to England, has held many posts of honor, but perhaps none that has given him so much influence as his position as editor and chief owner of the New York Tribune. He recently resigned his editorial and managerial duties in order to devote his whole time to his work as a diplomat. Mr. Reid succeeded Horace Greeley as editor of the Tribune in 1872. He had for four years previous been a member of the editorial staff. In the thirty-four years that he was editor of the Tribune he was honored with a nomination for vice president, with appointment as minister to France, as special ambassador at Queen Victoria's jubilee and King Edward's coronation and as a member of the peace commission which negotiated the treaty of Paris between Spain and the United States in 1898.

Mr. Reid was born at Xenia, O., in 1837, educated at Miami university and gained his first reputation as a war correspondent during the civil war. He married in 1881 a daughter of the multimillionaire, D. O. Mills. His town and country homes are notable for the richness and elegance of their furnishings, but in his youth Mr. Reid was not accustomed to luxury. His parents were plain people, who settled in Ohio in 1826, and his father cleared the forest land and with his own hands erected the family home. In describing how Mr. Reid got through college his mother once said:

WHITELAW REID.

"When Whitelaw went to college he had a hard time to get along. One day I packed up a crock of butter, a loaf of bread, a sack of meal and later a boiled ham. I wrote to him to get some buttermilk and mix it with the meal and make some cakes. He wrote me back it was the best meal he had eaten for a long time. He has greatly honored me, and I often say, as David did to Saul, 'What have I done that I should be thus honored?'"

THE RUSSIAN PEASANTS.

They Are Poor and Ignorant, but Industrious and Cheerful.

The peasant class in Russia constitutes a large proportion of the whole population of the empire, and the peasants in general are very poor and steeped in ignorance. The emancipation of 1863-65 gave freedom to 22,000,000 peasants or serfs, who prior to 1861 were governed exclusively by their owners and enjoyed exceedingly limited rights. While the emancipation of the serfs was a great reform it has not been succeeded by other measures needed to enable the peasantry to make satisfactory progress in industry, ownership of land and attainment of intelligence.

RUSSIAN PEASANT GIRL IN HOLIDAY COSTUME.

In consequence of the existence of serfdom very few efforts were made to educate the masses in Russia prior to the reign of Alexander II., the czar who emancipated the serfs. Four-fifths of the population of Russia subsist by husbandry. The methods of farming are generally primitive, and the most of the peasantry live in communes and go out to till lands that are not their individual possessions, but are owned by the community, though the product belongs to the individual cultivator. Individual ownership of land is increasing, however, among the peasants. Though they have many hardships to contend with they are a cheerful people and have many picturesque customs. The women and girls are fond of assuming gay but often becoming costumes for the holiday fetes which now and then are held.

THIS is the day of the natural waisted woman. The W. B. Erect Form has changed the American figure. It has supplanted discomfort with ease—it has banished the impossible and exaggerated figure produced by the old corset idea. It removes the strain of lacing from the sensitive parts of the body and throws all pressure upon the hips and the strong back muscles, supporting the stomach within the corset and not forcing it below the garment. The Erect Form is made in more models than ever before. There are forty distinct styles of this popular make, each meant for a distinct type of woman. Dealers in all sized towns and cities the land over, sell the Erect Form. Prices range upward from $1.

A Homestead Claim.

A mouse may naturally be a "timid beastie," but at times it shows an audacity which borders on the impertinent. A traveler in Alaska tells this experience of his Klondike wanderings:

The teller of the story passed a long, cold winter at Cape Nome. He and his companions had for a year or more let their beards grow as a protection for their throats and chests.

One night when all were asleep the man in question was wakened by a light patting on his face. The cold was intense, [illegible] not caring to move unless it was nece[illegible] lay still. Again the light touches [illegible] his cheek. He put up his hand, and his fingers closed on a tiny mouse tangled in the meshes of his beard. A companion, roused by the involuntary exclamation, lighted a candle and investigated.

The mouse had selected the beard as a warm and eligible site for a residence. It had burrowed out a nice round nest, and when caught was engaged in dropping beans purloined from the scanty larder into the receptacle thus made.

Spring's here, and two important days are close at hand—Easter and the First of May. Everybody has lots of buying to do just about now. You and your family need apparel for Easter. Your home just as much needs something new—may be many new things—along about May 1st, whether you're moving to a new house or only doing house-cleaning in the old place.

Always a great many more needs than there are dollars to cover them—unless you lay out every cent to the best advantage. That means looking around—seeing and comparing, buying where you can get just what you want for the least money instead of having to be content with taking what you can get for your money.

This offer of ours enables you to broaden your outlook on the new Spring styles. It gives you the opportunity of coming to Syracuse and seeing all that the city has to offer.

We don't ask you to walk blindly into this store and buy whatever may be offered to you for the sake of getting your railroad fare—or a portion of it—refunded.

We give you herewith a fairly comprehensive selection of merchandise from some of the larger departments, and we are fully satisfied that you will find our prices lower—article for article—than prices on the same goods in other stores; while we give you the additional inducement to trade here of the refunding of your railroad fare up to 50 miles.

We say we are thoroughly satisfied on these points. But we want you to satisfy yourself. Go around. Look at things. Don't judge by price-tickets only. Figures prove anything to some people.

Investigate the age and quality of a thing offered you. Find out what's the best that other stores can do for you in particular lines. Then, when you come here, you won't need to be told that we can do better by you. You'll soon find that out for yourself.

CHAMBER COMMERCE

Regular Quarterly Meeting. Interesting Topics Discussed Pertaining to Best Interests of City---Prospective New Industry.

The Chamber of Commerce held its regular quarterly meeting last Wednesday evening. President E. R. Redhead presided and Secretary N. L. Whitaker read the minutes of the previous session, which were approved. In speaking of efforts made by the secretary and Board of Managers to secure new industries, Mr. Whitaker stated that every effort had been made to secure reliable information regarding concerns seeking new locations. The aid of a press-clipping bureau had been evoked, and correspondence had been entered into, but many of the replies received conveyed the information that prospective corporations wanted considerable in the shape of either subscription to stock or a bonus. One concern, however, was being favorably considered, which it was thought possible, might be induced to locate in Fulton, but negotiations had not reached that stage where publicity could be given to the project. The matter would be taken up at a subsequent or possibly special meeting. If the industry could be secured it would prove extremely beneficial and profitable to the community.

Out-of-town parties were looking over the David Baldwin property with a view of investing, providing a crossing could be secured over the Lackawanna Railroad tracks at that point. Mr. Whitaker had written Assemblyman Lewis, who replied that he had taken the matter up with State Railroad Commissioner Aldrich at Albany, with hopes of speedy adjustment.

Mr. Redhead in commenting on the report of the secretary, stated that it was slow and rather difficult work to secure new industries. He was aware that considerable adverse criticism had been indulged in by some who were generally absent from the meetings of the Chamber. He assured the members that the officers were doing everything possible to obtain reliable concerns, but he did not believe it was a good plan to offer a large bonus for new industries to locate here, especially as there were limitations to the amount of capital that could be procured. Good results might be expected in the near future. At all events, if any member knew of a concern that might be secured and the best interests of Fulton promoted thereby, the Board of Managers would be happy to hear from them.

Mr. Redhead thought it would be an excellent plan to foster home industries. He paid a glowing tribute to Mr. Freeman of the Freeman Boat Company, praising him for the industry and thrift manifested in building up a lucrative business from a small beginning to its present significant proportions. This industry certainly had a bright future. The launches made found a ready market. Mr. Redhead had recently visited the concern and was not a little surprised at the excellent showing made. Additional capital was required, as it was the intention of the management to practically double their capacity in order to meet increasing demands. It was indefinitely better, Mr Redhead said, that growing industries should be fostered rather than to attempt to load up with something new and untried. He regretted that Mr. Freeman was not present as he rather expected him to make a statement for the information of the members. An effort was being made to induce the company to locate elsewhere, but he hoped that it would remain in Fulton, as he regarded it as one of the promising industries in town.

Mr. Thomas Hunter stated that an industry which had passed through the experimental stage and was on a secure foundation was the kind that should be retained in Fulton.

The matter of securing an increase of capital was referred to the Board of Managers.

Attorney C. E. Pitts of Oswego asked for the co-operation of the Chamber of Commerce in securing a suitable hall for the annual convention of the New York State Grand Lodge of Good Templars, which it was hoped to bring to Fulton in August, 1906. There would be about 600 to 700 delegates. This too, was referred to the Board of Managers with power to act.

Mr. Redhead brought up the question of the opening of a new street between First and Second, south of the Episcopal church. In view of the completion of the new library building and for the convenience of trademen and residents, the opening of the street appeared to be a necessity. The measure, as far as he knew, had been safely deposited in the archives of the Board of Public Works, awaiting resuscitation.

Mr. Thomas Hunter, who had been a member of the Board, explained that there had been a divergence of opinion among his former associates as to whether the street was to be cut through his lot or immediately adjoining the present church edifice, placing it on the northwest corner of the street. The scarcity of money too, had been an insuperable obstacle.

On motion of Mr. George Chauncey, President Redhead was requested to urge the present Board of Public Works to take favorable action.

The next quarterly meeting will be held in July.

Baraca Class.

The Baraca class of the Baptist church which was organized a few months ago, has enjoyed a phenominal growth and it will become one of the greater factors for good in our city. The class was organized with a membership of twenty-four and at the meeting on Sunday there was an attendance of seventy-five members, all earnest and interested. The leader of the class is Mr. Irving Galusha and he is proving most competent. He is well informed upon the lessons and makes them so instructive and entertaining that there are many new students enrolled each week.

Blanche Walsh in "The Woman in the Case."

At Richardson theatre, Oswego, on Friday evening of this week. The sale of tickets opens this Wednesday at Watson's drug store. A special train will be run to and from Oswego to accommodate Fulton patrons. Tickets should be procured at Watson's drug store as they will cost 50 cents on the special, whether used one or both ways. While the action of the play, which culminates in what has come to be called in New York the famous third act, is somewhat melodramatic, it is perfectly plausible. Indeed, the great success the play has enjoyed is chiefly due to the fact that the story in its main features is almost identical with that of one of the most famous actual life dramas with which the courts of justice have had to deal with of late. As for Miss Walsh herself, local playgoers will be glad to see her again in a role in which her well-known feminine charms have opportunity of display. Her gowns are the creations of the famous Mrs. Osborne, and they are said to be for the feminine playgoers an alluring attraction in themselves. The play is in four scenes, two of which are richly decorated interiors that are intended to reflect the art, luxury and comfort of the 5th avenue palaces in New York. Another hardly less interesting is the visitor's room in the famous Tombs prison.

Fruit Growers for Lower Rates.

Leaders among fruit growers of Northern and Central California are engaged in an effort to secure lower freight rates to Eastern markets. It is claimed by these men that the Armour car lines and the California fruit distributers eat up 90 per cent of the profits, leaving the growers little more than enough to cover the actual cost of production. This is accomplished by heavy charges for icing of refrigerator cars and other expenses. It is claimed that fruit distributers often make $2,000 profit on a single car, while the men who grow the fruit receive nothing.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

NEW ARMORY FOR OSWEGO.

Hearty and Well-Merited Congratulations Extended.

Captain F. D. Culkins, of the Forty-eighth Separate Company, last Thursday received the following telegram:

Albany, April 20, 1905.

Captain Culkin, Oswego, N. Y.:

The Armory bill passed the Senate this morning. THOMAS D. LEWIS

Mr. Culkin immediately sent the following reply:

The Hon. Thomas D. Lewis, Assembly Chamber, Albany, N. Y.:

Congratulations and thanks from officers and men of company. Citizens also appreciate your splendid work in this matter. FRANCIS D. CULKIN.

As will be seen from the foregoing, the First Assembly District has a representative in the Legislature who "does things;" who is always alive to the interests of his constituency. Mr. Lewis deserves hearty congratulations on the success which has attended his efforts.

The Assembly Committee on Cities has reported favorably the bill of Assemblyman Whitney, relative to the office of Recorder of the city of Oswego.

The mutualization of the Equitable Assurance Company, under terms suggested by the agents of the company, is the object of a bill now being drafted, it was introduced in the Senate by Senator Page, of New York, on Tuesday morning.

"May 5 is the date fixed for the adjournment of the Legislature. The Stock Tax bill has been made a law and will go into effect on June 1. The Governor, in signing it, said that it was experimental. Brokers say they will fight it in the courts. The Mortgages Tax bill has been recast and may be dropped. The Republican County Committee of New York voted unanimously in condemnation of such a measure. Lobbyists got the Niagara 'grab' bill out of committee, but were balked when the Republican leaders laid it aside. Yet this 'grab' is stunned not dead. The Senate passed the Elsberg bill, said to validate the charter of the New York, Westchester and Boston Railroad, and the Goodsell railroad condemnation bill, the Goodsell Steinway tunnel bill, the Goodsell Bronx abandonment bill and the Stevens banking bill have all been advanced."

The Assembly has passed the bill of Assemblyman Whitney, establishing a law library in the Fifth Judicial district, in the city of Oswego, to be known as the Robinson Memorial Library.

The Senate has just passed the bill of Assemblyman Whitney amending the forest, fish and game law so as to permit the use of tip-ups and set lines in fishing through the ice in the waters of Big Sandy Pond, in Oswego County, after securing a license from the State Commission at the cost of $1. No person is to operate more than twenty such lines at any one time, however.

It is the most wonderful healing salve in the world. Beware of counterfeits. Sold by H. C. Giesler and George T. Boyington.

Christopher Cusick and E. C. Scott are at the Oswego office; A. W. Brower at Sodus Point and W. W. Green at Fair Haven. Ansel W. Brown will be in charge at Port Ontario, but the office there does not open until the first of May.

Lucky.

A story that comes from Ireland relates to the custom among farmers there of depositing money in the bank in the joint names of husband and wife, so that when one dies the survivor can draw out the money without any legal formalities.

To a farmer who recently made application for money deposited for himself and his wife the manager asked: "Why, Pat, how can this be? It is not much more than a year since you came with a similar application on the death of your wife."

"Well, your honor," was the reply, "I'm a bit lucky wid women."—Harper's Weekly.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any cases it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address, F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by druggists at 75 cents.

Epidemics of History.

In the twelfth century not less than fifteen epidemics of disease and many famines carried off the people of England. The thirteenth century saw twenty plagues and nineteen famines, while the fourteenth had a black record of disease. In 1348 the "black plague" or "black death," which was brought into the country from the east, caused the death of 100,000 persons in London alone, while in Europe altogether 25,000,000 people fell victims to its ravages. In 1485 the "sweating sickness" appeared in England, causing great destruction of human life. It reappeared at various intervals for a century thereafter. The last terrible visitation of the plague in England was in 1664-66, by which 100,000 lives were lost in London alone. This epidemic was followed by the great fire of 1666, which destroyed 16,000 houses, including all the most densely populated portions of the city. The rebuilding of London with some regard to sanitary laws appears to have put the first check on the epidemic diseases that had previously devastated its population.

Played What He Pleased.

Henry Smart, the English composer, played a fine organ in a London church, and his recital after service attracted much attention. But one morning after a selection from one of Mozart's masses a church warden came into the organ loft and "begged to inform Mr. Smart that they had decided that they could not have such jiggy stuff played in their church."

"Very well, sir," was the answer; "it shall be altered."

Next Sunday dirge-like sounds proceeded from the organ, and the warden congratulated the player on the solemn and elevating effect of the music. "I am glad you like it," answered Mr. Smart. "Doubtless if I play it a little quicker you will see the reason why it affected you." And, suiting the action to the word, the popular strains of "Jump Jim Crow" resounded from the organ. After this Henry Smart played what he liked.—London Telegraph.

About Rheumatism.

There are few diseases that inflict more torture than rheumatism, and here is probably no disease for which such a varied and useless lot of remedies have been suggested. To say that it can be cured is, therefore, a bold statement to make, but Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which enjoys an extensive sale, has met with great success in the treatment of this disease. One application of Pain Balm will relieve the pain and hundreds of sufferers have testified to permanent cures by its use. Why suffer when Pain Balm affords such quick relief and costs but a trifle? For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

The Perfect Prescription.

A patient at a metropolitan hospital goes away best satisfied when he is given something to drink out of a bottle. The drinking, according to ancient ritual, must not be less often than three times a day and the ceremony must have some reference to meals. The draft to be efficient should be colored. It must have a marked odor, so that he may invite his friends to smell it. It should be loathsome to the taste, so that the taking of it may call for some heroism. Above all, it needs to possess an evil looking sediment which will require a formal shaking of the vial.—London Hospital.

The Very Best Remedy for Bowel troubles—No Family Can Afford To Be Without It.

"I regard Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as one of the very best remedies for bowel troubles," says Mr. J. W. Hanlon, editor of The Despatch, Ocilla, Ga. "I make this statement after having used the medicine in my family for several years. I am never without it." No family can afford to be without a bottle of this remedy in the house. It is certain to be needed sooner or later. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

CHUMS.

Words by J. P. Music by Mona Davison.

Copyright, MDCCCCI, by New York.

The Music Master's Ruse.

A very rich lady offered Garcia any price if he would only teach her daughter. He refused, knowing well he could never obtain serious work from her; but, as the mother persisted, he hit upon a compromise. He asked the ladies to be present during a lesson, and he undertook, if the girl still wished to learn singing after hearing it taught, to teach her. The lesson began. The pupil, who seemed to the listeners an already finished singer, had to repeat passage after passage of the most difficult exercises before the master was satisfied. He insisted upon the minutest attention to every detail of execution. Mother and daughter exchanged horrified glances and looked on pityingly. The lesson finished, the master bowed the ladies out, and in passing the pupil the young girl whispered to her, "It would kill me!" Senor Garcia, returning from the door, said contentedly: "They will not come again. Thank you, mon enfant, you sang well."—London Mail.

Do Birds Sing?

A naturalist has written to prove that birds are not singers, but whistlers; that is to say, that the notes are produced through a tube—to be technical, through the slit known as the glottis—not by the help of vocal cords. But the whole distinction is beside the point. Any one who has seen a bird singing will have seen both the vibrations in his throat and the variations in the extent to which he opens and closes his beak or mandibles; and, given these accompaniments, together with the production of an inarticulate language, whistling and singing become identical terms suggesting a distinction. People are accustomed to the idea that only a few species of birds, such as the parrot and the jackdaw, can be taught, but in wild life almost all birds are mimics to some extent, and probably more of them than people realize could be taught to imitate human sounds.—Pearson's Weekly.

Beginnings of Clubs.

The first club of modern England seems to have been the circle at the Mermaid that Sir Walter Raleigh founded and Shakespeare joined. But in the seventeenth century clubs began to spring up like mushrooms. There was the Calves' Head club, whose members met and dined off calves' heads to show their contempt for the decapitated Charles I. Then came the Kit-Kat club, which, according to Addison, took its name from a mutton pie. One Christopher Kat, a pastry cook of Shire lane, was a distinguished constructor of mutton pies, and his productions were called Kit-Kats. The club meeting in his house and eating his pies acquired the pies' name for its own.—London Telegraph.

Travels of the Cuckoo.

A feature in bird travels is the departure south of the old and young cuckoos at a different time. The old cuckoos set out first, leaving the young birds of the year to follow. The adult cuckoos—one might put it by a stretch of imagination—so much dislike the fuss and anxiety of traveling en famille that they take care to go on first and by themselves. Whether the old cuckoos ever know their progeny by sight cannot be said for certain—probably not, although an old cuckoo is constantly to be heard and seen in the coppice or hedgerow or about the garden where a young one is being reared by a hedge sparrow, pipit or wagtail.—London Opinion.

A One Minute Cure.

Leaning painfully on a heavy stick and groaning in intolerable anguish, the blinding tears forcing themselves from his eyes, a Whitechapel defendant, according to the London Globe, limped up to the county court judge and explained that, owing to being hopelessly crippled by rheumatism, he could not pay a debt. "But I saw you enter the court with that stick under your arm!" exclaimed the judge. "Two shillings a month until the debt is paid." Then the pain racked invalid threw the stick lightly over his shoulder, thanked the bench and tripped gayly into the street again. It was a one minute cure.

A Remarkable Sundial.

At the Eutaw entrance to Druid Hill park, Baltimore, stands one of the most remarkable sundials in the world. The time in many parts of the world is shown whenever the sun is shining. It is easily possible almost at first glance to read the time within two or three minutes, while closer acquaintance with the dial enables the correct time to be read to the minute. The base is of carved bronze. The instrument was presented to the park by Peter Hamilton, who designed and made it entirely of stone.

Dark Secrets.

Nordy—All these big manufacturers seem to dread publicity. Butts—That's right. I know one of 'em who has to let his family do just as they please to keep 'em from divulging business secrets. Nordy—What business is he in? Butts—He's a sausage maker.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Limbs Badly Swollen.

Dr. M. M. Fenner, Fredonia, N. Y.

Dear Sir:—About 4 years ago I began to suffer with severe pains in my back making it impossible for me to do any work.

My limbs were swollen badly and I was troubled with an affection of the heart also, all coming as I suppose from Kidney trouble.

I had tried several Kidney remedies with little result, not satisfactory.

I asked Mr. Dorrence, the druggist who handles your goods here and he recommended your Kidney and Backache Cure saying he had sold it for several years very successfully.

I took 4 bottles and the swelling has all gone from my limbs and my heart trouble completely cured.

I have recommended this Remedy to a large number of my acquaintances, with the same result.

I will gladly answer any letter from any one.

Pawnbrokers In China.

Pawnbrokers in China are the bankers of the people and could not be dispensed with. The poor Chinaman, unlike the poor European, does not wear his winter clothes until they are fit only to be discarded. When the Chinese officials order that summer clothing shall be donned, the poor Chinaman pawns his winter's suit, and with the proceeds, supplemented by a little cash, he redeems his previous summer garb or buys new attire. Pawnbroking, writes Mr. Cunningham in the Chinese Soldier, is to the respectable Chinaman of limited means a weekly round.

The Public Drinking Cup.

When it is necessary to relieve one's thirst abroad, if the cup be filled quite full and placed to the mouth in such a way that the rim will be about half an inch below the under lip, one can drink from the surface of the water. In this way no part of the vessel, to which some particles of poisonous matter may still be clinging, will touch the delicate skin of the lip. It is hardly necessary to add that the water which adheres to the mouth and below the lips should be removed by a handkerchief and not by the tongue.

Candles as Bullets.

Concerning the shooting of a candle through a board a correspondent writes: "We selected a weather beaten pine fence board as a target and loaded the gun with three drams of black powder, followed by an ordinary 'stearin' candle, which fitted tightly. The candle passed through, making a clear cut hole, and buried itself in the sand back of the target. The candle, while somewhat torn, was still far from shapeless."

Paternal Confidence.

The Young Man (with some embarrassment)—There is one question you haven't asked me yet, Mr. Hurpop. You haven't wanted to know whether or not I think I can make a living for your daughter. The Other Man—That isn't necessary, Henry. She'll see that you make the living, all right, if she's at all like her mother—and I think she is.—Chicago Tribune.

Made Up For It.

"Do you remember, love, twenty years ago we sat one moonlight night by this lake? I had my head on your breast and for an hour spoke not a word."

"Yes, and it has never happened again since."

His Own Way.

"Do you ever have your own way?" asked the cynical near relative.

"Yes," answered Mr. Meekton. "Sometimes I have my own way, but not without consulting Henrietta very carefully before I make up my mind."

Getting Up Courage.

Knicker—Jones and his wife are singing "The Marseillaise." Bocker—Yes; they are bracing up to discharge the cook.—Harper's Bazar.

SENATOR DEPEW'S SEVENTY-SECOND BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY.

Senator Chauncey Depew's seventy-second birthday was celebrated in an enjoyable manner by the Montauk Club of Brooklyn last Saturday evening. It was the fifteenth annual dinner the club had given in the Senator's honor and proved to be the largest and most successful of the series. Seated with the Senator and Mrs. Depew were Senator Thomas C. Platt and Mrs. Platt, Controller Grout and Mrs. Grout and Hon. Timothy L. Woodruff. At another table sat Miss Isabel Morrison, whom Mr. Woodruff married on Monday. About 300 guests were present. Mr. Woodruff in introducing Senator Depew, stated that the great secret of the distinguished guests political, professional and financial success was work without worry, and that the keynote of his life has been optimism. He was the personification of the old adage, "Be old when you are young, that you may be young when you are old." The souvenir was an album containing autograph photographs of Senator and Mrs. Depew.

Few men in this age have such a record of integrity and sincerity to Republican principles as Senator Depew; few have entertained such lofty ideas regarding the future of our country. He has been a faithful watchman over the rights and privileges of the people. He has always been ready to appear before his constituents to account for the use of the talent with which they entrusted him and of the improvement he had made of it for the public advantage. That has been the secret of his great success and popularity.

The Senator's reply to Mr. Woodruff will be found on the sixth page of this week's TIMES. It is characteristic and instructive.

"NEW YORKITIS" is the title of a recent book which deals with the phenomena of the New Yorker's rapid way of living, the author asserting that the business men in that city work like dynamos all day and play like idiots at night. The pertinent question is whether "one crowded hour of glorious life" is worth years of rural somnolence. They evidently think it is, and while they may be conscious of the doom to which they are hastening, they keep it up, the pace that kills, until the physician and coroner add another name to the long list of victims.

THE death of Senator O. A. Platt occurred at his home in Washington, Conn., last Friday night. He had been ill for a month with pneumonia, which he contracted attending the funeral of Senator Joseph R. Hawley, at the Capitol in Hartford. Thursday an abcess formed in one of his lungs and yesterday it burst. Strangulation from the abcess was the immediate cause of his death. Vice-President Fairbanks attended the funeral services. His judgment of Senator Platt was that he was one of the most valuable men in the public service. He was an eminent lawyer, Mr. Fairbanks said, and a profound student of public questions. "He had a conscience for public duty. He discharged every responsibility which rested on him with absolute fidelity. His ripe experience, his great learning, his conservative judgment and gentle personality will be sadly missed in the United States Senate. I was associated with him in the Committee on the Judiciary. The intimate relations which existed there only tended to increase my admiration of him. He was in the fullest sense an American patriot and statesman of the highest and best type."

The keynote of this store is "harmony," and proprietors, stock, store appointments, employes and patrons, are of the best, making shopping in this fashion-centre, a delight. The store has kept pace with the growing demands of Syracuse and the increase in rural patronage, and its history is one of victory. Messrs. Bacon and Chappell are Fultonians, even though Syracuse claims them as her own, and Fulton is equally proud of their prosperity and extends hearty wishes for long years of business activity and success.

Alderman F. B. Dilts went to New York City on Sunday to meet his mother, Mrs. Lydia Dilts and Mrs. C. S. Eggleston, who were returning from points along the Mediterranean where they spent the Winter. They returned to Fulton on Tuesday.

Health Officer Lake reports several cases of diphtheria and scarlet fever in the city, of which twenty-one cases are on the east side. It behooves parents to exercise great care and oversight of their children, or an epidemic will surely occur in Fulton.

S., will on Arbor Day plant a vine and a white rose, the former to be dedicated to Miss Agnes Avery and the rose to Mrs. Wooley Berryman, both former teachers of the High school. Miss Marguerite McCallister will deliver the oration at the vine planting and Mr. Lester Scholz at the rose bush planting.

Work on the Library building is progressing finely, and Contractor Wadsworth hopes that everything will be in readiness for the laying of the corner stone about May 15. Only two days' time has been lost on the work since the contract was awarded in February. Incorporation of Fulton Seventy Years Ago

The Village of Fulton, N. Y., was incorporated April 29, 1835—seventy years ago on Saturday of this week. The residents within the limits described hereafter met on the first Tuesday in the following June and chose Aaron G. Fish as president of the corporation. The property owners of Steen's and Harper's location had at some time previous surveyed and mapped small portions of the western portion, near the lower and upper landings, and laid out a few village lots, but they did not have the least idea of the present prosperous city.

The boundaries of the village at that time were as follows: Beginning at the southwest corner of the State reservation at Oswego Falls, thence along the south and east sides thereof to State street, thence along the public highway northeasterly to the four corners at the eastern boundary of Steen's location; thence along the line of said location to the north line thereof, thence west to the center of the Oswego river, thence along the center of said river to the place of beginning. The population within the prescribed limits did not exceed 600.

There were three flour mills, three church edifices, several mercantile firms as well as individuals in business on or near Oneida and Oswego (now First) streets.

There were no banks, newspapers or places of amusement, but there was a jail and justice of the peace, and next week we will give an instance of the justice exercising his authority.

The Oswego County Mutual Fire Insurance Company was the principal one doing business in the vicinity at that time, but the Scottish Union and National of Edinburgh, Scotland, is the one now. G. F. SCHENCK; Agent, 18 South First street.

demands many little differences of line and shape.

The coats, you will notice are longer, the shoulders better shaped, a more graceful effect obtained in the whole suit.

These little style points are better shown in Schloss garments than any other clothes we know.

And while Schloss clothes lead in style, their quality is sure as the Government stamp on a dollar bill, just as certain a guarantee of value.

These are the clothes you ought to wear, the "Best Correct Clothes for Gentlemen," simply because they mean the most value for the money, look at it however you will. We're anxious to show you the new styles and have you slip on a coat or two, just to see how they "feel." You don't have to BUY because you try, glad to see you anyway.

The return of the Rev. S. D Robinson to State street church for another year has been surpassingly pleasing to the congregation and to the residents of our city to whom the pastor is well known. E. R. Redhead and F. P. Connell, went to Watertown and made so urgent a plea for his return to State street, that the Bishop acceded to their request. A reception was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Robinson in the church on Wednesday evening upon their return from conference. At the close of a social hour Mr. T. J. Redhead addressed Mr. Robinson in behalf of the official board of the church; Mr. Chauncey Wilson in behalf of the Sunday School; Mr. Robert Crockett in behalf of the Epworth League; Mr. L. A. How the Nutmeg Grows.

"A nutmeg tree," said the gardener, "looks like a laurel. The nutmeg tree begins to bear at the age of ten years. It keeps on bearing until it is ninety. The fruit resembles an apricot, and when ripe it bursts open, showing at its heart the black nutmeg inclosed in a network of scarlet. The nutmeg after plucking must be dried. It is dried over a slow fire, and the process is tedious. It often occupies two months. Before shipping the nutmegs are always steeped in sea water and lime. This is to protect them from insects. They have nothing but insects to fear. In an insect proof condition they keep—well, they keep practically forever."—Minneapolis Journal.

Just Streets.

"The highest street in the world," said a globe trotter, "is Main street in Denver, the richest is Fifth avenue in New York, the widest is Market street in Philadelphia and the shortest is the Rue Ble in Paris. This street is only twenty feet long. The dirtiest street is Tchangtsi in Nankin, the cleanest is the Via Castile in Seville, the most aristocratic is Grosvenor place, London; the most beautiful is the Avenue des Champs Elysees, Paris. The narrowest street is Via Sol, Havana, which has a width of forty-two inches. The ugliest street is considered by many foreign artists and architects to be Broadway, New York, with its skyscrapers."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

BIRTHDAY RECOLLECTIONS AND REMINISCENCES

Speech of Senator Chauncey M. Depew at the Fourteenth Annual Banquet Given to Him by the Montauk Club of Brooklyn In Celebration of His Birthday, Saturday Evening, April 22, 1905.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen—It is difficult for me to realize that this is the fourteenth of these annual dinners which have been given to celebrate my birthday. More valuable than any material gain or political promotion is the compliment of several hundred gentlemen remembering for so many years the anniversary which made possible for me the joy of living. I wish I could share with you all its pleasures relieved of all its pains. For the first time the occasion is graced and honored by the presence of ladies. Surely this gallant innovation is the suggestion of our genial and popular President, Lieutenant Governor Woodruff, and inspired by the happy event which is to occur within a few hours, where we unanimously wish for his bride and himself long life, health and happiness.

The rapidity of everything in our American existence is the marked characteristic of our national character. There has enough been crowded into these fourteen years to make a hundred for any other nation. The most striking suggestion which comes at an hour like this is the quick creation and fading away of reputations. As dear old Rip Van Winkle said, "How soon we are forgot!" The first of these banquets was in the last year of the administration of President Harrison. We were entering upon a campaign, with the nominations in June and July, which for the first time since the Civil War was to transfer the government of the country from the Republican to the Democratic party. William McKinley was scarcely thought of as a candidate for the convention and little known among the masses of the American people. Mark A. Hanna had no reputation whatever outside of the State of Ohio, and Theodore Roosevelt was a Civil Service Commissioner in Washington. Today McKinley holds a place among the immortals as the best loved of American Presidents, Hanna emerged from obscurity to make McKinley President and to become the Warwick of American politics, while Theodore Roosevelt has a dominating position which has not been held by any President in our generation and a unique and original personality which commands for him more than any other ruler the attention of the world.

But when I think over the full round of fifty years of my activities in law, business and politics the saddest reminiscences are those of the reputations which fade away. Of the Revolutionary period partisan politics keeps alive the memories of Jefferson and Hamilton because of their antagonistic schools, but as Washington rises they drop down. In the middle period a certain fascination about the triumvirate of Webster, Clay and Calhoun keeps their memories green, but the schoolboy and the college man of today knows little of them. I have lived for six years in Washington at the house occupied by Daniel Webster while he was Secretary of State and in the Senate. An English visitor to whom I mentioned this said, "Very interesting—the man who wrote that beastly dictionary whose spelling spoiled the language!" I heard another story of a statesman in England, who said, "We have nothing to compare with your Webster, who, as I learn, was your greatest statesman and orator, wrote a dictionary and was hung for killing a client." Any schoolboy after the Civil War could have called off easily the names of threescore heroes on the one side and the other, but now, so far as the universal public is interested, they know only Lincoln, Grant and Lee. The obvious lesson is: "Do not be a fool and work for posterity. Do your best in your day and generation and receive their rewards. If posterity remembers you, it is not your fault, and you have received your dividends before you died."

Six years ago this occasion was made a celebration of my election to the Senate; tonight of my re-election. Between the former and the latter it seems but the rising and the setting of the sun of a single day. It has been a joyous period, but passed like a dream. The war with Spain created for us new problems to solve and put to the supreme test our ability to assume great responsibilities and perform high duties without material rewards. The splendid vindication of promise and performance in Cuba of the burden carried so successfully in Porto Rico and in the Philippines form a new and brilliant chapter in American history. From our first Presidency in 1789 to McKinley in 1899 the world had cared little for our internal politics and nothing about our foreign policy. But in these six short years the most interesting subject in every mart and center of manufacture and trade is "The American invasion," and the most acute question in every Cabinet, "What will be the attitude of the United States in the ultimate settlement and disposition of countries, treaty ports and markets in the far East?"

I have studied the Senate during my membership, and with each year my respect and reverence for it has increased. As we increase in population and territories, as our relations with foreign powers become more important, as our world trade adds to the cares of government, as the Monroe Doctrine presents new phases and new possibilities, as the concentration of industries more and more absorb the public mind and attention and as growing out of these is a constant peril of a furore of passion sweeping the country off its feet, the conservatism of the Senate becomes more and more the sheet anchor of our peace and safety. That there are no limitations to the debate and no previous question is the frequent criticism of this body. It is exasperating to a degree that the majority cannot have its way the moment it feels the strength of its numbers, but I cannot recall a single good measure which has been lost by this obstruction of the minority, but I do remember many cases where the power of the minority has given the country time to think and brought the majority to reason and sanity. The more powerful the nation the more complicated its interests at home and abroad, the greater is the danger of haste. It is irritating, but nevertheless consoling, to find salvation in a flood of talk. When I was elected the question of the election of the United States Senators by the people was arousing universal interest. It has in a measure died out. The people do not care about the abstract proposition that as the Senators are the Ambassadors of sovereign states they should therefore be elected by the Legislatures of those States, but they are deeply concerned in having a voice in their selection. At my period in life and under the circumstances of my election I can, I hope, without a charge of egotism say a few plain words. The popular appreciation of an election by the people is a nomination by the State Conventions of the two parties. The people then are helpless except to vote for the nominees of the conventions. Those nominees may be, as Conventions go, the incidents of the trading of localities for different places on the ticket and not the popular choice. I have three times seen a candidate for Governor, who was sure of a nomination three hours before the convention met because he was the choice of the people, lost in the shuffle, he did not know how, between that time and the calling of the roll when his name was not mentioned. The delegates to a State Convention are elected in many cases by caucuses controlled by a few individuals or delegates. They have no oath of office and no responsibility, and their action can never be called in question by constituents.

The Legislators, on the other hand, have sworn duties to perform and ambitions for the future. They are judged by their acts. In the interval between the 6th of November and the 1st of January in my case the newspapers and the people had two full months to discuss whether the present incumbent should be retired from the Senate. If the matter had been submitted to the state convention the probabilities would have been against my receiving the nomination. If there had not been a popular approval of my course and a desire for my continuance in the Senate it could not have been manufactured. But with two months for the press to speak out, for the people to discuss the question and for them to organize in school districts, towns and cities the popular will became evident and found its expression in the vote of the Legislature. It is possible to conceive of a case where the Legislature might even disregard that. The primary is the only practical suggestion of an election of United States Senators by the people. It is expensive and cumbersome, but it has been successfully tried in several states and proved entirely satisfactory. I am very happy in the thought that in the final analysis the issue in my election instead of being a contest with a friend was simply whether or not I should be continued for another term.

I have searched for years for some book in which had been collated the oracles of Delphi and their effect upon the history of the ancient world, but have been unable to find it. It is known that the utterances of the god controlled the politics and foreign policies of the classic age for centuries. A most interesting volume would be the effect of little, apparently trifling things upon the fortunes of individuals, parties and peoples. A single remark of Benedetti the French Ambassador to Prussia made to King William at the watering place at Ems, brought on the Prussian-French War, created modern Germany, despoiled France of Alsace and Lorraine and influenced the politics of the world. In a bill rendered by William L. Marcy, as judge, to the State Comptroller, when the law required an itemized account of expenditures, a charge of 50 cents for patching his pants impaired the future fortunes of that statesman and of his party. General Winfield Scott, the Whig candidate for President, had won the admiration of the country by his gallantry as a soldier, and his canvass was exceedingly promising until in giving an excuse for the delay in answering the communication of an important committee he claimed it was due to absorption in a "hasty plate of soup." That "hasty plate of soup" laughed him out of the canvass. No man ever came so near the Presidency and lost it as James G. Blaine. Had he carried the State of New York he would have been triumphantly elected, but the State went against him by only 1,037 majority. The famous alliteration of the three R's, Rum, Romanism and Rebellion, in the speech a few days before election, addressed to Mr. Blaine on behalf of the Protestant ministers by the Rev. Dr. Burchard, alienated tens of thousands of voters and not only ended the ambition of a lifetime, but changed the course of American politics.

A single remark made at the Executive Mansion in Albany when Conkling, Arthur and Cornell were in conference led to the creation of the organization which defeated the third term and nominated Garfield for President.

At the first of these dinners I took occasion in my speech, more in the spirit of an after dinner talk than serious accusation, to point out as sources of Brooklyn's pride instances of her acquiescence by her votes in notorious corruption. The Mayor, himself an honest man, took umbrage and left the table, and the pleasure of the feast was marred. Ordinarily such an event would have been forgotten with the day, but the pulpit of Brooklyn, which always speaks out, raised the question, "Why did the Mayor leave the table?" He should have defended, said the ministers, the good reputation of his city by refuting these grave charges and not run away. "Why did the Mayor leave the table?" thus heralded through the churches, was one of the causes of the reform uprising which swept this city and subsequently New York and then went all over the country. The conditions were ripe for revolt. The powder magazine was close to the fuse, and "Why did the Mayor leave the table?" was the match.

The great difference between the United States and other countries is in the comparative ease with which our problems are solved. This is due to the universal education and general intelligence of our people and to the confidence reposed in the government of the day because previous solutions have almost invariably turned out right. No matter how grave the question, it arouses interest, but not apprehension. The occasion may be fruitful in scare head lines, but there is general calm. Each year has furnished its doubts, and before we have again met they have been settled. Present problems are more interesting to us because we are nearer to them and they are new. The Presidency under Roosevelt has assumed closer relations to the people. He has been called upon to use the prestige of his great office in critical crises where under the law and Constitution he has no power. The force of this advice will always depend upon the reputation of the President of the hour. There must be unquestioning confidence in his ability, wisdom, patriotism, courage and absolute unselfishness. The settlement of the coal strike was a conspicuous example of this reserve power in the office and the man. The same is true of his action upon trusts and railway legislation. From an agitator with power who is also President such policies as Roosevelt advocates would create dangerous agitation, with far reaching and disastrous consequences. But suggestions from Roosevelt, with the unique position he holds, backed by the trust imposed in him by the enormous majority which he has received, strengthen public confidence and enhance values. It is a phase of the Presidency that its duties, responsibilities and power are more interesting than any development in our official history.

The Monroe Doctrine has been a vital force for a generation, but its real scope, meaning and responsibility have been largely academic. The request of the San Dominican government for us to intervene has compelled us to face the Monroe Doctrine under aspects never before presented. We cannot say to these Republics, "You shall not trade with the people of foreign nations nor permit their citizens to engage with their capital in business within your borders," nor can we say to foreign nations, "We will not permit without a war your exercise of the rights granted to you by international law and about which there is no dispute in the protection of your citizens and the collection of your debts." These Republics have felt safe in inviting the citizens and capital of other countries and then at the whim of a revolution repudiating all obligations. They have done this under the belief that the power of the United States behind the Monroe Doctrine would save them from the consequences of such acts. The question is now upon us, presented in its best form by the request of San Domingo to take possession of her customs and adjust her debt or else to permit foreign governments to take her ports and do that work themselves. The latter course would defeat the vital principles of the Monroe Doctrine and leave foreign powers in practical possession of an island, with ports and harbors for rendezvous, on the line of our Isthmian Canal and commanding our island possessions and gulf coast. Our duty is difficult, but the duties and responsibilities of government to a great and free people are always difficult and they are dangerous unless courageously and wisely met.

We have the strenuous and the simple life before us. The first has its attractions. I bought the second in the five cent edition and confess it is hard to read. When one has passed threescore and ten the natural life has the same charm which appeals to youth. It is folly to strain or simper. Retire at sixty, cries one. Quit when you have enough to live on, says another. The Judiciary in our state and the Army and Navy have an age limit. It prevents some exhausted or played out officers from injuring the service, but deprives the public of many of its ablest and best equipped men. Dr. Osler's chloroform should be not for age, but incompetence. I have known those whose fires were burned out at forty and those who did not fully mature until sixty, and the succeeding twenty-five were their best years. Napoleon had lost his grip at thirty-six and Byron his genius earlier. Nothing equals the sustaining power of work or the life giving inspiration of achievement. Idleness, inanition and death are the sequels at any age. Prestige, whether from things done or inheritance, counts for much. Officers of distinction in business and financiers of vast wealth and experience defer to the judgment of a tried veteran and, curiously enough, pay a measure of the same respect to the green and undeveloped youth who is heir to the situation. The septuagenarian, who drops the sustaining force of power and the incense of deference, advances rapidly through Shakespeare's seventh age to the grave. If he visits the office or counting room the clerks no longer see him, and the manager or partner, who was so cordial in the active days, says: "Excuse me, old man; so busy, you know. Come around Sunday to dinner if you have nothing better on hand." He finds no place in the talk at the table. It is of the shop, with which he has lost touch and information. Dinner conversations once made memorable evenings, and every period in life merry and wise, or filled delightful volumes, but now bonds of steel or copper or rails or mines confine it within the exchanges. Once we had quick recognition, racy reviews and keen enjoyment of authors, new books, art and adventure at home and abroad, politics, the opera or the drama. I spoke of them the other evening to a charming woman, who said: "Oh, those things are old fashioned and a bore! Tell me about 'Smelters.' Are they going up?" After dinner the men speculated on which side to speculate in view of Union Pacific's $100,000,000 stock issue and its possible purchasers.

With diplomats and statesmen intent upon the discussion and outcome of grave international relations, and men of letters drawn to the Capital by its unequaled facilities and opportunities, Washington is almost the only place in the United States where mind can separate from matter and enjoy the lights and shadows of the higher life. The actors on the National stage know little and care less about the fluctuations of the stock market in New York or the hysterics of the Pit in Chicago. They live and move in the bracing atmosphere of home and foreign policies and politics. A large majority of the leaders of thought, debate and action have passed the Osler chloroform period. Speaker Cannon in his seventieth year holds and guides the wild horses of the House with unequaled skill and firmness. It was an inspiration to hear Senator Hoar at seventy-seven brilliantly encountering the ablest orators of the Senate, and Senator Platt of Connecticut at the same age during the last session wielding commanding influence among his colleagues, while Senator Morgan at eighty held the floor for hours against the assaults of a host of adversaries with unimpaired vigor of mind and body. One of the greatest lawyers and genial wits of our country, Senator Evarts, when near the close of his long career remarked at his Christmas dinner, "When we began you saw a turkey stuffed with sage; now behold a sage stuffed with turkey!" Which meant that, though many years past the allotted time, he enjoyed life with the zest of the youngest.

Death is an accident. It may happen to the child or the centenarian. Work, temperance and fun are the sources of longevity. Our thoughts should not be of the grave, for we are a long time dead, but of the uplifting duties and pleasures of this glorious old world. A philosopher once said—I cannot quote him literally: "We begin life naked and bare. It is full of trouble and care. We go God only knows where. If we are all right here, we will be all right there." I am not a philosopher, but at the outcome and experience of an unusually busy life let me offer an amendment to his philosophy:

We begin life naked and bare:
It has troubles, but more happiness rare
If we do our best, God will take care
Both here and there.

On Color In Dress.

Ruskin, writes "A Society Butterfly," has said, "Wherever men are noble they love bright color." This at first sight seems a reckless assertion, hardly supported by fact, as the lowest savages are noted for their love of crude and vivid colorings. A negress adores scarlet, and glaring tints are the joy of the south sea islander. But there is the usual grain of truth in the dictum, and the question of color will be one of the sciences of the future. Every known shade, it is now said, has its effect on health and character, and the most valuable are the primary hues—red, blue and yellow. It is a fact worthy of remembrance that all women who have made history have loved color and clothed themselves brilliantly—from Cleopatra to Mme. de Pompadour, even down to our twentieth century Queen Draga of Servia. The rapid growth of individualism is one of the signs of the time, and an up to date society woman identifies herself by a jewel, a flower or a coloring.—London M. A. P.

Mexico's Financial Record.

The City of Mexico has been doing business for nearly four centuries. There is probably no capital in the civilized world that during the same period has been the center of more wars of conquest or revolution, and yet, through all the troublesome days of these centuries, this city has maintained its financial reputation free from blemish. Kings have come and gone, viceroy has succeeded viceroy, emperors have flourished for a brief regime, and rival factions have striven for the presidency; loans have been forced by one general government to be repudiated by the next, bonds were issued during the French occupancy that the republic would not assume, but during all the strife the ancient capital of the Aztecs cherished its financial integrity as its choicest jewel and today rejoices in the record that not once in all its long history has a debt been repudiated.—Modern Mexico.

Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. Kennedy's NEW Medicine, Did More than Many Doctors.

Your pocketbook as well as your health needs consideration, but often both suffer through ignorance of the right thing to buy. That was the case with the gentleman who wrote the following letter:

Three bottles of it cured me of spring of heart trouble and terrible pains in the side, back and head. Am better than for thirty years."—H. J. Brandow, Jewett Centre, N. Y.

The Ease of Normal Death.

According to a scientist, the immediate cause of death in all but very exceptional cases, such as accident, is the poisoning of the nervous centers by carbonic acid, which accumulates in the blood owing to the failure of the arrangement for its removal. "This gas is an anaesthetic," he explains, "and has, indeed, been employed as such, both locally and otherwise. This property of carbonic acid may be termed a merciful provision of nature. Normal death is a painless occurrence, usually preceded by gradual loss of consciousness entailing no more suffering than going to sleep. The accumulation of this merciful gas often induces muscular contraction or spasms, which are preceded by loss of consciousness, but which may have suggested to uncritical observers that their moribund subject was in agony.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, the Best and Most Popular.

"Mothers buy it for croupy children, railroad men buy it for severe coughs and elderly people buy it for la grippe," say Moore Bros., Eldon, Iowa. "We sell more of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy than any other kind. It seems to have taken the lead over several other good brands." There is no question but what this medicine is the best that can be procured for coughs and colds, whether it be a child or an adult that is afflicted. It always cures and cures quickly. Sold by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Thousands have been benefitted by their use. They only cost a quarter. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Warsaw's "Social Glass."

The town of Warsaw, Russia, may be called the milk producers' Eden. There is probably nowhere such a "milk town." Restaurants are but little frequented. On the other hand, the public frequents the various dairies in great numbers in order to chat with friends or read the newspapers to the accompaniment of black or white coffee or a glass of cold or warm milk. To close a bargain or to talk business the milk saloon is resorted to. Chess and billiards are allowed to be played in these recognized places of public resort.—London Times.

French Mothers.

There is one thing that French mothers do not do enough. That is to separate from their growing boys, to send them to the school of life outside the home and into situations where they must look after themselves. The mother's happiness is complete only with her children around her. Let life not keep them too much apart. From this arise too fearsome ideas of distance and a too timid attachment to the natal soil or the maternal city.

The difficulty is that it is very reluctantly admitted among the French that the time must come for the nestling to use its own wings. I have seen most excellent parents worry themselves nearly to death because a daughter will not acquiesce in their ideas or wish to accept the husband of their choice. To a son or a daughter very devoted but independent it is often said, "You love me no longer."

But if we have touched here upon a somewhat delicate point the good will and love of the French mothers are above all praise, even if sometimes farsightedness and breadth of mind be somewhat lacking.—Charles Wagner in Cosmopolitan.

Professional Thrusts.

"Look at me!" exclaimed the leading lawyer warmly. "I never took a drop of medicine in my life, and I'm as strong as any two of your patients put together."

"Well, that's nothing," retorted the physician. "I never went to law in my life, and I'm as rich as any two dozen of your clients put together."

A Tired and True Friend.

One Minute Cough Cure contains not an atom of any harmful drug, and it has been curing Coughs, Colds, Croup and Whooping Cough so long that it has proven itself a tired and true friend to many who use it. Mrs. Gertrude E. Fenner, Marion, Ind., says: "Coughing and straining so weakened me that I run down in weight from 148 to 92 pounds. After trying a number of remedies to no avail, One Minute Cough Cure entirely cured me." Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Value of Walking and Riding.

A brisk daily walk or a ride on horseback beats any more elaborate forms of physical exercise for simplicity combined with efficiency. In walking, especially if the ground is somewhat undulating, a very large number of muscles are brought into natural and easy play, sufficient, at any rate, to stimulate the circulation, which in its turn compels full expansion of the lungs and due aeration of the blood. The professional or business man requires no more than this to keep him fit for his duties, provided he follows the ordinary rules of health in respect of bathing, eating, drinking and clothing. If he is afflicted with a sluggish liver, indigestion or inactivity of the alimentary canal as a whole, a man may derive more benefit to health on horseback. But that is really a curative form of exercise.—London Chronicle.

Forget About Your Stomach.

If your digestion is bad the vital organs of your body are not fed and nourished as they should be. They grow weak and invite disease. Kodol Dyspepia Cure digests what you eat, cures indigestion and all stomach troubles. You forget you have a stomach from the very day you begin taking it. This is because it gets a rest—recuperates and gradually grows so strong and healthy that it troubles you no more. E. L. Babcock, Amherst, Minn., says: "I have taken a great many remedies for indigestion but have found nothing equal to Kodol Dyspepsia Cure" Kodol digests what you eat, cures Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach, Belching, Heartburn and all Stomach Troubles. Its preparation is the result of many years of research. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Saved Her Life.

Jack Ford—Did you see that girl cut me then? Frank Wilcox—I noticed she didn't bow. Jack Ford—And yet I saved her life! Frank Wilcox—How? Jack Ford—We were engaged, and finally she said she'd rather die than marry me, so I let her off.

Exposure to a sudden climatic change produces cold in the head and catarrh is apt to follow. Provided with Ely's Cream Balm you are armed against Nasal Catarrh. Price 50 cents at Druggists or Ely's Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York, will mail it. The Balm cures without pain, does not irritate or cause sneezing. It spreads itself over an irritated and angry surface, relieving immediately the painful inflammation, cleanses and cures. Cream Balm quickly cures the cold.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Jeffery Judson, the Dwarf.

One of the most notable of dwarfs was Jeffery Hudson, who was introduced to Henrietta Maria, consort of Charles I., in a noble venison pie. "When the pie was opened," out stepped Jeffery in all the dignity of his eighteen inches and made a courtly obeisance to the astonished and delighted queen, begging to be taken into her service, a favor which was promptly granted.

Jeffery was a man of stout heart and adventurous spirit. He fought two duels, one with a turkeycock and the second with a Mr. Crofts, who faced the little man armed with a squirt and was forthwith shot dead. Twice Jeffery saw the inside of prison walls—once when he was captured by the French on his way across the channel and again when he was captured by Barbary corsairs—and to crown his career of adventure he was accused of being mixed up in the popish plot and ended his rather troublous days in the Gate House in 1682.

Women and Tobacco.

Master Prynne, the weak, well meaning Puritan who in 1633 wrote an attack upon the stage, tells us that in his day tobacco pipes were offered to ladies at the theater in lieu of apples between the acts. A French traveler, M. Torevin de Rochefort, who published his journal in 1677, confirms this by telling us that he found smoking a general custom in England, as well among women as among men. Both sexes, he adds, held that life without tobacco would be intolerable "because, they say, it dissipates the evil humors of the brain."

When ladies stopped smoking they took to snuff. Women of quality about a century ago would not stir without their snuffboxes, beautifully enameled receptacles of perfumed mild rappee. Lord Bolingbroke said of Queen Anne and her grace of Marlborough: "The nation is governed by a pair of snuffers. No wonder the light of its glory is extinguished!"—London Standard.

Yes, it is Quite True

That nervous trouble, if neglected, leads straight to bodily and mental collapse. But a wise man does not neglect it. When dizziness, low spirits, indigestion, throbbing head and fluttering heart tell him that his nerves are going wrong, he takes Vernal Iron Nerve Food Tablets, and they are as certain to set him right as the sun is to rise to-morrow. In all forms of nervous weakness—sleeplessness, mental depression, urinary difficulty and the rest—these life-giving Tablets are a source of fresh and abounding vigor. Every function controlled by the nervous system, from digestion to thought, is performed as it ought to be. The welfare of the whole organism is promoted, and robust health takes the place of the wretched, half sick condition in which the patient may have been dragging along for years. The Tablets are sold by all druggist at 50 cents a box, or by mail. Sample mailed free. Address, Vernal Remedy Co., LeRoy, N. Y.

Queer Hatching Processes.

The Chilean frog, known also as Darwin's frog, is unique in its method of hatching eggs. The female is not abnormal, but the male has a large pouch which underlies its whole body and is connected with its mouth by two openings, one on either side of its tongue. When his mate has laid her eggs this devoted parent takes them into his fore paws and places them inside his mouth, whence they presently pass by the two passages into the expectant pouch. Here they remain in warm and safe seclusion until they are, hatched and emerge as newborn tadpoles to the light. The breeding habits of the midwife frog are not less singular. He winds the strings of new laid eggs round his hind legs and vanishes into a convenient hole till they are hatched. The Surinam toad places eggs one by one in hexagonal cells formed in the back of the mother toad, whence in due time they hop out, not tadpoles, but perfect toads.

Boys and Satan.

It is a fact well within common knowledge that boys, when worthy of the name, have an instinctive aversion, unconquerable by anything less unreasonable than force, to baths and even to thorough washing of their hands and faces. They consider these rites unnecessary and uncomfortable, resent them as grotesque waste of boyhood's precious time and avoid the performance of them as often and as long as they can. This peculiarity is easily enough explicable on the theory that the child passes through the developmental stages of his race and while in the savage or barbarian stage has the aptitudes and repugnances of savages and barbarians. But quite as much as the boy hates baths he loves to go in swimming, which by the oldsters is also called bathing. That cracks the theory all to pieces and leaves the mystery right where it was before. Nobody has marked the hour when bathing for the civilized human ceases to be torture and becomes pleasure, but certainly it is well beyond boyhood.—New York Times.

Facing the Camera.

When the wise ones go to be photographed they resign themselves wholly to the photographer, who pays as much attention to every detail of pose as would a famous portrait painter. At rare intervals women send some picture—sometimes it is an illustration from book or magazine—that they have taken a fancy to ahead of them as a suggestion; but, as a rule, they express few definite desires as to their poses. The photographer studies his subjects from every point of view, accentuates their good points by many interesting devices, eliminates their less favorable aspects by others equally so—in short, devotes himself to them for the time being as if the entire universe revolved only for the benefit of the anticipated result. Women often pose as long as two hours, during which time they have frequently been photographed in as many as twenty-five different attitudes.—New York Tribune.

Bothering a Duelist.

Brantome, a French author, in "Dueling Stories of the Sixteenth Century," tells of the code then in vogue. It was allowed in the challenge to stipulate as many different weapons as one pleased without specifying the particular ones with which one would actually fight. The antagonist was bound to provide himself with all. One duelist insisted "on the provision of no less than thirty different kinds of armament, for foot and horseback; nay, he even specified the kind of horse—coursers, blood horses from Spain and Turkey, thoroughbreds, cobs, some in harness with ears and tail clipped, some saddled in jennet style, some with heavy plated armor and so one. The object was not only to take his adversary by surprise, but to put him to enormous expense and exhaust his resources."

The Horse Teaches the Man.

While there is no royal road to learning the game of polo in its entirety, there is a plebeian way that leads straight to its secrets. Let the novice get on an old broken down polo pony that knows the game all the way through from a lifetime of playing. Then the pony will play the game for him and will be his teacher. The learner will start in with a few strokes of his mallet till his seat and guidance are assured and later his aim and strength of stroke, and gradually he will work into regular play. Then, like other faithful teachers, the wise old horse will be superseded, but his work will live.—Country Life In America.

We Are All Queer.

Call a girl a chick and she smiles; call a woman a hen and she howls. Call a young woman a witch and she is pleased; call an old woman a witch and she is indignant. Call a girl a kitten and she rather likes it; call a woman a cat and she hates you. Women are queer.

If you call a man a gay dog it will flatter him; call him a pup, a hound or a cur and he will try to alter the map of your face. He doesn't mind being called a bull or a bear, yet he will object to being mentioned as a calf or a cub. Men are queer too.

A Troubled Conscience.

"I had a horrible dream last night," said Huddleston when he came down to breakfast the other morning.

"What was it?" asked his wife.

"I dreamed that I was in purgatory and was made to do all the things I had told my friends I would do if I were in their places."—Town and Country.

The Contrary Dog.

"Can dogs find their way home from a distance?" is a question frequently asked. It's according to the dog. If it is one you want to get rid of he can find his way back from Africa. If it is a valuable one he is apt to get lost if he goes round the corner.

Knew the Game.

"Aren't you carrying things with a high hand?"

"Sometimes it's a high hand," answered the South American president, "and then again sometimes it's only a bluff."—Washington Star.

Not Her Custom.

She—And she is to be married for the third time! She hasn't been a widow very long. He—No. She never is a widow very long.—New York Press.

The Ruling Passion.

He (reading)—She wore an air of mystery? She (absently)—How was it trimmed?

All men would be cowards if they durst.—Rochester.

The Scared Hero.

The man who goes down with his engine in a wreck is considered worthy of great commendation, when the truth is, as all railway men are aware, that the unfortunate in such cases lost his nerve at the critical moment and hesitated to jump. When an accident is impending the cool and collected engineer shuts off steam, applies the brakes and opens the valves, all of the actions taking a few seconds. Then he looks out for his own safety. Another man becomes so frightened in the presence of great danger that he does nothing, not even the possible, and he is the person likely to wear a martyr's crown.—Locomotive Engineering.

The Way of Man.

When a man and his wife start to go anywhere, says a Missouri paper, he tells her to get out his good suit, fix the buttons in his shirt, get his cuffs, good shoes, tie his necktie, brush his hat, perfume his handkerchief and a few other little jobs. Then he puts on his hat and says: "Great Scott! Ain't you ready yet?"—Kansas City Journal.

STANDING ON THE THRESHOLD OF A SECOND DECADE

in our business relations with the Syracuse buying public.

We lift from the loose-leaf ledger of years another prosperous store page.

This pile of years, now ten high, have been years of exceedingly pleasant experience. The cordial relations and great good will shown this store is a pleasing retrospect.

No other store within reach so young has won such a volume of business.

These statements mean much---especially when coupled with the further assertion that the business has been continuously an unqualified success.

It is reasonable that the buying public should expect the best from prosperous stores, because success is a magnet that draws the elements of further success, and best values come as naturally to the successful store as does water to its level.

The year 1905 will bring new successes because we have diligently and intelligently planned them.

On to larger success! To better service-giving!

CHIEF HARRY L. WAUGH

FULTON FIRE DEPARTMENT

Splendidly Equipped Organization--Intelligence and Adaptability in Evidence--Efficient Service by Officers and Men.

FULTON has a paid fire department which in perfection of detail, efficiency of service and equipment, is equal to any of its size in the State. Although only recently installed, the members of the force have exhibited the adaptability of experienced veterans.

When the city charter was adopted in 1902, the installation of a paid fire department became necessary. It was the judgment of many public-spirited citizens that the expense attending such an institution would be prohibitive, and for this reason efforts were made to have the charter amended, retaining the volunteer force, but such efforts proved abortive.

It was conceded that the volunteer firemen did excellent service; no better testimony to their efficiency could be given than the insignificant losses sustained in Fulton from fire during a number of years. The men were keenly sensible of their duties and obligations and promptly responded to every call for duty.

The paid department marks a new epoch in local affairs, and men have been selected who take a pride in making the department thoroughly efficient.

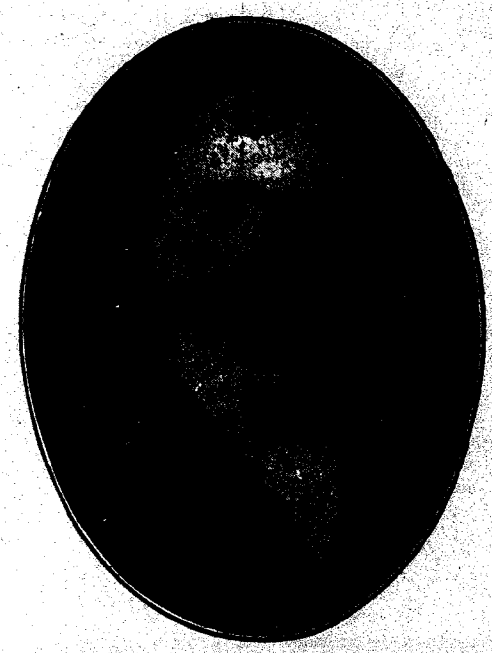
Chief Harry L. Waugh was the chief of the volunteer department, having been elected to that position about two years ago. He passed a rigid civil service examination and was appointed chief of the paid department by the commissioners about twelve months ago. Mr. Waugh has been identified with the fire department for nine years, and has always taken the keenest interest in its affairs, giving it careful and intelligent thought and consideration, ever aiming at the highest ideals, which has borne excellent fruit.

Assistant Chief Ellsworth Rude has served an apprenticeship in the volunteer department of about eighteen years, and was also a charter member of Cronyn Hose Company. He was selected for the position he now holds by the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners and enjoys the respect and confidence of the officials and men.

The work of changing the First street engine house—adapting it to the new order of things—began in February and was practically finished the last week in March. The changes included sleeping apartments for the men and stalls for the horses.

The commissioners purchased two teams of western horses, also complete sets of drop-harness, which were duly installed, but because of acclimating conditions, the horses could not be used for at least two weeks after they were purchased. But gradually every obstacle was overcome, and with the appointing of the following men from the eligible civil service list, the department was ready for any duty required:

HOOK AND LADDER NO. 1.



Captain, Norris Fisk.
Tillerman, F. Morrison.
Driver, J. T. McSweeney.

HOSE COMPANY NO. 1.

Captain, A. Stewart.
Driver, Roy Brown.
Hosemen—F. Costello, R. Kelly and W. H. Newton.

CALL MEN.

The following call men were also selected, who receive 50 cents an hour for all time spent at fires: Thomas Kennedy, Joseph Lynch, Ernest Johnson, Clarence Bailey, Philip LaPine, W. Leslie, J. Fredenburgh, Leon Hammond, Edson Anson, B. Ellis, William Miller, James Cole, W. E. Abbey, Fred A. Parks, Guy A. Waugh, Charles W. Hoff, Fred Carroll and E. C. Devendorf.

ASSISTANT CHIEF ELLSWORTH RUDE

THE COMMISSIONERS.

The Board of Fire and Police Commissioners now consists of Charles E. Lockrow, president; A. Z. Wolever, and W. F. Hill, who has recently succeeded F. J. Towse, whose resignation was accepted by Mayor Brooker.

In the organization of the department everything has been done to obtain the most efficient service with the least possible cost to the taxpayers.

Since organization, or during the month of April, the paid fire department has responded to ten alarms; five of which were false, sent in by maliciously disposed persons. The best record made in getting out on the street after the sounding of the alarm has been 6½ seconds for the hose wagon and 7½ seconds for the hook and ladder truck. There is a slight increase in the distance from the stalls to the hook and ladder truck, which, if it were figured accurately, would make the time about even.

This is remarkably fast time, when it is taken into consideration that the horses are comparatively green and the limited experience of the men. It should not be forgotten, too, that the best time on record by the New York City department is about four seconds.

Photographed by Langdon HOSE COMPANY NO. 1.

The TIMES is under obligations to Chief Waugh for permission to have photographs made of the apparatus, and also to Photographer Harry Langdon for valuable services rendered.

COUNTY S. S. ASSOCIATION.

Annual Convention Held in Mexico—Reports Received and Officers Elected for Ensuing year.

The Oswego County Sunday School Association held its annual meeting last Friday in Mexico. About 100 delegates were present. The Rev. C. N. Thorp, president of the association, presided, and Mr. A. M. Becker of Mexico conducted the musical program.

Reports were received from Mr. R. C. Turner on primary work and Mrs. J. A. Bidwell on home department work. The report of the secretary. Harry L. Stout of Fulton, showed a large increase in Sunday School work and workers.

The report of Treasurer W. A. Butts of Fulton showed that the appropriation of $50 for State Sunday School work was met last year, and it was urged that the schools send in contributions for the ensuing year not later than May 15. It was voted that the county delegate to the State Convention, which convenes in Syracuse, June 6-8, should be empowered to pledge $75 from the county organization for the coming year. The Rev. John Richards of Fulton and Superintendent Humphreys of Mexico addressed the convention in support of the project.

Mrs. J. B. Alexander of Oswego, in the M. E. church, gave an instructive talk to the teachers of intermediate and adult classes, while Mrs. R. C. Turner engaged the attention of primary workers.

"The Spiritual side of Sunday School work" was the subject of an excellent discourse delivered by the Rev. M. S. Howland of Syracuse.

The following were elected unanimously: President, the Rev. W. C. Atwell, Minetto; corresponding secretary; A. L. Stout, Fulton; recording secretary, Mrs. Jennie W. Dean, Scriba; treasurer, W. A. Butts, Fulton; superintendent home department, Mrs. Etta Wright, Pulaski; superintendent of primary work, Mrs. R C. Turner, Oswego; delegate to State convention, the Rev. W. G. Atwell, Minetto; on place of next meeting, Miss Worts, Mrs. F. Treadwell and Mrs. R. C. Turner, all of Oswego. They reported an invitation from the First M. E. Sunday school, Oswego, which was accepted.

The committee on resolutions, the Rev. J. B Felt, Pulaski; the Rev. M. A. Barlett, Scriba, and Mrs. C. I. Kingsbury, Lansing, reported in a grateful appreciation of the hospitality of the Mexico people.

The evening session, held in the M. E. church, was addressed by Superintendent St. John, who gave a study of adolescence

A Lovely Errand.

He was a cherubic youth of four with a beautiful, blue-eyed co unten ance and an angelic smile—the kind of a boy that honest persons long instinctively to kidnap. He sat on the fence, swinging his heels and humming a kindergarten song.

"Oh you darling!" cried an impulsive young woman, pouncing upon him and giving him a hug. "Has your mother any more like you? Have you any little brothers?"

"Yop," replied the angelic boy, "got three. Me and Jack and Billy and Frank."

"Which one do you like best?"

"Jack, I guess," replied the youngster after a moment of deep thought, "Yop, I like Jack best."

"And why," asked the young woman, do you like Jack best?"

"'Cause he did such a lovely errand for me once."

"What was that lovely errand?"

"He bit Billy on the leg," replied the sweetly serious cherub.

"Why," pursued the young woman, didn't you do your own biting?"

"Cause I hate the taste of Billy's legs," was the calm reply.—Carrol Watson Rankin, in May Lippincott's.

Supreme Court, Syracuse.

On motion of Homer Weston the court appointed Superintendent of Schools A. Burr Blodgett guardian of Lucy E. Bridge, his neice, in the suit brought by Arthur D. Bissell and John Fero against Joel Morse and others for the construction of the will of Alanson Morse of Buffalo, who left an estate of about $100,000. Mrs. Bridge lived in Fulton, but is now dead. She was a sister of Mrs. Blodgett and they were legatees to 12-50 each of 1-5 of the estate. Mrs. Bridge's four children will inherit her share if their side wins in the litigation over the will.—Syracuse Herald.

A Good Family Liniment.

Every family should be supplied with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. For cuts, bruises, burns, scalds and similar injuries, which are of frequent occurrence, there is nothing so good. It soothes the wound and not only gives instant relief from pain, but causes the part to heal in about one-third the time required by the usual treatment. As it is an antiseptic all danger from blood-poisoning is avoided. Sold by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Hospitality Abroad.

Hospitality has long been reckoned among the virtues of this nation, but how very virtuous Americans are in this respect is probably not realized even by them till they go to other countries and experience the hospitality offered there. Of course, the Englishman, being our own flesh and blood, is given to hospitality almost up to the American standard, although "come and lunch with me" is apt to be the extent of his invitation to a male American on the other side. The American in Paris knows that foreigners receive few invitations to breakfast or dinner from the Parisian. French people do a good deal of entertaining, but it is largely confined to the circle of their relatives, among whom a degree of devotion exists that Americans can hardly understand. In Italy a cup of afternoon tea marks the wildest flight of hospitality that the visiting American is often asked to consider. An amusing story is told of an Italian aristocrat—a very great man—inviting a German nobleman to come and drink coffee after dejeuner!

A Million Cold.

Mrs. Black—There goes old Moneybags. They say he is worth a million cold. Mrs. White—Yes, he will be. He carries a million insurance.—Milwaukee Sentinel

Why Suffer From Rheumatism?

Why suffer from rheumatism when one application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm will relieve the Pain? The quick relief which this liniment affords makes rest and sleep possible, and that alone is worth many times its cost. Many who have used it hoping only for a short relief from suffering have been happily surprised to find that after a while the relief became permanent. Mrs. V. H. Leggett of Yum Yum, Tennessee, U. S. A., writes: "I am a great sufferer from rheumatism, all over from head to foot, and Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only thing that will relieve the pain." For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Slight Fire.

An alarm of fire was sent in on Sunday evening from box 35. The fire was located at the residence of Mr. Frank H. French on Cayuga street. A lounge had become ignited in some unaccountable way, but by the prompt arrival of the department the fire was soon extinguished without damage.

A Good Suggestion.

Mr. C. B. Wainwright of Lemon City, Fla., has written the manufacturers that much better results are obtained from the use of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in cases of pains in the stomach, colic and cholera morbus by taking it in water as hot as can be drank. That when taken in this way the effect is double in rapidity. "It seems to get at the right spot instantly," he says. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

The Man Behind the Gun In Japan

JAPANESE MARINE.

THE public has heard a great deal since the war in Manchuria began about the Japanese soldier, but has not been supplied with so much information about the men behind the guns of the Japanese navy, upon whom so much depends at this time. The bravery of the Japanese on land has surprised and astonished the world, but it is not more remarkable than the courage the mikado's subjects have displayed on the sea. The Japanese can now build their own cruisers and smaller men-of-war in their own navy yards, and an English writer predicts that they will soon be building battleships equal in size, speed and armament to anything afloat. The methods of other nations in naval warfare as well as in land military operations have been diligently studied by them since the awakening of the nation some thirty-five to forty years ago. Admiral Togo, the brilliant commander in chief of the naval force now a center of interest, was sent to England as a young man to study the system of the nation which has long been reckoned the greatest naval power in the world. The influence of the training he received there is seen in the character of the Japanese navy today. It is said that the ships in that navy which are the closest copies of the English men-of-war are those on which Togo has served.

To modern science in naval warfare the Japanese sea fighters unite the spirit which animated the samurai of old. This was illustrated when the Japanese fleet was about to sail for the Manchurian coast at the opening of the present war. On his flagship, the Mikasa, Admiral Togo mustered aft the officers and crew and laid a small sword quietly, but significantly, on a whitewood tray, used for sacred purposes, which stood upon the capstan. The weapon was the sacred symbol of samurai honor. The action of the admiral meant that the future must bring them either honor or death. There was no need for lengthy explanation. Under the veneer of western civilization and despite all their knowledge of western naval science the commander and his men were still primitive warriors. Did defeat or dishonor come they were not to go home. Harakiri was the only alternative of brave and honorable Japanese under such circumstances. Officers and men needed no greater incentive to valor, knowing that their admiral would be the first, if need be, to act in accordance with the ancient samurai code of honor.

"GOING, GOING, GONE!" A TORPEDO AS IT LEAVES THE TUBE.

With their customary cleverness in mastering the methods of warfare in use in other parts of the world the Japanese have become expert in the use of that terrible engine of destruction, the torpedo. The firing of a torpedo is a very interesting process. The Whitehead torpedo, which is used by the Japanese, is cigar shaped, of steel or bronze and from fourteen to eighteen feet long. In the head is a charge of 200 pounds of dynamite or gun cotton, which is exploded by a rod that is driven against a detonator when the torpedo comes in contact with a ship. Behind the explosive is a steel chamber containing air compressed to 1,500 pounds to the square inch. The escape of the air provides motive power for the propellers of the torpedo, which drive it through the water at a speed of about thirty miles an hour. The torpedo is usually fired from a battleship or cruiser through a submerged tube and is ejected by compressed air or powder. Torpedo boats and destroyers expel torpedoes from tubes on their decks. Thus far the Japanese have made more successful use of the torpedo than any other nation.

The Evil Eye.

The meaning of the evil eye, the "ophthalmos baskanos" of the Greeks, the "fascinare" of the Romans, was probably far more than a vulgar superstition. We find traces of it in almost every country, notably to this day among the canny Scots who inhabit the western isles of the sea, of "Uiva dark and Colonsay," of Skye and the Hebrides, and among the Turks, who distrust the evil eye of the stranger. But in old classical days the power seems chiefly to have been used for the purpose of grievously afflicting the live stock of disagreeable neighbors. So we find to this day in Ireland, parts of Scotland and the west of England where this belief is still prevalent. Certainly, in some form or other, mesmeric fascination by the eye has always been known. But that any one person, with no matter how evil an eye, should be able to charm frightened animals to any extent or number is ridiculous and not seriously to be entertained for one moment.—Chambers' Journal.

How to Ward Off Old Age.

The most successful way of warding off the approach of old age is to maintain a vigorous digestion. This can be done by eating only food suited to your age and occupation, and when any disorder of the stomach appears take a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets to correct it. If you have a weak stomach or are troubled with indigestion, you will find these Tablets to be just what you need. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggists.

Why a "Limited" Train?

The question why is a "limited train" so called has been propounded to a general passenger agent, who replies as follows:

First.—It is limited as to its time.

Second.—It is limited as to the number of cars and weight of train.

Third.—It is limited as to the class of cars.

Fourth.—It is limited as to the number and class of passengers permitted transportation thereon.

This last limit is adopted so that every passenger may have ample accommodation and not be crowded or interfered with by other passengers. The fact that an additional fare is charged on a limited train and, further, that nothing but first class tickets are accepted for passage tends to limit the class of travel which is carried.

Altruistic.

Reginald—Why does your father want you to stop taking piano lessons? Kathryn—He says it's too much of a mental strain. Reginald—Oh, pshaw! You look strong enough. Kathryn—Oh, the strain isn't on me. It's on the others in the house.—Chicago News.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 3, 1905.

HIRAM CROUK'S 105th birthday anniversary was celebrated last Saturday, and he was the recipient of many congratulatory telegrams and engrossed resolutions from the State Legislature. Formal exercises were also held. The veteran's mind has been worn out by time and he has fallen into almost complete senility. The exercises seemed pitiful because Mr. Crouk is deaf, incapable of much comprehensive and most of the time dozes, oblivious to his surroundings.

WE have heard considerable about the "strenuous life;" in due time the "simple life" absorbed attention, and now its the "Equitable Life" that fills the waking moments of the newspaper-reading public. Postmaster General Cortelyou, it is reported, had been agreed upon for president of the society as a compromise between President Alexander and Vice-President Hyde, but the rumor is now emphatically denied at Washington.

THE sudden death of General Fitzhugh Lee last Friday in Washington is sincerely regretted by all. His history is familiar to Americans. After an earnest and active support of the short-lived Confederacy, he was among the first to return to full allegiance and loyalty to the United States. He filled the position of Governor of Virginia and other important offices, and was later sent by President Cleveland as Consul General to Havana when war with Spain was becoming imminent. In recognition of his value he was retained in that capacity by President McKinley until the war began, and then as a major general of volunteers was placed at the head of an army corps which would have invaded Cuba had not peace been concluded before the movement was ordered.

Mr. Willis Morin of Boston spent Sunday with his mother, Mrs. S. E. Morin.

Mr. Murney Lewis of New York City has been the guest of his parents, Hon. and Mrs. T. D. Lewis.

Mrs. E. A. Sadelmyer of Baldwinsville is the guest of her son, Mr. F. H. Sadelmyer.

Mr. William Hunter is wearing his arm in a sling, as the result of a heavy fall which he sustained on Saturday.

A game of baseball will be played on the Fair grounds, on Friday, May 5, between the Phoenix High school and the Fulton High school teams.

Mrs. Nettie Cooley will remove to Cortland this week to make a home for her daughter, Miss Blanche Cooley, who has a position as stenographer in that city. Mrs. Cooley's friends in Fulton regret her departure exceedingly as do her patrons in dressmaking but they trust she may be successful in her new home, No. 23 Reynolds Avenue, Cortland, where she will open dressmaking parlors.

The concert to be given in State Street Church on Friday evening by the Canadian Jubilee Singers and the Imperial Orchestra, will draw a crowded house: The Toronto Globe says: "Young Street Methodist church was filed to overflowing last night to hear the Canadian Jubilee Singers. A very bright and attractive programme was presented. The audience was greatly delighted with many of the plantation songs, some of which had never been heard in Toronto before."

The recital at the home of Attorney and Mrs. G. S. Piper on Thursday evening, was attended by a number of the music lovers of Fulton. Prof. Morton Adkins has a magnificent baritone voice of which he is perfect master, and his interpretation of the varied and various numbers on the program was faultless. A violin solo by Miss Charlotte David, with piano accompaniment by Mrs. J. H. Howe, was very pleasing, and Mrs. A. H. Grant rendered a vocal solo in her usual artistic manner.

A most successful school event was the reception and ball given by the class of '05, F. H. S., in Church's Hall on Friday evening. The hall had been transformed by Mr. Holden Pratt, and the class colors, green and white, were everywhere in evidence. A shield in the east end of the hall formed a background for the class numerals, outlined in green and white incandescent bulbs, while the incandescent lights in the ball room were softened by red globes. The guests were received by the Misses Blackstock, Alice Murphy and Marguerite Johnston and Messrs. John Cullen and Bernard Doty. The fruit punch bowl was presided over by the Misses Helen Parmenter, Jane Waugh and Ellen Bacon. Buell's full orchestra furnished the music. The ball was opened with the grand march at 9:30 o'clock, Miss Edith Hamilton and Mr. Victor Lewis leading. There were about seventy-five couples present and the pleasure was unalloyed, owing to the careful planning of the committee, the Misses Adelle Hubbard, Alice Murphy and Mr. John Cullen.

Some new "LaHilda" cigars recently added to the Clark House cigar case. We now have both imported and domestic cigars in this line. They are the best and prices are moderate.

FULTON READING CIRCLE.

Season Closed with Eloquent Lecture by Dean Smalley of Syracuse University.

The Fulton Reading Circle for several years has followed a self-established precedent for entertaining its friends at the close of the season in a rarely delightful manner, and the lecture given by Dean Smalley of Syracuse University on Friday evening, at the home of Mrs. Lydia Dilts, under the auspices of the Circle, was an intellectual treat in the broadest acceptation of the term.

The Circle invited a few friends to participate with them in the evening's enjoyment, and in a conversation with a friend during the evening, Dean Smalley paid his audience a graceful compliment.

Miss May Gardner, president of the Circle, in a most appropriate manner, presented the speaker to his audience.

Dean Smalley prefaced his lecture on "Rome and its contributions to modern civilization," with expressions of gratification at coming to Fulton, the home of a former classmate and fellow graduate, Mr. E. R. Redhead, at whose home he was being entertained. They were members of the class of 1874, Syracuse University, and received their diplomas from the then chancellor, Dr. Alexander Winchell, the famed geologist.

In taking up his subject, Dean Smalley presented it under six heads: The influence of Rome upon modern languages, literature, art and architecture, pohtical science, Roman law and Roman religion. The professor treated each topic in a masterful manner. His discourse exhibiting depth of research and knowledge gained by long years as a student of the country, language and customs. Dean Smally recently spent several months in Rome, and he interspersed his remarks with recollections from personal observation.

At the conclusion of the address a social hour was enjoyed, and all had the pleasure of personally meeting the talented speaker. Refreshments were served.

The Pathfinder Club house will open for the season on Friday, and a 6 o'clock dinner will be served by Mrs. Holmes. The afternoon will be devoted to field sports. The following excellent menu will be served:

Olives Radishes Pickles
Beef a la Mode with Maccaroni

American Cheese Coffee

No change has been made in island rules except that 10 cents extra will be charged for guest's tickets at field-day dinners.

Continental Kettledrum.

What is the Continental Kettledrum? is the question that is heard frequently these days. It is the Colonial entertainment to be given by local talent, Tuesday and Wednesday evening, May 9 and 10, under the auspices of the Episcopal church. It has a cast of nearly one hundred performers, ladies and gentlemen, misses, boys and children. It is the picture of the social life in Continental times, with many pretty scenes, historical conversation, catchy music, and fancy dances. The scene of the tea party in Lady Washington's parlor, where four ladies are being entertained by the fortune telling of a gipsy, and the dancing and of her little child, is a beautiful entertainment of itself. The gipsy scene, when all the tribe return to the camp fire, presided over by the gipsy mother, is effective. The solos in this act by Zara (Miss Foster) and Pippo (Mr. Hillick,) also the difficult castanet dance executed by seven young ladies, will delight all who witness it.

Mother Shipton and her celebrated prophecy, in which the business people of Fulton have a part, is an important personage, in the Kettledrum.

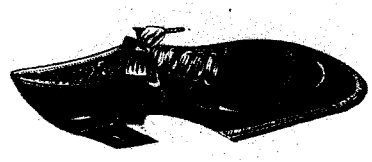
The opening scene, a tea given by "Lady Washington" (Mrs. Thomas Hunter) to four of her friends, "Mrs. Alex Hamilton" (Mrs. Grant,) "Mrs. Lee" (Mrs. Wettengel,) "Mrs. John Adams" (Mrs. Cushman) and "Mrs. Knox" (Mrs. Fairgrieve,) is a pretty entertainment in itself. Mother Shipton will be impersonated by Mrs. F. W. Stearn.

The Kettledrum will be given in the Opera House, May 9 and 10. Tickets 25, 35 and 50 cents. Sale of seats opens on Saturday at Watson's Drug-store.

Fire and Police Commissioners.

The Board of Fire and Police Commissioners met last Wednesday night, when Commissioner Lockrow was made president in place of Frank J Towse, whose resignation was accepted by Mayor Brooker.

In compliance with a request of the Board, Messrs. D. E. Roach, James Green and Thomas Wilson who were the engineers and stokers of the volunteer fire department, were present. It was thought possible to make arrangements for the attendance of these men at fires, if their services were required. But in deference to Mr. Roach's wish the matter was held in abeyance until the next meeting of the Board on Thursday evening. In the meanwhile a willingness was expressed to attend fires, at least until some satisfactory arrangement can be entered into.



Commissioners Wolever, as committee on doors, and Lockrow, as committee on zincs, were given further time. Commissioner Hill was named as a committee to ascertain prices on the Fire department washing and was authorized to look up a suitable place to store the Hook and Ladder truck and the engines.

Commissioner Wolever was appointed committee on buildings and supplies and Commissioner Lockrow committee on apparatus and horses.

BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS

At a meeting of the Board of Public Works on Monday evening, a protest was entered by the mill owners against a water-tax on the sprinkler system used in factories for fire protection. Heavy meter charges are now exacted and an additional tax would be considered a peculiar hardship.

Mr E. R. Redhead addressed the Board in behalf of the project of opening a street immediately south of the Episcopal Church, which it was conceded would be a great public convenience. The continuance of Academy street, from Second to First, would bring the western opening nearly opposite the new Carnegie Library building. The matter had been fully discussed by the Chamber of Commerce, and at the last meeting Mr. Redhead was requested to urge the Board to take immediate action.

In accordance with a taxpayers' petition, a 2,000 candle-power electric light was ordered placed at the corner of First and Rochester streets.

Bids for 400 to 500 tons of bituminous coal were authorized to be advertised for, to be delivered at the pumping station on or before July 1.

Tales Told By the Thespians

PAULA EDWARDES, the bright particular star of "Winsome Winnie," tells a story illustrating the acumen and enterprise of the genus widow.

"I was sitting on the veranda of a summer hotel," says Miss Edwardes, "when I observed a little boy, whose mother was close by, chatting with a young man. 'What's your name?' the child asked. The young man told him.

"'Is you married?'

"'No, I am not,' was the reply.

"The little fellow paused a moment, and then, turning to his mother, inquired, 'Mamma, what else did you tell me to ask him?'"

PAULA EDWARDES.

According to the ever veracious press agent, Miss Edwardes recently received the following letter, which was evidently the work of some very polite lunatic:

Dear Miss Edwardes—Knowing you to be interested in anything novel in theatrical entertainment, I should like to make an appointment to show you my collection of trained germs. They have the well known flea circus skinned to death. The star of the company is a typhoid fever bacillus named Mike, who can stand on all seven of his hands and whistle "Home, Sweet Home," through his teeth. I have also two young measles microbes who do a sister act and a family of diphtheria bacilli, the youngest of which can tuck his limbs under his neck and sit on both ears at once. The performance can be given on a stage two inches square. Kindly let me know when and where you will see me.

John Philip Sousa, who is now touring England, had an alarming experience at a provincial hotel during the early part of his tour. Weary from business, Sousa retired at an early hour and left untouched the sandwiches and fruit which had been placed on a table in his bedroom. In the dead of night he was awakened by what seemed to be the sound of a plate being pushed among the glass and cutlery on his small supper table. Seeing nothing in the dim night, the musician returned to his slumbers.

In the morning Sousa found that the room was soiled with black footmarks. They were on the floor, the table, the toilet stand and the chairs—most particularly the chair upon which Sousa had put his underwear. "And it's all over the plate!" said the man who brought the hot water. Moreover, the sandwiches had entirely disappeared, and so had the fruit.

JOHN PHILIP SOUSA.

Sousa helped the man in his search about the room for what they expected would turn out to be a hidden tramp, and it was not very long before the musician discovered that the footmarks seemed to have come from and disappeared to the great old fashioned chimney corner.

"He's up that chimney, but he won't be when we have burned paper at this end of it," observed Sousa, and the smoke from the flaring torch soon had the desired effect. A large baboon, covered from head to foot with soot, descended into the room and stood quite quietly by the window while Sousa and the man retreated into an adjoining apartment, locking the door behind them. The baboon, it turned out, had escaped from a traveling circus the night before and was last seen making his way in the direction of a disused bit of ground at the side of the hotel.

Sousa says that he is going to let a long time go by before he reads again the tale of his countryman, Edgar Allan Poe, "The Murders In the Rue Morgue."

A story is told of the late William E. Gladstone and the eminent English actor John Hare, who has met with such flattering receptions when visiting the United States. Mr. Hare says that the great British statesman paid him the finest compliment he ever received. He has won fame by his clever impersonations of old men and takes such a part in "A Pair of Spectacles," which Mr. Gladstone was very fond of seeing. Sometimes, says the Saturday Evening Post, the premier of England would go behind the scenes to chat awhile with the actor. The really old man and the made up old man would sit there and talk in the most delightful way for an hour after the show.

JOHN HARE.

One day the Earl of Rosebery had Mr. Gladstone to dinner, and he also invited his friend, John Hare. The actor came in smooth shaved, looking about thirty-five. He was presented to Mr. Gladstone, and the prime minister shook his hand most cordially and remarked:

"My dear sir, I am very, very glad to meet you. I know your father very, very well. Splendid actor! Fine old man!"

It took the whole evening for the earl and Mr. Hare to convince him that this man was really the father.

Actors are notoriously fond of dogs, and Frank Campeau, who is playing the part of Trampas in "The Virginian," is the owner of a fine brindle bulldog named Tige. Last season in Grand Rapids Mr. Campeau was sitting in the lobby of the hotel where he was staying when a stranger engaged him in conversation. "That was a sad thing that happened in front of the hotel this afternoon," said the stranger. "My brother's dog was nearly chewed to death in a fight by a brindle bulldog."

"Too bad," said Campeau.

"It's a shame for people to own fierce dogs like that and allow them to run at large," continued the stranger.

"Ought to be a law against it," declared the actor. Just then the property man of the company Campeau was with rushed into the hotel wild with excitement and called out to the actor, "Tige has chewed up another pug, and the owner has had Mr. Musson arrested!"

FRANK CAMPEAU.

Mr. Musson was a fellow member of Campeau's company and had taken Tige out for an airing.

Campeau looked at the stranger, who was rapidly losing his attitude of friendly interest, then, grasping the property man by the shoulder, hurried him from the hotel. "Where is Musson?" demanded Campeau.

"In jail," answered the property man. "Where is Tige?"

"At the theater. I lugged him there by the ear."

"Let's go to the jail," said Campeau in a trembling voice.

Jail proved to be police headquarters, where the case was being tried before a police magistrate. Campeau and the property man arrived just in time to hear Musson plead guilty and see the magistrate assess him for a fine of $5. Musson paid the fine, and the party left the place.

"What did you plead guilty for?" Campeau asked Musson as they walked back toward the hotel.

"Nothing else to do. You were guilty all right, and as your understudy I played the part as near like you as I could," said Musson. "Five dollars, please."

"Here's the $5," said Campeau, "and I'll tell you a bit of news—Tige goes home tonight."

Chauncey Olcott, who is nearing the close of an unusually successful tour of the country in "Terence," is quoted as saying: "When I was in Cork last I got acquainted with one of those really good story tellers who have helped make Ireland famous. Some incident came up in the local courts which brought out the following:

"'Ah, it isn't always the l'arnin' that counts in a man. If the brains are in him they'll work without trainin', though maybe a little touchin' up doesn't hurt.

"'Now, there was me ould fri'nd Tom Sullivan, who med piles iv money on horse dealin' in Cork's own town an' was magisthrate an' all, though he couldn't tell his own name if he saw it in writin'. Well, I mind the day Sergeant Darcy brought Pete Garvey up before Tom for bein' drunk and disorderly in the public streets, as they say. Now, Darcy was a bit of a bog Latin scholar, and, thinkin' to flustrate Tom, he put the case this way, "Pete Garvey in hoc signum staggerum, your worshippum."

"'Tom looked bothered for a minit and scratched his poll. Then, with one of thim sudden jerks of his, he pointed to Garvey and thundered out without a bit of hesitation:

"'"In hoc finum bobissimum peelerum," and I declare he had to explain to thim reporter fellows who write books every day that Garvey was fined a bob, or a shillin' if ye like, for bein' drunk and disorderly. Oh, it's the brains, not the l'arnin', that counts.'"

CHAUNCEY OLCOTT.

"I live always shut in," said Sarah Bernhardt, the famous actress, when asked to give a brief account of an ordinary day in her life. "I drive in a closed carriage to the theater. Enthusiasm keeps me alive and well. The fatigue of the theater delights instead of weakening me. I go to bed at 3 in the morning and get up at 9 o'clock. I am for twelve hours in the theater without the fresh air or the daylight. At Belle Isle in the summer I am continually in the open air, for even when I am in the house the windows are wide open."

SARAH BERNHARDT

No actress has ever had more jokes made at her expense than the divine Sarah had in her younger days, when she was painfully thin and slender. Dumas the younger was once shown a picture of the great actress painted by M. Clarin. In the picture a dog was lying at Mme. Bernhardt's feet. "Ah, I see," said M. Dumas, "a picture of a dog and a bone." On another occasion a Parisian paper told a story of how Mme. Bernhardt was attacked by robbers, but escaped by hiding herself behind her parasol. Once the actress was rehearsing a piece in a Paris theater when she was suddenly called off the stage to see a friend. The manager, turning round quickly and not seeing Mme. Bernhardt, looked thoughtfully at the floor of the stage for a few seconds and then said sadly, "Ah, poor mademoiselle! She must have slipped through the boards!"

Stage Tales of Joseph Jefferson and Others

JEFFERSON AS RIP VAN WINKLE.

JOSEPH JEFFERSON while playing in Missouri boarded a notoriously slow train for St. Joseph. He went into the sleeping car, but not to go to bed, as the train was due at St. Joseph late in the evening. It dawdled along, however, and, finding that it could hardly arrive before morning, he ordered his berth made up.

As the porter finished his task Mr. Jefferson said: "This is the worst road I ever traveled on. I fancy I am in for a full night of it."

"'Deed, I reckon you is, sah," replied the porter, with a smile.

"Positively the slowest road! It'll be morning before we are there. Do you think you'll get in before I'm awake?"

"Slow road, sah! Bound to be plumb mo'nin', sah. But one of the passengers, sah, was tellin' me that you's Rip Van Winkle, the gen'leman what once went to sleep and slep' twenty years, and I reckon, sah, dat if you take one o' dem naps we'll be able to land you mighty close to St. Jo 'fore you wake, sah."

Jefferson once went by request to Catskill, N. Y., the scene of the story of "Rip Van Winkle," to produce the play. "After the performance," he said, "I was invited to a reception given in my honor at the Rip Van Winkle club. In introducing me the president of the club was greatly embarrassed over something and said:

"'Ladies and gentlemen, I—I—I wish to—to introduce to you Mr.—Mr.—Mr. Washington Irving!'"

Once when Jefferson was playing Rip Van Winkle in St. Louis he went to the theater tired by a long day's journey. The curtain rose on the third act and disclosed him deep in his twenty years' nap. Five, ten minutes elapsed, but he did not awake. The audience grew impatient. At length the gallery waxed uproarious, inquiring "if there was going to be nineteen years more of this sleeping business." Still Jefferson slept on and actually snored. Opening a small trapdoor beneath the stage, the prompter prodded Rip from below, only to see him fumble in his pocket for an imaginary railway ticket and hear him mutter, "Going clear through, conductor?" Of course this brought down the house.

Miss Julie Opp, who is Mrs. William Faversham in private life, was entertaining some friends the other day, says the New York Times, when one of the ladies present, noticing the number of women's portraits bearing affectionate dedications to her husband which adorned the parlor, inquired of her fair hostess why she allowed Mr. Faversham to keep them.

JULIE OPP.

"Allow it!" exclaimed Mrs. Faversham, with a smile. "Why, they are the pride of my life. Just think, all of those women wanted him, and I got him!"

Paderewski, it is said, can play from memory over 500 compositions. He needs to read or play a composition new to him only twice in order to memorize it and frequently after reading it over can sit down at the piano and play it without referring to the notes.

John Drew was one of a party of actors who one night after a performance in Chicago accepted a clubman's invitation to enjoy a moonlight ride on Lake Michigan.

"It was a grand night," said Mr. Drew, "and I never heard sweeter music than that which reached us on deck from the cabin. Wearied from exertion in dance and song, the company soon assembled on deck, and there carried on a subdued conversation. Clouds gathered and obscured the moon. The captain now joined our little clique, and a lady who was made timid by the darkness asked:

JOHN DREW.

"'Captain, how will you ever manage to find your way back? We cannot see a thing.'

"'Do not fear,' encouraged the mariner. 'With one eye on the stars and the other on the compass, there can be no danger.'

"'But why an eye on the stars?' questioned the actress.

"Sadness crept over the hardy features of the navigator, but as host he would not offend and, bowing graciously, said:

"'So that none of them will fall overboard.'"

CHAIRMAN SHONTS.

The Kind of Man Who Heads the Isthmian Canal Commission.

Had the question been asked a few weeks ago, "Who is Theodore P. Shonts?" few persons could have answered it. Today every one knows that he is chairman of the isthmian canal commission, which is charged with the execution of the greatest engineering enterprise of the age—the construction of a waterway to connect the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. In this position he will draw a salary of $30,000 per annum, with expenses and a furnished house thrown in. Mr. Shonts has been a remarkable individual from youth up. The achievement for which he is best remembered as a boy was that of learning 200 verses of Scripture in a week. His father, Henry D. Shonts, was born in Holland, and his mother was a French Huguenot. They were living in Crawford county, Pa., when he was born, in 1855, but when he was six years old they removed to Iowa, so that as a boy and young man he roamed the prairies of the west, rode horses bareback and standing up and leaped ditches and streams on horseback.

He went to Monmouth college, in Illinois, where he graduated in 1876, and his chum there was John T. Wallace, now chief engineer of the canal and intimately associated with him as a member of the commission's executive committee. They call each other "John" and "Teddy," and Mr. Shonts has remarked that he could work with Wallace till the crack of doom without having an unpleasant word. As a young man Shonts began the practice of law, but destiny had arranged that he should become an expert in railroad construction, and tasks of this sort soon came to hand. He built the Indiana, Iowa and Illinois railroad and sold it to the Vanderbilts. Later he purchased a large interest in the Toledo, St. Louis and Western railroad, the Clover Leaf route, and became its president, a position he still holds. He married Miss Milla Drake, sister of John A. Drake, partner of John W. Gates.

THEODORE PERRY SHONTS.

In illustration of his physical energy it is related that some ten years ago a contractor who fancied he had a grievance against him entered his office and announced to the clerks that he had called to get even with Shonts. Mr. Shonts heard the remark and, looking up from his desk in the private office, asked to have the stranger shown in. He was a strapping big fellow, but Mr. Shonts himself is about six feet and weighs 200 pounds. "I am glad you called," he remarked as he sprang up and pulled off his coat. He went after the contractor fast and furious. Crash, smash, bang, went the furniture against the walls of the room. After two or three minutes the contractor was more anxious to get out than he was to get in.

A BIG LOG CABIN.

Such Is the Forestry Building at the Lewis and Clark Centennial.

When those intrepid pathfinders, Captains Meriwether Lewis and William Clark, made their famous expedition of exploration into the northwest 100 years ago they were glad to enjoy the luxury of a log cabin's shelter. The log cabin is a type of the architecture of the early settlements in the northwest, and for this reason the Forestry building at the Lewis and Clark exposition in Portland, Ore., is constructed of logs. Two miles of logs five and six feet in diameter and fifty-two feet long were required for the building, together with eight miles of poles and tons of stakes and shingles. It is 206 feet long and 102 feet wide.

FEELS THIRTY YEARS YOUNGER.

Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. Kennedy's NEW Medicine, Warmly Praised by Mrs. Chaffee.

When Dr. David Kennedy said he regarded Cal-cura Solvent, his new medicine for the Kidneys, Liver and Blood, as the crowning achievement of his life, he made no mistake, as hundreds who have used it testify. Here is one letter from Mrs. A. F. Chaffee of Rutland, Vt., short and to the point:

"Dear Sirs:

I have never taken any medicine that did me so much good as Dr. Kennedy's latest medicine, Cal-cura Solvent. I can work hard all day and can do more work than I could even thirty years ago. I am 58 years of age and never felt better in my life" All druggists, $1.00.

Why?

Why do we always talk of putting on our coats and vests when we always put on first our vest and then our coat?

Why do we refer to the coverings of our feet as shoes and stockings when the stockings are first put on?

Why do we invite people to wipe their feet when we mean their shoes?

Why, in the olden times, did a father tell his son he would warm his jacket when every one knew he meant his pantaloons?

We Want to Send You free and prepaid, a bottle of Palmettono (Palmetto Berry Wine). Every reader of The Times will appreciate this offer as soon as they have given this wonderful remedy a trial. It quickly relieves and cures the diseased and inflamed condition of the mucous membranes throughout the body. Every stomach trouble yields to its influence and it promptly cures indigestion, dyspepsia, flatulency and catarrh. Vernal Palmettona cures constipation, clears the liver and kidneys, relieves inflammation and cures them of disease. Inflammation of the bladder and urinary passages is withdrawn and quickly cured. Do not hesitate to write to the Vernal Remedy Company, LeRoy, N. Y., and they will send you by return mail a trial bottle and booklet. Sold by druggists everywhere.

When Saddles Were First Used.

It is supposed that the saddle was invented about the middle of the fourth century, but the fact, in the opinion of some, has not been positively proved. Zonaras, the historian, tells us that Constantine the younger was killed in the year 340, when he fell from his saddle. The word translated into saddle also means, however, the back of the horse or the place where the rider sat. It is true, nevertheless, that Sidonius Apollinaris used the word that unmistakably refers to the saddletree.

Time Tried and Merit Proven.

One Minute Cough Cure is right on time when it comes to curing Coughs, Croup, Whooping Cough, etc. It is perfectly harmless, pleasant to take and is the children's favorite Cough Syrup. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington, druggists.

Ready Made.

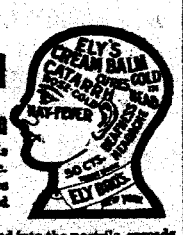
Miss Glade—Why did you choose a baldheaded man for your second husband? Mrs. Blade—Because my first husband always insisted that I worried him baldheaded, and this time I wanted to escape being blamed.—Detroit Free Press.

Announcing It.

Pauline (sarcastically)—Jack struts along as if he owned the earth. Elvira (sweetly)—No wonder. Last evening I promised to let him become my husband.

Bilious Bill was getting bloated,
And his tongue was muchly coated.
Patent "tonics" wouldn't cure him.
Companies wouldn't insure him,
All his friends were badly frightened,
But their spirits soon were lightened,
For Bill said—and they believed him,
EARLY RISER pills relieved him.

The Famous Little Pills "Early Risers" cure Constipation, Sick Headache, Biliousness, etc., by their tonic effect on the liver. They never gripe or sicken, but impart early rising energy. Good for children or adults. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington, druggists.



A Bootless Attempt.

"Ma," said Tommy Twaddles, looking up from his reading of "Terry the Tempot," "what is a bootless attempt?" "It's the sort your father makes to get in without my hearing him when he comes home late from the club," answered Ma Twaddles incisively. Pa doesn't stop to remove 'em at the foot of the stairs now. He knows it's no use.—Cleveland Leader.

Ely's Cream Balm

cleanses, soothes and heals the diseased membrane. It cures catarrh and drives away a cold in the head quickly.

Cream Balm is placed into the nostrils, spreads over the membrane and is absorbed. Relief is immediate and a cure follows. It is not drying—does not produce sneezing. Large Size, 50 cents at Druggists or by mail; Trial Size, 10 cents.

ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren Street, New York.

Waiters and Tips.

A competent waiter is not a fool by a long shot, and no man is so liberal at any other moment of his life as when he is feeding well. A first class serving man at table can wheedle a quarter or half dollar out of even a stingy blatherskite by some delicate attention, by showing just the least bit of interest in his especial welfare. A German lieutenant in hard lines is waiting in a swell hotel here. His tips amount to $10 a day. He is incognito for the present. University graduates could do quite as well. The principal trouble is that waiting is regarded as too servile, too menial, smacking too much of slavery. But good waiters make valuable friends and earn several times as much money as bank clerks and shop salesmen. And the calling might be dignified.—New York Press.

Why He Was Called "Good Friday."

Alfred Bunn, the celebrated English impresario and operatic librettist of the last century, was not always in an amiable frame of mind, and one day he was seen at a rehearsal holding a wretched "super" by the collar and scolding him savagely. The poor fellow's fright and distress, says F. J. Crowest in his biographical anecdotes of famous musicians, attracted the attention of Malibran, the famous prima donna. The lady crossed over to the manager and said:

"Do you know, I shall call you 'Good Friday.'"

"Why?" he asked.

"Because," replied Malibran, "you are such a hot cross bun."

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the Very Best.

"I have been using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and want to say that it is the best cough medicine I have ever taken," says George L. Chubb, a merchant of Harlan, Mich. There is no question about its being the best, as it will cure a cough or cold in less time than any other treatment. It should always be kept in the house ready for instant use, for a cold can be cured in much less time when promptly treated. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Generous.

"Is your husband a very generous man?"

"Indeed he is. You remember those nice cigars I gave him for a birthday present? Well, he only smoked one and gave the rest to his friends."—Pick-Me-Up.

A Long One.

"Mamma, is this the ship we're going over in?"

"Yes, Willie."

"Huh! You said it was an ocean greyhound. This ain't a greyhound. It's a dachshund."—Chicago Tribune.

Here is Relief for Women.

Mother Gray, a nurse in New York, discovered an aromatic pleasant herb drink for women's ills, called Australian-Leaf. It is the only certain monthly regulator. Cures female weaknesses and backache, kidney, bladder and urinary troubles. At all druggists or by mail 50 cents. Sample free. Address, The Mother Gray Co., LeRoy, N. Y. 5-24

A Simple Statement.

It is told of a certain minister that one Sunday morning he preached his sermon with the following notice: "Brethren, I have forgotten my notes and shall have to trust to Providence, but this evening will come better prepared."

Let me say I have used Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh and can thoroughly recommend it for what it claims. Very truly, (Rev.) H. W. Hathaway, Elizabeth, N. J.

I tried Ely's Cream Balm and to all appearances am cured of catarrh. The terrible headaches from which I long suffered are gone.—W. J. Hitchcock, late Major U. S. Vol. and A. A. Gen., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Balm does not irritate nor cause sneezing. Sold by druggists at 50 cents, or mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York.

Ancient Platinum.

The discovery of platinum was long thought to be quite modern. In the first half of the sixteenth century it was noticed that gold ore from the Spanish mines in Darien sometimes included grains of a white metal which possessed the qualities of what are called the noble metals, but there were no existing records to throw light upon the matter. As the Spaniards prohibited its export, it was another hundred years before the metal began to find its way into Europe, and it was not till about 1750 that its properties were really investigated. In 1901 M. Berthelot, the famous French savant, made an astonishing discovery in Egypt. He was examining a metal box, once the property of an Egyptian queen of the seventh century B. C., and in it he found a plate which at first sight he took to be silver, but afterward turned out to be made of an alloy of gold and platinum. Doubtless the platinum came from the alluvial deposits of the upper Nile.

One Way to Catch Frogs.

In looking over a book of travels in France, written more than 100 years ago, I came across an interesting bit about the way of catching frogs for market. The author mentions the fact that frogs were sold by the hundred in the markets, that they were classed as fish and that only the hind quarters were eaten. But to come to the main point he says: "To catch the frogs the fisherman puts one of them in a glass vessel, which he dips into a brook, on which the creature, finding itself in so strange a situation confined in the midst of water in a transparent machine, or, I may say, invisible prison, begins to croak most melodiously, and by his croaking makes multitudes of other frogs come to him on every side, as if to rescue their companion, when the frog fisher valiantly seizes his prey."—London Chronicle.

Strictly Genuine.

Most of the patent medicine testimonials are probably genuine. The following notice recently appeared in the Atchison (Kan.) Globe: "Joe Tack, a well-known engineer, running on the Missouri Pacific between Wichita and Kiowa, lately appeared in a big one, with a picture, and when he was in this office today, we asked him about it. He said he had terrific pains in his stomach and thought he had cancer. His druggist recommended Kodol and he says it cured him. He recommended it to others, who were also cured. "Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat and cures all stomach troubles. Just as surely as the sun shines your stomach can be brought back to its originally pure condition and life sweetened by this lasting and truly the greatest digestant known. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington, druggists.

True In Every Language.

Tennyson once attended a dinner where G. L. Craik proposed "The Ladies." In doing so he recalled the cynical advice given by a brother Scot to his children: "Tak my advice and dinna marry for siller. You can borrow cheaper." Some time later Tennyson at his own table repeated Mr. Craik's story, but expressed the idea without attempting dialect. His son Hallam remarked, "Surely, father, Craik did not use those words." "No, he did not. But, then, Craik is a Scotchman, and I am afraid to venture on repeating him exactly. However, it's almost as good in English as in Scotch, and it's tremendously true in both."

To Remove a Tight Ring.

If you happen to get a ring on your finger that fits so tight you cannot remove it a very easy way to get it off is as follows: Take a piece of cord or wrapping thread and push one end of it under the ring. Then, beginning just above the ring, wind the cord very tightly round and round the finger clear up to the tip of the finger. Now take hold of the end of the cord that was slipped under the ring and unwind the cord. As the string unwinds the ring will be carried along with it and removed without any difficulty.

Get SCOTT'S Emulsion

When you go to a drug store and ask for Scott's Emulsion you know what you want; the man knows you ought to have it. Don't be surprised, though, if you are offered something else. Wines, cordials, extracts, etc., of cod liver oil are plentiful but don't imagine you are getting cod liver oil when you take them. Every year for thirty years we've been increasing the sales of Scott's Emulsion. Why? Because it has always been better than any substitute for it.

HONORS TO A HERO.

John Paul Jones, Whose Body Is to Be Brought From France.

The Revolutionary hero John Paul Jones has been called the "father of the American navy," and by a singular coincidence his body has been discovered in an old Paris cemetery at just the time when the strengthening of the country's naval force is receiving so much attention. Jones was born in Scotland in 1747 and came to America about ten years before the war of the Revolution began. It was from his ship, the Ranger, that the stars and stripes first floated over the sea, and he fought twenty-three battles for the American cause. His greatest triumph was the victory he won in the Bonhomme Richard over the British warship Serapis. After the Revolution he was much in France and was very popular among the French. He died in Paris in 1792 and was buried in the old Protestant cemetery of St. Louis.

JOHN PAUL JONES AND BUILDING BENEATH WHICH HIS BODY WAS FOUND.

The records as to the burial were lost, the cemetery was abandoned, and buildings were constructed over it. For years none knew where the bones of the hero reposed. About five years ago search for them was begun. Ambassador Porter supervised the task. The whole cemetery was tunneled under, and hundreds of coffins were examined. A leaden coffin was at length exhumed, which contained the hero's remains.

THIS is the day of the natural waisted woman. The W. B. Erect Form has changed the American figure. It has supplanted discomfort with ease—it has banished the impossible and exaggerated figure produced by the old corset idea. It removes the strain of lacing from the sensitive parts of the body and throws all pressure upon the hips and the strong back muscles, supporting the stomach within the corset and not forcing it below the garment. The Erect Form is made in more models than ever before. There are forty distinct styles of this popular make, each meant for a distinct type of woman. Dealers in all sized towns and cities the land over, sell the Erect Form. Prices range upward from $1.

Bed Sores.

Bed sores are sores that form on those parts of the body that are undermost in the position taken up by the bed occupant. As a rule they never form unless the sufferer is confined to one position. When set up they are most distressing. Whisky or brandy used as a lotion to the healthy skin once daily will prevent them. When there are commencing sores they should be treated with white of egg mixed with powdered alum. The two should be well rubbed up together. If one has not a mortar and pestle it is a good plan to mix the things in a basin with a bone knife handle.

The Spring Fashion

demands many little differences of line and shape.

The coats, you will notice are longer, the shoulders better shaped, a more graceful effect obtained in the whole suit.

These little style points are better shown in Schloss garments than any other clothes we know.

And while Schloss clothes lead in style, their quality is sure as the Government stamp on a dollar bill, just as certain a guarantee of value.

These are the clothes you ought to wear, the "Best Correct Clothes for Gentlemen," simply because they mean the most value for the money, look at it however you will. We're anxious to show you the new styles and have you slip on a coat or two, just to see how they "feel." You don't have to BUY because you try, glad to see you anyway.

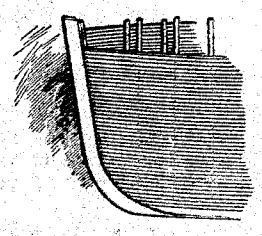
FLOURISHING INDUSTRY

Freeman Boat Company Busily Engaged in the Construction of Power Launches, Canoes and Rowboats which will Skim Lake and River as Things of Life—How Intelligence and Energy Have Succeeded. Number of Power Launches Now Being Built, and for Whom.

THERE is a certain fascination about a boat, covering the whole range of crafts, from the great ocean grayhounds, which plow the billows, freighted with humanity and "smuggled" goods, down to the feathery canoe, which skims the rapids like a thing of life.

The sail boat has its devotees—those who are content to put up with the eccentricities of old Aeolus, who scolds and blows in his rage, then smiles in his sleep at the flopping sails left far from home.



But the power-launch, driven by the little spark and a mere pocketful of vapor, can glide hither and thither at will, and laugh in the face of the winds.

For four years preceding the formation of the present company he did business upon his own resourses, and, as the demand for power-launches increased, the present company was organized Feb. 11, 1904, to give added facilities for the enlarging of the business.

Last year was a very prosperous one, and the present season shows a much larger list of orders, and during the coming Winter the company expects to construct a stock of hulls which can be finished to order upon short notice. Agencies have been established at Syracuse (W. A Abel & Co., Clinton street) and upon the Hudson River at Albany.

The prevailing model at present is the torpedo stern, which possesses many superior points over the old style "fan-tail" type This model was originated by Col. Hereschoff, and Mr. Freeman was "next" to the Colonel in adopting these lines. The torpedo stern is more graceful in appearance and skims over the surface, drawing less water, giving greater speed and leaving but little disturbance behind.

One of the most particular operations in the construction of a launch is the laying of the keel. This is a solid strip of oak about 6 inches wide by 2½ inches thick, running from stem to stern at the bottom of the boat. This keel is placed upon a long saw-horse and to the forward end is bolted the stem-post, which consists of two strips of oak bolted together and steam bent to give form to the bow, and at the opposite end the stern-post is likewise fastened.

Showing "Carvel" or Calk-seam.

Next must be the determining of the water-line, which is done so precisely that there is no guess work as to how the boat will ride the water.

The water-line depends upon the number of inches that the keel is bent upward from about midship to the stern-post. Having laid the keel carefully and true, boards tapering at both ends are placed at either side of the keel; these are called garboards, and to these the siding or planking is nailed, strip upon strip, until the proper height is reached for the deck work.

From the ceiling above, forms are suspended, around which the siding is placed, giving correct contour to the boat.

M. C. FREEMAN, President.

The Freeman construction is distinctive. Other builders use what is called the "Carvel" style of placing the siding; that is, the siding is cut in from four to six-inch strips and one strip placed against the other and nailed to the ribs. The joint or seam between the boards is then calked with cotton and a sort of cement. As the boards shrink after being taken from the water these seams open up more or less, and it is necessary to recalk the boat—a bothersome process. Mr. Freeman cuts his siding, which is cypress, into one-inch strips, then concaves and convexes the edges. The concave edge is placed upon the convex, and, being slightly narrower, grasps it tightly, and the boards are securely nailed together, making practically one solid board. The "shrink" of the wood is thus equalized among four or five seams and needs no calking and never leaks.

After the siding is all placed, the ribs, which are long strips of young oak, are placed in a steam box, and when withdrawn can be bent into any form; these are bent to the form of the boat and nailed first to the keel, then to the siding. A hull ready for the ribs looks much like a porcupine—it bristles with innumerable copper nails all placed, ready to drive down and clinch to the ribs.

The deck work and interior finish of the Freeman boat are features which have added to its beauty and reputation.

The decks are constructed of narrow strips of cherry or mahogany, and in laid with black-walnut, while the interior is lined with panel and scroll work, and finished in natural wood. This requires the skill of the cabinet-maker.

One of the most laborious tasks is the placing of the skeag, which is the thick plank at the bottom of the boat and through the center of which revolves the shaft to which the propeller is attached.

A hole must be bored with an auger the entire length of this skeag which varies from two feet to five feet, and also up through the keel to the engine.

The workmen consider this a great "bore" and avoid it if possible.

Every part of the shop is a scene of activity at present, as this is the rush of the season, in putting on the finishing touches, installing the engines, and getting all ready for the launching.

One of the finest launches of the season is nearing completion for Mr. Steuber, of the Eastman Kodak Company of Rochester. It is twenty-six feet long and finished in solid mahogany—the arrow heads in the deck being of especially beautiful wood.

The interior is arranged with lockers in both bow and stern and the engine is placed well 'foreship, giving room for several comfortable wicker chairs The fittings are of the best; there is installed a Buffalo engine of 7½ horsepower.

Mr. Steuber saw the Freeman boat at the State Fair last season, and after visiting several of the largest and high-grade manufacturies, he came to Fulton and placed this order. Getting Mr. Freeman's price in a general way he said: "Here are my specifications; go ahead and do your best, and present your bill." He will use the boat during this season, then turn it over to his son, and he is now preparing specifications for a new forty-five foot cabin launch to be constructed during the coming Winter.

In another part of the shop is a thirty-foot launch nearly completed for Mr. Wilbur H. Selleck of Oswego. This is most complete in its appointments. It has a wide beam and is especially for use upon the large lakes, as a family boat. The lockers and engine occupy the forward part, and the stern will be a veritable drawing-room with every comfort provided that could be expected. It is equipped with a ten horsepower engine of the Buffalo make. A collapsible hood completes the outfit.

Two boats of equal size twenty-four feet are ready for the finish, built for Messrs. Taylor and Arnold of Albany, the latter being secretary of the State Fair Commission.

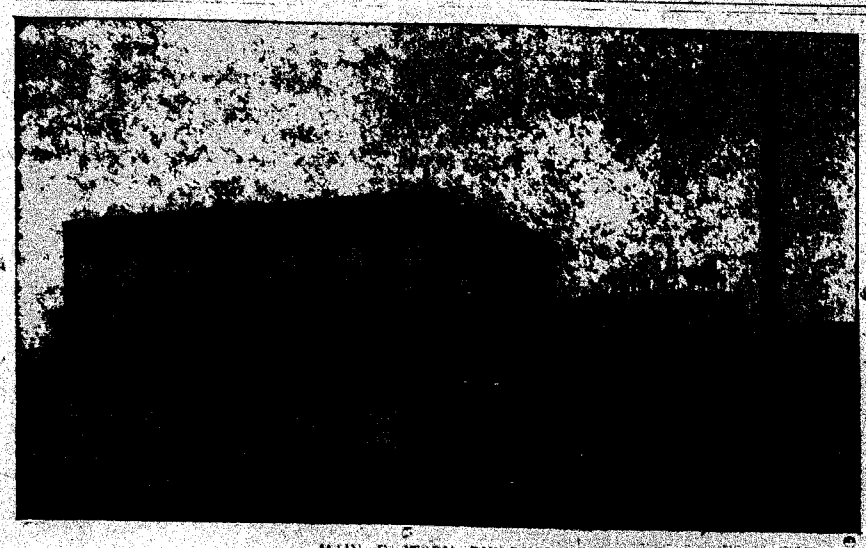
These are built upon good speed lines, and with six horsepower engines will easily make ten to twelve miles per hour.

Another twenty four foot launch is nearly ready for Mr. George Driesback of Syracuse. Mr. Driesback purchased a boat last season from another firm; he now wants something better and is getting it. His outfit will be very desirable.

Mr. Cushman, the resident Barge Canal engineer, has just launched his twenty-four foot boat, and expresses himself as well pleased with the model, workmanship, finish, etc.

Other boats upon this floor are a twenty-eight foot for Mr. Charles Smith of Baldwinsville.

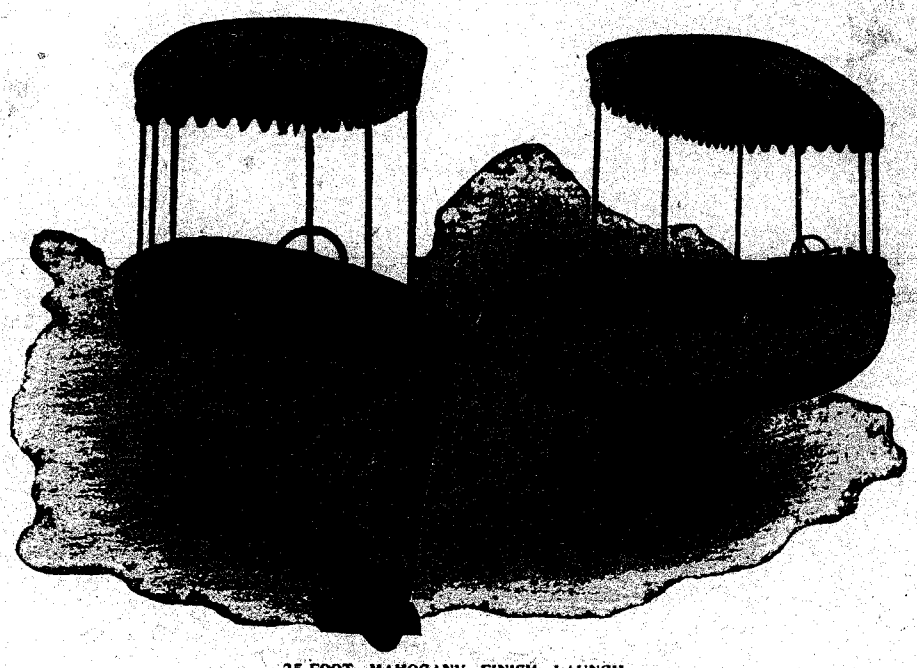
A twenty-six foot for Attorney Shea of Baldwinsville, and other smaller sizes, while upon the forms is a twenty-eight foot hull for the Hon. T. D. Lewis.



The next upon the forms will be a twenty-eight foot launch for Attorney Thos. H. King of Oswego.

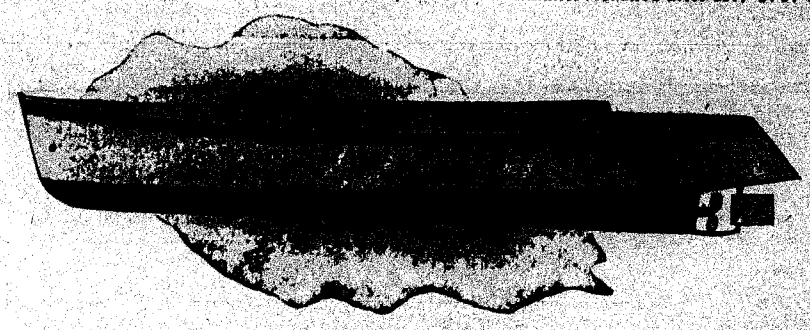
The motor-boat industry is in its infancy, and as the gasoline engines are perfected and the prices become lowered through brisk competition, it will be possible for a man of very limited means indeed to enjoy this exhilarating pleasure upon the beautiful lakes and rivers which this State is fortunate in possessing.

In the row boat and canoe department the work is carried on along lines similar to those of larger boats—the same manner of construction and quality of finish that have given the Freeman row boats and canoes an enviable reputation.



A large addition to the shop is contemplated in the form of additional finishing-room space.

Altogether, it is one of Fulton's flourishing and substantial industries, and an hour spent at the shop is one of much interest.



MAIN FACTORY BUILDING.

In Addition there are Storehouses, Lumber Sheds, etc, covering three-quarters of an acre of land. Plant equipped with modern machinery, facilitating the construction of any sized boat, from 10-pound canoe to 60-foot Cabin Cruiser.

Oswego Yacht Club.

The first regular meeting of the Oswego Yacht Club, for the season 1905, was held on Friday evening, was well attended and the enthusiasm displayed by the members with fruit in a successful season. The yacht club has decided to join the American Power Boat Association, New York City. The decision was reached after Mr. J. J. Parker of the city, maker of the Parker gasoline engines, joined the club.

Ten new members were elected, the list including Professor C. M. Courboin, organist at St. Paul's church, who will have a fine new naphtha boat; Joseph Sawyer, who has a craft that will be added to the fleet; Elwood Dimont and W. H. Selleck, both of whom will have new power boats; John J. Clancy, Attorney H. C. Mizen, and C. H. Boardman, J. J. Parker, Herbert Keys and Roy H. Kelley, Fulton.

Elliot B. Mott, who was one of the charter members of the club when it was organized about twenty-four years ago, and who for many years was one of the most active yachtsmen on Lake Ontario, was, by unanimous vote, placed on the honorary list of members.

We have been in Fulton for eight years and we have always tried to live up to the reputation "That we try to sell goods only of the highest grade of excellence: that our goods are above the average in quality, and are sold for what they are worth with only a 'living' profit: furthermore that we can be relied on to make good any reasonable claims our customers may make." Can any store truthfully claim to do more for their customers.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY WILLIAM B. BAKER.

District Attorney William B. Baker is a candidate for renomination. Mr. Baker has deservedly won the commendation of the electors of this county, Republican and Democratic, by his close attention to duty; his efficiency in the management of the office he has held for one term and the faithful discharge of the exacting labors connected with it. A lawyer of pronounced ability, he has shown exceptional fitness in every emergency.

It is not probable that Mr. Baker will have any opposition to the renomination to which he honorably aspires, but should he receive it, his party will give him the full strength of its vote at the polls.

The TIMES takes pleasure in indorsing Mr. Baker's candidacy because he has performed his duty and performed it well, and because he does what he thinks is right, without fear or favor, and does it as hard as he can. His renomination would be creditable to the Republican party, and it would also be a deserving recognition of meritorious services rendered the county.

Volney Paper Company's Storehouse Burned.

The fire department was called on Wednesday at midnight to the storehouse of the Volney Paper Company, located about 300 feet north of the Hunter Arms factory, which was filled with rags and had kindled from spontaneous combustion. The fire department was notified of the fire before the bell sounded, as the watchman at the engine house had discovered the reddening sky and gave the alarm.

The fire had progressed too far for the firemen to save the storehouse, which is owned by Mr. William White and Mrs. Stevens of Auburn, or the contents, so attention was turned to the saving of the immence pile of coal belonging to the Victoria Paper Company, which is near the storehouse. Several boat houses were also threatened and for some time the prospects were good for a more serious conflagration The firemen worked all night before the fire was sufficiently subdued to leave. The loss was slight.

SCHOOL COMMISSIONER

Mr. Frederick Randall of Granby a Candidate from This District

Mr. Frederick Randall of Granby is a candidate for the office of school commissioner of this district. Mr. Randall is 47 years of age and has been a lifelong resident of Granby, with the exception of about ten years spent at South Hannibal.

After receiving a thorough common school education, Mr. Randall was graduated from Falley Seminary. His experience covers a period of fifteen years as teacher and principal of schools in Oswego and Onondaga counties; he was at one time principal of the Oswego Falls graded school of five department, with 300 pupils registered, which position he held for seven consecutive terms, at a time when no aid was given by the compulsory education law or teachers' contract for hiring.

Mr. Randall's success in this and other schools furnishes unmistakable evidence of his ability to solve difficult problems of school management and to perform the clerical functions of the office of school commissioner.

While Mr. Randall has served one term on the auditing board of his town; is now inspector of election and has always been a consistent worker in the ranks of the Republican party, he has never asked any favors

Mr. Randall was licensed as a teacher of the first grade while teaching in both the above named counties and his many years of experience in teaching the same grade of schools that would come under a commissioner's jurisdiction, pre-eminently qualify him for the duties of the office, especially as he enjoys the reputation of being conscientious and fearless in the discharge of duty public duty.

An Olds light-touring car, twenty-horse power, was brought to Fulton on Thursday and Mr. C. M. Curtis the agent for this city and vicinity, invited a number of prominent citizens to test the endurance and reliability of the machine. A severe test was made at Crosby Hill, with a party of five the ascent was made, turning at top when the engine was shut down and the machine was controlled by brake; without turning, the machine was backed up the hill. A trip was made to Minetto, with a party of five, returning in 22 minutes; to Hannibal, returning in 33 minutes; on the return trip to Syracuse the car made the distance in 1¼ hours with three passengers besides the chaffeur—four in car. It was a very successful test, and all who were permitted to ride speak in the highest terms of the machine.

A Good Suggestion.

Mr. C. B. Wainwright of Lemon City, Fla., has written the manufacturers that much better results are obtained from the use of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in cases of pains in the stomach, colic and cholera morbus by taking it in water as hot as can be drank. That when taken in this way the effect is double in rapidity. "It seems to get at the right spot instantly," he says. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

The May American Boy.

Better and better, is the motto, evidently, of The American Boy. Nothing attempted in the line of literature for boys quite equals this sterling, high class monthly. Baseball is the keynote to the May American Boy, as is hinted on its front cover. The noted baseball player of olden times, A. G. Spaulding, contributes the first part of a story of the origin of baseball. The fiction includes "A boy's adventure with a Piru Condor;" a Decoration Day story entitled, "The ministration of a child;" a fishing story, "Towhead and the old 'he-one';" the first chapter of a story, "A page without a pull," whose hero is a page in the United States Congress; and exciting adventure in the frozen North, entitled, "How Adam Nugent brought the mail;" a story of humor, "The conquest of Mickey McCloskey," and a number of short stories under the titles, "An equatorial shark catch," "In the thick of the fight," and "A heaven for lions." Further chapters of Kirk Munroe's "For the Mikado," "My four years at West Point," and "A French frog and an American eagle" also appear. Boys of a practical turn of mind will find much of interest and profit in this number, particularly in the Money-Making and the Boy Mechanic and Electrician Departments, "How to build an Auto-Wagon" and "How to make a Telephone," being the two leading articles under the latter head. It would be difficult to conceive of a boys' paper of more general interest than the paper before us. Seventy-three illustrations. $1.00 a year. The Sprague Publishing Co., Detroit, Mich.

In Your Home.

An up-to-date daily newspaper is not a luxury but a necessity, especially when the cost is less than a cent a day The Syracuse Daily Post-Standard is certainly complete in every detail of its make-up, and to residents of R. F. D. routes and small villages where it has no agents costs only $3 per year, or $1.50 for six months.

People Should Know How Mr. Miller Was Cured of Kidney and Bladder Trouble by Dr. Kennedy's NEW Medicine, Cal-cura Solvent.

MATTEAWAN, N. Y., Sept. 28, 1901.
Dr. David Kennedy Estate,
Kennedy Row, Rondout, N. Y.,
Gentlemen:

I have been troubled with my Kidneys and Bladder for three or four years and doctored with many physicians without obtaining any help.

A few months ago I decided to try Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. Kennedy's latest medicine, and am thankful to say I am now practically cured. You have not asked me for a testimonial but I wish to tell you what Cal-cura Solvent has done for me and hope that others may be so happily relieved. Yours truly,

WILLIAM H. MILLER.

The Man Eating Battas.

The man eating Battas of North Sumatra have a postal system. They make use of hollow tree trunks at cross roads, and these primitive letter boxes are largely patronized by young men and women, who read and write and correspond in a degraded native script, which is traced on palm leaves in vertical lines that run upward and from left to right. These Battas, though undoubted cannibals, are skilled in agriculture and in raising stock. They form large communities, have an organized government, hereditary chiefs, popular assemblies and a written civil and penal code. Their picturesque dwellings have been compared to Swiss chalets, and the ground floor is reserved for their live stock. For their skill in ironwork, pottery and weaving they are probably indebted to Hindoo teaching, and their repulsive habit is combined with a belief in a triune deity, Creator, Preserver and Destroyer.

Why Suffer From Rheumatism?

Why suffer from rheumatism when one application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm will relieve the Pain? The quick relief which this liniment affords makes rest and sleep possible, and that alone is worth many times its cost. Many who have used it hoping only for a short relief from suffering have been happily surprised to find that after a while the relief became permanent. Mrs. V. H. Leggett of Yum Yum, Tennesee, U. S. A., writes: "I am a great sufferer from rheumatism, all over from head to foot, and Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only thing that will relieve the pain." For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

The Baldheaded Eagle.

The staid, dignified and homely baldheaded eagle, the glorious emblem of the American republic, mates but once and lives with his one mate until he or she dies. If left a widower—even a young widower—the baldheaded eagle never mates again. He remains alone and disconsolate in the nest on the rocky crag or in the branches of a tall pine that formed his domicile while his mate was alive. No other female eagle can tempt him to forsake his disconsolate life.

What Is the Meaning of "Vulgar?"

Sir Walter Scott's daughter once spoke in his hearing of something she could not endure because it was vulgar. "My dear," replied her father, "you speak like a very young lady. Do you know, after all, the meaning of this word 'vulgar?' It is only common. Nothing that is common, except wickedness, can deserve to be spoken of with contempt. When you have lived to my years you will be disposed to agree with me in thanking God that nothing really worth having or caring about in this world is uncommon."—Lockhart's "Life of Scott."

A Stickler For Promptness.

A certain merchant in Boston is noted for being a stickler in the matter of promptness to the extent that he has been known to walk out of church because the services did not begin promptly and to leave his sister alone in a strange city because she was four minutes late in keeping an appointment. Not long ago he overheard a forceful exposition of his peculiarity.

He had walked out to his stable and was about to go in when he heard the new groom within say to the coachman, "Is it thrue, Dolan, that the boss is cracked about doing things on time and goes into a fit whin annybody is late?"

"Thrue? Thrue?" cried Dolan. "Let me tell you, Ryan, how thrue it is. If the boss had promised to mate himself at iliven o'clock and was late he'd find himself gone whin he got there. That's how thrue it is!"

Leprosy.

Smallpox, or variola, was not known to the Romans before the sixth century. Leprosy is as different from it as palsy is from St. Vitus' dance. What is this awful disease? Something endemic, chronic, malignant, with cutaneous lesion. It is a scabious affliction of a dreadful character, attacking nations negligent of cleanliness and the decencies of life. All that France and England gained by engaging in the crusades was leprosy, and of all that they took leprosy was the only thing that remained with them. In olden times every man laboring under the disease was imprisoned like a thief or a robber. Moth holes and the mildew on wall were believed to be the effects of leprosy.—New York Press.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the Very Best.

"I have been using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and want to say that it is the best cough medicine I have ever taken," says George L. Chubb, a merchant of Harlan, Mich. There is no question about its being the best, as it will cure a cough or cold in less time than any other treatment. It should always be kept in the house ready for instant use, for a cold can be cured in much less time when promptly treated. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

The Dog Spider.

The giant of the whole spider family is the "hound" or "dog" spider of Madagascar. Its body weighs almost a pound, and each of its eight legs is longer and larger in diameter than the common cedar pencil. Each of its mandibles is three-fourths of an inch in length and very strong. The dog spider does not spread a net and lie in wait for its prey, as do the gigantic bird spiders of Ceylon, but "follows the trail" in exact imitation of a hound. It will follow a faint scent to and fro through the weeds and underbrush until the course is ascertained and then suddenly dart off in a bee line and quickly overtake the lizard, rat, mole or other animal of which it is in pursuit. It has been known to capture and kill lizards a foot or more in length, and Professor Barnaby tells of one which pounced upon and killed a full grown rat. The dog spider is said to be the only variety among the larger species of spiders which is absolutely nonvenomous, there being no more danger in its bite than there is in that of a squirrel or a rabbit.

Didn't Work.

A new soprano was needed to fill a vacancy in the church choir, and there were a lot of applicants. Each chose her own music, the idea being to allow the candidates to show off to best advantage. One young woman sang a "piece" which began, "Turn me not away." She was turned away notwithstanding.

How to Ward Off Old Age.

The most successful way of warding off the approach of old age is to maintain a vigorous digestion. This can be done by eating only food suited to your age and occupation, and when any disorder of the stomach appears take a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets to correct it. If you have a weak stomach or are troubled with indigestion, you will find these Tablets to be just what you need. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggists.

A New Language Method.

If a person has, as the Celts say "only one side to his tongue" and wishes to add to his resources in the matter of language it might be well for him to apply to an old man in Scotland, whose methods of instruction are simple. They are described in "Scenes In Scotland" by Mr. Sinclair.

A lady visiting in the north of Scotland wished to get some idea of the Gaelic and employed an old native to give her a course of language lessons. The Scotsman took the Bible for the text book, and, opening it at the beginning of Genesis, he said:

"Now, ma'am, I'll read this to you in the Gaelic, and you'll see yourself how it will go."

With solemn intonation and an appealing, triumphant glance toward the lady at the end of every clause, he loudly read the first four verses and paused to watch the effect. Then he said in a tone of deep conviction:

"Now, ma'am, if you'll take your own Bible and turn to that chapter and read it in English you'll see it's just the selfsame thing."

The old man was much surprised that the lady did not continue her lessons.

Lew Wallace's Unwritten Novel.

General Lew Wallace had in mind an American novel. He once said that it was his intention to write this story after he had completed his memoirs. His theme was the striving of Americans to accomplish wonderful things in an incredibly short time. His hero was to be a restless American who lived for a few years in Europe, then in Australia, in Africa and in South America and who finally, after years of wandering, returns to his own country only to start again upon his journey, never satisfied, never happy, the spirit of an Indian within him and the childlike desire to see new scenes. In each of these countries his hero was to accomplish worthy deeds, and when he returns to his own country it is with the intention of leading the life of a son of the soil, but his hero finds he cannot do so. The story would have been suggestive of "The Wandering Jew," with the element of religious controversy eliminated.—Success.

Strictly Genuine.

Most of the patent medicine testimonials are probably genuine. The following notice recently appeared in the Atchison (Kan.) Globe: "Joe Tack, a well-known engineer, running on the Missouri Pacific between Wichita and Kiowa, lately appeared in a big one, with a picture, and when he was in this office today, we asked him about it. He said he had terrific pains in his stomach and thought he had cancer. His druggist recommended Kodol and he says it cured him. He recommended it to others, who were also cured. "Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat and cures all stomach troubles. Just as surely as the sun shines your stomach can be brought back to its originally pure condition and life sweetened by this lasting and truly the greatest digestant known. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington, druggists.

A Human Rattler.

The baby had swallowed two buttons a dime and three marbles.

For a moment his optimistic father seemed a trifle disheartened. But presently he regained his equanimity.

"It saves me the expense of buying a rattle for him," he chuckled as he dandled the infant on his knee.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Her Figure.

Fred — She is anything but handsome, and she hasn't even got a good figure. Joe—I'll admit she isn't a prize beauty, but she is worth a half million in her own right, and if that isn't a handsome figure then I'm no mathematician.

Wanted a Ceremony.

Ethel—Ma, I want some water to christen my doll. Ethel's Ma—No, dear. It is wrong, you know. Ethel—Well, then, I want some wax to waxinate her. She's old enough now to have something done to her.

The Coming Lewis and Clark Exposition

MOUNTAINS and lakes and rivers, terraces and gardens and wooded hills and dales make the setting of the Lewis and Clark exposition which opens on June 1 at Portland, Ore. At Chicago, Buffalo and St. Louis thousands—yes, millions—of dollars were spent in creating landscape scenery. This has not been necessary at the fair which is to commemorate the explorations of Lewis and Clark 100 years ago, for nature did the work before man arrived on the scene, and all the builders of the fair had to do was to put on a few finishing touches. The buildings are nestled at the base of the foothills of the Cascade range. The site embraces a natural park and a lake, which together cover 406 acres. The principal buildings are on a slight elevation, and terraces extend from them to the lake.

WILLIAM CLARK.

One may see in the distance the grand works of Mother Nature, the snow capped peaks of lofty mountains outlined against the blue sky; the Willamette river threads its course near by, and a glimpse may be had of the sparkling waters of the Columbia.

The western world's fair, as this exposition has sometimes been called, is the first international exposition to be held on the Pacific coast or west of the Rocky mountains. Millions of residents of the far west have never seen an exposition. The fair, which celebrates the achievements of courageous explorers a century ago, is intended to further commerce between the Pacific coast and Asia and Oceania, and its full name is the Lewis and Clark Centennial and American Pacific Exposition and Oriental fair. The European and oriental buildings are the first of their kind. At all previous fairs the European and oriental exhibits have been distributed through a number of structures, according to grouping and classification. With the exception of the Forestry building, a vast structure of logs which forms an exhibit in forestry itself, the buildings of the Lewis and Clark centennial are in the style of the Spanish renaissance, which harmonize well with the setting of the fair.

The amusement street stretches along the water's edge from the Bridge of Nations, and is called the Trail. The grounds will be adorned with statuary, and a place of honor will be given to the bronze statue of Sacajawea, the Indian girl who led Captain Meriwether Lewis and Captain William Clark through the wilds of the Rockies. She joined the explorers soon after they set out from St. Louis in May, 1804, and guided them until the shores of the Pacific were sighted, about a year and a half later, remaining with the expedition until the homeward journey was partly finished and performing many heroic deeds. The statue of Sacajawea is by Miss Alice Cooper of Denver. Another work of sculpture of historic significance stands in Portland's city park and is entitled "The Coming of the White Man." It portrays an Indian chief and a young brave and is by the noted New York sculptor Herman A. MacNeil, whose success in the handling of Indian subjects is well known. The young brave welcomes the white men, whose canoes have been discerned around the bend in the river, but the aged chief, with more prophetic eye, gives them a sullen and defiant greeting.

THIS is the day of the natural waisted woman. The W. B. Erect Form has changed the American figure. It has supplanted discomfort with ease—it has banished the impossible and exaggerated figure produced by the old corset idea. It removes the strain of lacing from the sensitive parts of the body and throws all pressure upon the hips and the strong back muscles, supporting the stomach within the corset and not forcing it below the garment. The Erect Form is made in more models than ever before. There are forty distinct styles of this popular make, each meant for a distinct type of woman. Dealers in all sized towns and cities the land over, sell the Erect Form. Prices range upward from $1.

Fourteenth Century Life.

In the fourteenth century people lived in mud huts, with a rough door and no chimney. It was not till a century later that the erection of a chimney was considered more than an indulgence in luxury, a fire commonly being built against the mud plastered wall of the hut and the smoke escaping through the roof. All furniture was of wood. Most persons slept on straw pallets, with a log of wood for a pillow. Even the nobility had no glass in the windows during this time. Cleanliness was not a characteristic of the people, and Thomas a'Becket was considered more than necessarily nice because he had the floor of his house strewn with fresh straw each day.

MARRIED.

Mr. Gerry Byer and Miss Nellie Flynn, both of this city were united in marriage on Wednesday by the Rev. P. J. Kearney. The bride who was gowned in gray lansdown was attended by Miss Emma Chetney who wore blue silk. The groomsman was Mr. Harry Blodgett.

DIED.

Louis, the infant twin son of Mr and Mrs. Louis Levi died at their home in Harrison street this morning. The funeral will be held on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment in St. Marys.

Mary, aged 83, widow of the late John C. Harrington of Granby Centre, died on Sunday at the home of her only son, Mr. Jay C Harrington, in Rochester, and the remains were brought to this city on Tuesday for interment in Granby Centre. The deceased was well known in this vicinity, having resided in Granby Centre for forty years.

Julia M. Gilbert, aged 78, widow of T. G. Gilbert, died suddenly at her home in Phoenix on Friday morning. The deceased had been a life-long resident of that place, and is survived by one son, George Gilbert of Phoenix; two brothers, Theodore of West Winfield, N. Y.; George of Jamesville, and one granddaughter, Mrs. R. D. M. Decker of Phoenix. Funeral services were held on Monday.

Frank B. Boughton, aged 35, died at his home in Oswego on Wednesday, after an illness of three weeks, first with measles and later with laryngitis. Heart failure was the cause for death. The deceased was one of Oswego's most popular and prominent business and fraternity men, and genuine sorrow at his death is felt on all sides. He was well known in this city where he had frequently visited his wife's relations, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McCormack.

Lelia Pooler, wife of Dr. James Guy Pratt, died at their home in Normalville, Pa., on Saturday morning after several weeks of suffering from which death could be the only release. The news of her death was not unexpected by her friends, but its coming filled them with inexpressible sadness. It seemed such a short time since she was a favorite teacher in the Phillip street school and still shorter since she left the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Pooler, a radiant bride, that her death can hardly be reconciled. Her parents were with her during the last hours of her life and did all in their power to assuage her suffering and to soften the blow for the young husband. An infant son that will never know a mother's care and love, is left. The remains were brought to this city on Monday and the funeral was held from the parents' home this Wednesday at 2 o'clock, the Rev. John Richards officiating.

Resolutions of Respect

At a regular meeting of the Council of the Volunteer Fire Department of the city of Fulton the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, In view of the loss we have sustained through the death of our friend and associate, Frank Smith, first assistant chief, and of the still heavier loss sustained by those who were nearer and dearer to him; therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is but a just tribute to the memory of the departed to say that in regretting his removal from our midst we mourn for one who was in every way worthy of our respect and regard.

Resolved, That we sincerely condole with the family of the deceased, regretting the dispensation with which it has pleased Divine Providence to afflict them, and commend them for consolation to Him who orders all things for the best, and whose chastisement was meant in mercy.

Resolved, That this heartfelt testimonial of our sympathy and sorrow be forwarded to the family of our departed friend.

Resolved, That our charter be draped in mourning for thirty days, and a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of the meeting.

CHORAL SOCIETY.

Concert of Unusual Excellence Given in Presbyterian Church.

The Concert given by the Fulton Choral Society last Wednesday evening in the Presbyterian church was artistic and throughly enjoyable. The soloists, chorus and orchestra were in the utmost harmony; there was not a discordant note, and the effect elicited commendation and applause from an appreciative audience which filled the sacred edifice to the extent that there was "standing room" only for late comers.

Mr. John Shaver's superb bass voice was heard to splendid advantage in an solo, and the audience insisted on a encore. Although a resident of Syracuse, Mr. Shaver is well-known in Fulton.

Miss Franc LaLonde's solo in "Inflammatus" was enjoyed. Her voice was sweet and in tuneful accord with Rossini's masterpiece.

The clarinet solo by Mr. Henry Bogue was so well executed that it called for an encore.

Mrs. F. W. Stearne, Mrs. A. H. Grant, Messrs. H. A. McFarland, A. E. Kraus, C. M. Allen and J. H. Shaver were selected to render "What from Vengeance" (from the opera of Lucia) and the effect was to bring out in pleasing contrast Mrs. Stearne's soprano and Mrs. Grant's rich contralto voices. The singing of the remainder of the sextette was equally artistic.

Miss Georgetta Foster is a pronounced favorite. She sings delightfully and the audience was not disappointed in her contralto solo, "Springtide," nor in the encore which followed.

The Choral Society was heard to excellent advantage in Mendelssohn's "Judge Me, O God."

The closing piece was Gounod's "Gallia," the soloist being Mrs. Thomas Hunter, while the Choral Society and orchestra rendered the chorus. Mrs. Hunter sang the technically difficult score in a faultless and graceful manner.

Prof. Grove L. Marsh of Syracuse deserves the thanks of Fulton residents for the capable manner in which the concert was rendered. He has certainly won new laurels as an instructor and leader.

A full measure of credit is also due Mr. T. H. Webb for securing so admirable an orchestra.

It is sincerely hoped that the Choral Society will maintain an interest in so creditable an institution and that the organization will be come permanent.

It is not often that an opportunity is afforded for practice under such a capable instructor as Prof. Marsh, and the advantage should be apparent to all who desire to cultivate the art of singing.

The society will resume rehearsals in the Fall.

The officers of the society are:

President, Rev. A. H. Grant; vice-president, Mrs. L. Fowler Joy; secretary and treasurer, T. H. Webb.

Executive Committee—Rev. W. L. Sawtelle, Miss Georgetta Foster and Mr. W. J. Furness.

A Perfect Fit

isn't the result of guesswork and chance—believe us

The splendid fit of Schloss garments is the outcome of twenty-five years' experience making clothes as good as they can be made. The lines correspond gracefully to the natural lines of your figure because the fittings were made with MEN—not dummies—for models.

And just as one live man is worth many wooden manikins, so a Schloss garment is worth a houseful of ordinary garments.

We'd like you to get that idea firmly fixed in your head; because the sooner you do the sooner you'll have clothes that are really satisfactory.

Don't take our bare word for it—see the clothes themselves and then judge for yourself. You're more than welcome to examine and try on anything we have, and under no obligation to buy unless you wish.

Fit and fashion, fabric and findings match the product of the finest tailor—so what's the use paying his exhorbitant price?

FAIRBANKS--STRANAHAN

Boom Launched by Republican Club at Valdez, Alaska, for Fairbanks and Stranahan in 1908—Business and Social Customs in Alaska and New York Compared — How Fickle Fortune is Woed and Won—Capital Required to Build Railroads and Open up Lines of Communication—Territory Neither Barren Nor Frigid—Friends in Congress Needed.

Mr. E. A. Henderson, a son of Mr. Orrin Henderson of this city, has been a resident of Alaska for several years and now holds the position of clerk of the District Court of Valdez, Alaska. He has written the following interesting letter to a relative in this city and permission has been obtained to publish it. Mr. Henderson is a trained journalist, having held responsible editorial positions on the Chicago Tribune and other reputable western newspapers. The letter is replete with valuable information regarding a section of Uncle Sam's territory of which little is practically known:

It is impossible for you to realize, Mr. Henderson states, how unlike are the social and business customs in New York and Alaska. The very people are as of a different race. In the most matter of fact way people accept matters here that would create scandal and consternation in New York. Environment has removed all lines of social demarkation. We have no Sunday, and the gambler is considered as good a man and a more enterprising and progressive citizen than the minister. We are a race of consumers and not of producers.

There is nothing that grows in the temperate zone that will not grow in abundance in Alaska, yet scarcely a pound of food is raised in the whole territory. In a country where oats will yield enormously self-sown, not a bushel is raised. Oats sell at 18 cents a pound in the interior and eggs at $65 a case, yet no one will take the trouble to produce them. There are men in Alaska who never heard of a coin as small as a nickel. People come here to get rich, and they either do so quickly or not at all. The man who is content to acquire a competence slowly and surely by legitimate methods, is so small in number that he is not considered as a factor in Alaskan life.

Not by any means do all men acquire wealth who come here, but many do. There is little of waiting; it is get rich quick or not at all. Instances are innumerable where men have come to Alaska that were ignorant and poor beyond comparison and in thirty days have acquired fortunes of half a million or more dollars.

One of the members of our last grand jury was a Mr. Hempel, who came to Alaska with $15,000 in cash, which he put into a sheep-raising experiment on one of the Aleutian Islands. What sheep the bears did not eat up were drowned by the tides or died of disease, and when court adjourned he started for Fairbanks with $300 in his pocket, being every cent he possessed in the world. His home and everything he had was mortgaged. One year before, he had grubstaked a friend (i. e. given him provisions for a prospecting tour for one-half of all he discovered while the food lasted), and his friend had gone over into the Tanana Valley and located some mines. On arriving at Fairbanks, Mr. Hempel went to his friend, whom he found had staked some rich property, and he immediately deeded over to him for the $100 grubstake, an interest in eight good mines. Out of one of the mines they took $30,000 in gold in a space 20x40 feet square. Mr. Hempel, who was broke when court adjourned sixty days ago, has now been offered $250,000 for his properties which cost him $100, and I know this to be a fact.

A layman (i. e. one who works for a percentage of the gold he digs out of another man's claim) over in the Fairbanks district secured an option on a claim for $30,000, payable six months from date in gold coin. When the six months were up, he had taken twice the purchase price from the ground, but there was no gold coin in the camp. The owner insisted on the letter of the contract and would not take uncoined gold or paper currency. The buyer had to travel to Nome and back, a distance of 1,000 miles, to get the coin and submitted to the terms of a contract whereby he forfeited $300 a day during the thirty or more days he was gone to convert his gold dust into coin. A town lot in Fairbanks that a friend of mine bought for $100 one year ago, he receives now $400 a month ground rent.

I could tell you true stories of this kind by the dozens, and yet not all the people of Alaska are so fortunate. I know miners who have prospected for ten years and undergone all kinds of hardships that have not a roof over their heads today nor a dollar in their pocket.

Only people without a dollar in the world come here. What Alaska needs is capital, and what capital needs to do in Alaska is to build roads and railroads, and open up lines of communication. Once that is done, Alaska will prove itself to be the richest and best territory that Uncle Sam owns.

The popular impression of Alaska is that it is barren and frigid, and that notion has done the territory wonderful harm. It is in the interior no colder than Minnesota. On the coast where I live, the climate is no more severe than in Maryland. I have not worn a pair of gloves all Winter nor an overcoat since Christmas. Only once has the thermometer gone as low as zero. A Mr. Blodgett, who lives here spent a part of the Winter in Vermont and he told me he nearly froze to death. You have had more cold weather in Fulton this Winter than this particular part of Alaska could show in ten years. You might be surprised if I told you that for the first time in six years, and probably longer, enough ice formed in Valdez harbor this Winter to allow of two days of skating. This was the second time in history that ice ever formed on the surface of water here. This would seem a strange and contradictory statement if at the same time I should tell you another truth which is that two miles back of Valdez is a glacier which contains enough ice to supply the State of New York for 100 years. In two hours' time I could walk to a point on this glacier where there is a crevasse into which a stone may be thrown that will fall 1,000 feet between walls of ice before it would strike bottom.

What Alaska needs most of all is friends in Congress, for in the National House of Representatives, strange as it may seem, exists the greatest ignorance of existing conditions here. The ignorance is so dense that it is almost ludicrous. Here are 30,000 of the bravest, strongest and most progressive people on earth. They came to this country to carve their own fortunes and ask no help of any one. In the whole lot is not a single pauper or dependent.

The people are independent and brave, and native Americans predominate. Yet they are denied a delegate in Congress, something that is freely granted to the Filipinos, the Hawaiians and Porto Ricans. They are also taxed without representation in a way that would make the patriots who threw overboard the tea in Boston harbor turn in their graves. There is an occupation or trade tax, and of this I myself collect over $100,000 a year. One firm which cans salmon pays a yearly tax of over $40,000 for the privilege. To open a meat market

STATE PAYS CLAIM

County Treasurer Moore Has Received $43,247.19 From Hon. N. N. Stranahan, who Will Return Counsel Fee and Await Action of Supervisors Regarding Fulfillment of Contract.

When the Hon. N. N. Stranahan was a member of the State Legislature from this district, the Board of Supervisors of Oswego County became wise to the fact that there was considerable money due from the State to the County of Oswego and other counties, under section 5, chapter 907 of 1869, which provided "that for a period of thirty years all taxes collected from railroads in towns which had issued bonds in aid of their construction (excepting school and highway taxes) should be invested by the County Treasurer in a sinking fund for the payment of such bonds."

The law had been overlooked for many years, but some eighteen years ago certain of the towns in Oswego County brought actions against the county and eventually recovered such portions of the taxes collected from such railroads as had been devoted to county purposes. But the taxes collected from such railroads for such purposes, which the county treasurer had paid over to the, Comptroller were not collected back.

In the summer of 1898, Mr. A. M. Holmes, a committee of the Madison County Board of Supervisors, issued a circular letter to the several Boards of Supervisors of Counties containing towns or cities which had bonded in aid of railroads. This circular called attention to the advisability of legislation and asked for a statement of the amount of taxes so collected from such railroads in Oswego County which had been paid over to the State.

Upon the presentation of this communication, on Dec. 24, 1898, our Board of Supervisors created a committee consisting of Messrs. E. H. Cooke, F. L. Smith and T. E. Martin "to look this matter up and figure out the amount that has been paid into the State Treasury on account of the bonded towns and city in Oswego County and to report the same to A. M. Holmes of Morrisville, N. Y."

The committee made up tables showing the taxes Oswego County ought to recover back and then consulted Mr. Stranahan. And after two or three consultations Mr. Stranahan stated that he would undertake the collection of the amount which Oswego County was entitled to receive for 30 per cent. of the amount recovered—he to receive no other compensation.

At the same session, 1898, the Board of Supervisors of our county had created another committee consisting of E. L. Huntington, chairman of the Board, W. E. Lewis, clerk, and Thomas Moore, County treasurer, and given authority "to engage such legal services as shall become necessary to protect the county's interests."

Upon ascertaining that Mr. Stranahan was willing to undertake the collection of the claims on the terms stated, the Cooke Committee communicated with the Chairman of the Huntington Committee and obtained the latter's authority, as is claimed, to make the arrangement with Mr. Stranahan, and thereupon, it is claimed, made such bargain with him. The committee in December, 1899, reported to our Board of Supervisors that it had computed the claim of Oswego County and under "instructions and authority of the chairman and clerk of the Board and the County Treasurer, Hon. N. N. Stranahan of Fulton, N Y., was chosen attorney for the county in the matter." Journal of 1899, p. 266.

The act necessary to authorize the Court of Claims to pass upon such claims of the counties was passed by the Legislature in 1899, becoming a law by the signature of Governor Roosevelt, April 17. 1899.

After this law was enacted Mr. Stranahan filed the claim of Oswego County in the Court of Claims. He then concluded to let the claim lie until some other county had pressed its claim to judgment, and so advised the Board in a letter dated Dec. 10, 1899, and found at page 266 of the Journal of that year. The claim of Ulster County was pressed and the case carried by its attorney to the Court of Appeals, where the right of the County to recover was upheld.

Subsequently, and on Sept. 20, 1904, the claim of Oswego County was brought to trial in the Court of Claims and judgment awarded for $61,576.45.

The State Comptroller paid the amount of the claim over to Mr. Stranahan, who deducted $18,328.20 or 30 per cent., as per agreement with the committee of the Board of Supervisors, and forwarded the balance, $43,247.19, to County Treasurer Moore, through Surrogate Mead, a member of his law firm. County Treasurer Moore gave in return a voucher for the sum received.

The work of preparing the figures showing the amounts due the different towns was performed by F. L. Smith of Schroeppel, and resulted as follows: Constantia, $1,329.77; Hannibal, $1,143.22; Hastings, $4,048.97; Oswego Town, $1,379.40; Oswego City, $6,882.11; Parish, $1,423.79; Richland, $3,698.71; Sandy Creek, $1,441.21; Schroeppel, $5.52; Scriba, $234.03; Volney, $1,209.62; West Monroe ,$511.95, making a total of $23,308.86. The remainder, $38,267.59, was to go to the county at large.

Information from Utica is to the effect that the amount due Oneida County was computed and fixed at $38,992.76. A draft for that amount from the State was sent to the County Treasurer, and $10,804.05 was allowed for legal expenses to James K. O'Connor, which is a trifle over twenty-five per cent. of the face of the claim.

MR. STRANAHAN WILL RETURN HIS COUNSEL FEE TO COUNTY TREASURER.

Collector Stranahan sent the following communication to the Oswego Times, which was published on Monday evening:

Sir—I am prompted by the discussion that has arisen over the collection of the claim of Oswego county against the State, in which I was the attorney for the claimant, to send you this communication, in order that you and the citizens of the county may possess a full understanding of the facts.

It is hardly necessary to review the circumstances under which the moneys were erroneously paid by the several counties into the State treasury, hence I will take up the discussion at the inception of the effort to recover the moneys so paid.

In 1898 Mr. A. M. Holmes of Madison county addressed a circular to the various Boards of Supervisors, calling attention to the fact that he believed an effort should be made to recover the sums so paid to the State. I had frequently conferred with Mr. Holmes and had given the subject some thought, and was asked by the Board of Supervisers to appear before it and explain the situation and the likelihood of being able to pass an act which would permit the counties to present their claims to the Court of Claims, which I did.

An act providing for the submission of the claims to the court was passed by the Legislature, having been introduced in the Senate by myself and simultaneously introduced in the Assembly. The bill finally became a law, chap. 336 of the laws of 1899. It should be understood that this act in no way audited or allowed the claims, but simply permitted the various counties to present their claims to the court for adjudication and allowance, should a case be made which would entitle them to recover in a court of law or equity against an individual.

In the Fall of 1899, months after the bill was passed, I was retained by a committee of the Board of Supervisors to file and prosecute the claim. The

FOUND IN ASH HEAP

Newly-Born Blue-Eyed Baby Girl Unceremoniously Disposed of—Believed It was Dead—Discovered In Time to Save Its Life and Sent to Hospital—Father Held for Grand Jury in $1,000 Bail to Answer Charge of Abandonment.

A revolting and brutal exhibition of callousness and lack of moral consciousness was brought to light in this city last Saturday afternoon.

Grant Gifford, who was engaged in wheeling ashes to the dumping ground in South Seventh street, near Wilson's sand bed, saw a portion of the back and arm of a newly-born child protruding from the ash heap, and on closer investigation discovered that it was alive. He promptly notified Chief of Police Ross, who accompanied Dr. A. L. Hall and Officer Bray to the scene. The child was entirely nude and was exposed to the weather, without any protection. Dr. Hall had it removed to a neighbor's house, and from thence it was taken to the City Hospital, where it is receiving proper care and attention.

On Saturday evening Mrs. Earl Loomis called on Dr. Hall, and in the presence of Chief Ross, stated that the baby's mother was her own daughter, Mrs. Irving Hewes, who resided with her husband on South Second street. Hewes was arrested on Saturday night and arraigned before City Judge Wilson on a charge of abandonment. Through his attorney he waived examination and was committed to the Oswego jail to await the action of the Grand Jury, which will convene next month. On Saturday night Hewes confessed that he had placed the child in the ash heap on Saturday morning between 2 and 3 o'clock, alleging that at the time the child was born, both himself and wife believed it was dead. There was no physician or nurse present, he said.

On Sunday morning an effort was made by the parents to secure possession of the child, but the hospital authorities refused to surrender it, by advice of the physician. The baby is a bright, blue-eyed girl, weighing 8½ pounds, and is doing as well as might be expected under the circumstances, but if death ensues the unnatural father will have to answer to a more serious charge than abandonment.

On Monday morning Hewes was taken before County Judge Stowell at Oswego and was admitted to $1,000 bail, which was furnished by Messrs. Earl Loomis and Clarence Streeter of this city.

On Tuesday, Mrs. Hewes, the mother of the child, became a patient at the hospital.

Lackawanna Freight Depot Burned.

A disastrous fire occurred last Saturday night at 11:45 o'clock at the Lackawanna freight depot, situated at the lower bridge (west side). When the fire department reached the scene of the conflagration, the depot was a mass of flames, so that notwithstanding heroic efforts on the part of the firemen, it was impossible to save either the building or contents. Two freight cars also caught fire and were partly destroyed. The origin of the fire is a mystery. The loss to the railroad company will not exceed $3,000—no insurance. The Granby and Eureka Paper Companies had a quantity of paper in the building awaiting the opportunity to ship; this, too, is a total loss. Gage, Porter & Co.'s warehouse, west of the burned building, will be used as a temporary freight storage depot, while offices have been leased in the building occupied by Rigley & Sylvester.

Board of Fire and Police.

At a meeting of the Board on Monday evening, it was reported that the fire alarm system, or that portion that connects with the homes of the men, was defective and should be repaired at once. The electric light company stated that the alarm system wires were in close proximity to their wires and as they were not insulated the danger was great.

Mr. James Roach was placed on the call men list.

COMRADE S. E. CHANDLER'S GREETING

EDITOR TIMES: I recently received an invitation from Comrade Thomas Coles to attend the reunion of Companies E and H of the 24th New York Volunteer Infantry. I wrote him a letter to be read at the meeting, but it was mislaid, and when it was found, the reunion had taken place. I want the comrades to know that I appreciate hearing from them, either direct or through the TIMES; also, I want them to know that I am in the enjoyment of the best of health; as good, in fact, (barring age) as it was when I was tramping through the Virginia mud.

Last December I returned the Congressional medal of honor to the War Department that I received from President McKinley in March '98, and on the 25th of April, '05, I received a medal of the new design, which was adopted by Congress a year ago. The new medal is a much handsomer one than the old one, and does not resemble a Grand Army badge as the old one did.

Hoping the members of Companies E and H may live to meet at their annual reunions for many years to come and that at some time I may be able to meet with them. I will close.

A Perfect Fit

isn't the result of guesswork and chance—believe us

The splendid fit of Schloss garments is the outcome of twenty-five years' experience making clothes as good as they can be made. The lines correspond gracefully to the natural lines of your figure because the fittings were made with MEN—not dummies—for models.

And just as one live man is worth many wooden manikins, so a Schloss garment is worth a houseful of ordinary garments.

We'd like you to get that idea firmly fixed in your head, because the sooner you do the sooner you'll have clothes that are really satisfactory.

Don't take our bare word for it—see the clothes themselves and then judge for yourself. You're more than welcome to examine and try on anything we have, and under no obligation to buy unless you wish.

Fit and fashion, fabric and findings match the product of the finest tailor—so what's the use paying his exhorbitant price?

Schloss Clothes cost $10 to $25.

Men and Women In the Day's News

MISS PAULINE PUETZ.

FIFTY-ONE brave women were recently made happy by receiving the commendation of a queen. The women were plucky nurses, waitresses, etc., who risked their lives to save others when the excursion steamer General Slocum was burned near New York on June 15, 1904, with a loss of over a thousand lives, and the queen was Auguste Victoria, the German empress. The fifty-one heroines were attached to the hospital on North Brother island, upon which island the burning General Slocum was beached. They rushed into the water, some of them to their necks, and dragged drowning women and children to the shore. Several of them swam to the blazing ship, caught children thrown to them by frantic mothers and returned with their charges to the beach. When no more rescues could be made they remained on duty, although drenched, and were tireless in their efforts to resuscitate the unconscious and care for the injured. One of the bravest of the girls was Miss Pauline Puetz, a young German waitress, who can swim like a duck and who previous to the Slocum disaster had saved several lives at Asbury Park. Discarding her skirt and shoes, Miss Puetz swam to the steamer five times and saved the lives of as many children. The German empress gave Miss Edith V. D. Smith, head nurse, a gold brooch, and a diploma was awarded to fifty others. The diploma bears the picture of the empress and the following inscription: "In thankful acknowledgment for saving those who were in danger of death." The presentation was made by Acting Consul General Gneist of Germany, whose post is New York.

It has fallen to Rear Admiral Charles J. Train to enforce American neutrality in the far east at the present juncture of affairs. He is in command of the Philippine squadron, and his post of duty is the Asiatic station. He recently notified the navy department that he had dispatched a squadron to the island of Palawan to observe the movements of the Russian and Japanese fleets in the China sea and that he would enforce strict neutrality. The admiral has won a reputation as a commander of ability and discretion. He was born in Massachusetts and graduated from the Naval academy at Annapolis in 1864.

REAR ADMIRAL C. J. TRAIN.

His first important sea duty was a cruise to the Mediterranean shortly after the civil war on the Colorado. He is one of the scientists of the navy, has served on many stations and in many duties and from 1894-96 was naval officer at the Atlanta exposition. He was a captain when the Spanish war broke out and did good service as commander of the auxiliary cruiser Prairie in the north Atlantic patrol squadron. Later he commanded the Puritan and the Massachusetts and was president of the naval board of inspection and survey. He attained the rear admiral's rank in the year 1900.

The case of Frank G. Bigelow, the Milwaukee bank president who has confessed to embezzlement of $1,450,000 from his bank, has occasioned wide comment because it was speculation in stocks and in particular the big Chicago wheat deal which caused his ruin. His former standing as a banker is attested by the fact that he was last year president of the American Bankers' association. He was born in Hartford, N. Y., in 1847, was for fifteen years connected with the First National bank of Milwaukee and for some years had been its president. In an address before the American Bankers' association a year ago he spoke of "the lessons of honesty, thrift, temperance, industry and economy" which his fellow financiers might derive from the life of Benjamin Franklin. Mr. Bigelow was an adviser of the secretary of the treasury of the United States, and his name stood as a synonym for ability, sagacity and probity in the banking world. In his confession to the directors of his bank he ascribed his fall to speculation in Wall street, followed by a disastrous venture in the wheat pit, culminating with the exploded Gates corner in May wheat. His losses caused him to use the funds of the bank and falsify the books. He lost all his private fortune except $300,000, which he turned over to the bank, and the balance of his indebtedness to the institution was more than made up by the sums subscribed by the directors, one of them being his brother, William Bigelow, who put up $100,000 to help save the bank. After his confession the defaulting banker was arrested at his home on a charge of embezzlement. He has a wife, two sons and two daughters, who have been leaders in the social circles of Milwaukee.

FRANK G. BIGELOW.

The disgraced banker had a reputation for generosity and helping young men in business.

General Charles Henry Grosvenor, who represents the Eleventh Ohio district in congress, is serving his tenth term as a member of that body and on rounding out twenty years of service with the expiration of his present term is said to contemplate retirement from public life. "Old Figgers," as he is known from his fondness for political statistics, has been a warrior and comes of a family of fighters. His grandfather fought in the Revolution, his father fought in war of 1812 and he himself fought in the Union army in the civil war, being promoted from private through various ranks and brevetted a brigadier general at its close. He was born in Connecticut in 1833, but his parents removed to Ohio before he was five years of age. There was no school in the vicinity of his father's home until he was fourteen years old, and then for a few terms he studied in a log schoolhouse, afterward teaching school himself and reading law at the same time.

CHARLES HENRY GROSVENOR.

The fact that General Grosvenor is one of the best known men in public life gives point to a story told by the Saturday Evening Post of how he was once introduced to an audience in Pittsburg.

"Ladies and gentlemen," said the chairman, "I need hardly say to you that we are particularly fortunate tonight in having with us one of the greatest Republicans of our sister state, Ohio. We are to have the pleasure of listening to a man whose name is a household word in Pittsburg. You all know him. Everybody in Pittsburg respects and honors him. His name is on all our lips. Friends, I now have the pleasure of introducing to you that sterling patriot, that eminent statesman, General—General—Gen"—

The chairman flushed, stammered, wiped his forehead nervously and then blurted, "General Gossamer of Ohio."

Bishop William Croswell Doane of Albany is the only bishop of the American Episcopal church who wears the traditional street costume of the English bishop, the most striking feature of which, to an American, is the short "pants" or knickerbockers, with gaiters and silver buckles. He has been unable to persuade his fellow ministers of Episcopal rank to follow him in adopting what in this country seems to most people an eccentricity of dress. Bishop Doane has the courage of his convictions, however, in small matters as well as great and sticks to his short pants.

BISHOP DOANE.

Every one has heard of the famous Banbury bun celebrated in song and story. During a recent visit to England Bishop Doane, so the story runs, stopped for a few minutes at Banbury. Looking from the car window, the bishop saw a boy, who came to him as he beckoned. The bishop inquired the price of the Banbury buns and learned they were threepence each. He gave the boy sixpence, telling him to bring a bun to the car and keep one for himself. Just before the train pulled out the boy returned eating a Banbury bun. He handed the threepence to the bishop, remarking with perfect composure, "There was only one left, guv'nor."

A farmer from the back country was visiting a store in Peekskill, according to Senator Depew. The storekeeper urged him to buy a bicycle. Its advantages were enumerated.

"But I'd sooner put that money into a cow," said the farmer.

"But just think," said the storekeeper, "how foolish you would look riding about town on a cow."

"Well, yes," said the farmer, "but no more foolish, I reckon, than I'd look milking a bicycle."

James Whitcomb Riley, the Hoosier poet, says that he was summoned as a witness in a case tried in an Indiana court where one of the witnesses before him evinced some disinclination to state her age.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

"Is it very necessary?" coyly asked the witness, a spinster of uncertain age.

"It is absolutely necessary, madam," interposed the judge.

"Well," sighed the maiden, "if I must I suppose I must. I didn't see how it could possibly affect the case, for, you see"—

"Madam," observed the judge, with some asperity, "I must ask you not to further waste the time of this court. Kindly state your age."

Whereupon the spinster showed signs of hysterics.

"I am—that is, I was"—

"Madam, hurry up!" exclaimed the judge, now thoroughly impatient. "Every minute makes it worse, you know!"

WOMEN'S VOTES NEEDED.

Why Should They Be Classed With Criminals and Idiots?

Why should our mothers, wives and sisters be kept disfranchised the same as criminals, idiots, slaves and insane? I have often wondered how much longer this government will continue to practice this gross injustice toward the purest and best half of our citizens.

Our government today, with its civilization, is almost entirely masculine and wholly intellectual and therefore almost entirely destitute of affection and morality, and this immorality in every department of our government is due to the subversion of this feminine or moral factor of existence, and its suppression has necessarily ended in inequality, confusion and crime until it has permeated every condition of society from top to bottom. To have a perfect government, best society and the highest state of civilization justice and equality must be the foundation on which they are built. We must be not only intelligent, but we must love justice enough to recognize both these factors or principles equally and extend to them equal place, support and power.

There must be an equal proportion of men and women in our religious, political and social relations in order to attain that perfect peace and happiness that we as a Christian nation ought to enjoy. Just so long as we as a nation refuse to accept and incorporate these facts into our organic laws, just so long will our government be filled with war and every kind of lawlessness in every department of the nation.

Just so sure as it takes the loving presence and companionship of woman to fill our homes with joy and happiness, just so sure we need her presence and assistance in every department of our government from president down to justice of the peace in order that we may attain to that high standard of Christian civilization which all good men and women so earnestly desire. G. T. SONGER.

Why So Many Schemes Fail.

One principal cause of the failure of so many magnificent schemes, social, political, religious, which have followed each other age after age has been this—that in almost every case they have ignored the rights and powers of one-half the human race—viz, women. I believe that politics will not go right, that society will not go right, that religion will not go right, that nothing human will ever go right except in so far as woman goes right, and to make woman go right she must be put in her place, and she must have her rights.—Charles Kingsley.

Give the Virtues a Voice.

It is very cheap wit that finds it so droll that a woman should vote. If the wants, the passions, the vices, are allowed a full vote through the hands of a half brutal, intemperate population, I think it but fair that the virtues, the aspirations, should be allowed a full voice as an offset through the purest of the people.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

A Good Family Liniment.

Every family should be supplied with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. For cuts, bruises, burns, scalds and similar injuries, which are of frequent occurrence, there is nothing so good. It soothes the wound and not only gives instant relief from pain, but causes the part to heal in about one-third the time required by the usual treatment. As it is an antiseptic all danger from blood-poisoning is avoided. Sold by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Some very new handsome designs in sterling silver at G. B. Farley's.

Drinking Hot Water.

There are four classes of persons who should not drink large quantities of hot water: First, people who have irritability of the heart. Hot water will cause palpitation of the heart in such cases. Second, persons with dilated stomachs. Third, persons afflicted with sour stomachs. Fourth, persons who have soreness of the stomach or pain induced by light pressure. These rules are not for those who take hot water simply to relieve thirst, but as a means of washing out the stomach. Hot water will relieve thirst better than cold water and for that purpose is not to be condemned. But hot water is an excitant and in cases in which irritation of the stomach exists should be avoided.

Colds

It should be borne in mind that every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality and prepares the system for the more serious diseases, among which are the two greatest destroyers of human life, pneumonia and consumption.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

has won its great popularity by its prompt cures of this most common ailment. It aids expectoration, relieves the lungs and opens the secretions, effecting a speedy and permanent cure. It counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia.

Some New Commandments.

The following new commandments we clip from one of our State exchanges. Just to whom they should be credited we do not know. They are bright and contain many nuggets of wisdom:

I.—Thou shalt not go away from town to do any trading, nor thy son, nor thy daughter.

II.—Thou shalt do whatever lieth in thy power to promote and encourage the welfare of thine people.

III.—Thou shalt spend thy earnings at home, that they may return from whence they came and give nourishment to such as may come after thee.

IV.—Thou shalt patronize thy home merchants and thy home printer, for yea, verily, doth not thy home printer spread over the land tidings of thy goodness and greatness that the people may patronize thee.

V.—Thou shalt not ask a printer to take less than his price. Remember that by asking him to retreat from his price thou inferest that he is a robber. If he hath no dignity thou wilt get done by him somehow.

VI.—Thou shalt not ask credit, as goods cost money and the merchant's brain is burdened with bills. His children clamor daily for bread, and his wife abideth at home for lack of such raiment as adorneth her sister. Blessed, yea, thrice blessed is the man that pays cash.

VII.—Thou shalt not suffer the voices of pride to overcome thee, and if other towns entice thee, consent not; thou mayest be deceived. Remember the fate of the calf that left its mother and followed a steer away from home and lost its supper.

VIII.—Thou shalt not ask for reduced prices, for thine "influence" for guile is in thine heart and the merchant readeth it like an open book, He laugheth thee to scorn and shouteth to his clerk, Ha, ha.

IX.—Thou shalt not ask thy printer to take two dollars for a three-dollar job, because some other poor printer will do it for less money. The other printer may steal his stock and underpay his help. If thou trade with such as he thou art an accessory to his crime.

X.—Thou shalt cast thy vote in all municipal elections for the man thou thinkest a suitable model for thy school children to follow after, and refrain from the association of all political grafters who are ready to mislead.

XI.—Thou shalt not bear false witness against the town wherein thou dwellest, but speak well of it to men, that thy home town and its home people may be proud of thee.

Oswego River Power Company.

Surrogate's Court.

In Surrogate's Court at Auburn the will of the late John B. McKnight was admitted to probate. Letters testamentary were issued to Catherine and Mary McKnight of Sterling and W. J. McKnight of Fulton. It is estimated that the value of the estate will exceed $15,000, of which $4,000 is in personal property. The life use of the property is given to Catherine and Elizabeth McKnight. At their death it is to be divided equally among the surviving nieces and nephews of the deceased. George Farnham and George H. Cooper were appointed appraisers.

Last will and testament of Francis B. Boughton was filed for probate in Surrogate's Court on Monday. Mr. Boughton's will was drawn on Nov. 21 and in it he bequeathed his entire property to his wife, Helen Boughton. The petition states that the estate is valued at $1,500 personal. It is understood that Mr. Boughton left $10,000 in insurance. The home in West Second street was in Mrs. Boughton's name.

Cured of Backache.

Member of the Businss Men's League and one of the best known business men in St. Louis, Mo. Read what Mr. Wand has to say about Dr. Fenner's Kidney and Backache Cure:

"I know what it is to be afflicted with backache and I sympathize with fellow sufferers. After swallowing various and frequent nauseating doses of this and that prescription I decided that if Dr. Fenner's Kidney and Backache Cure could not rid me of those backaches it at least would not do me any harm and I procured a bottle.

"Now the first bottle didn't stop those wearing backaches, but it did afford me great relief. The second bottle, however, did effectually put a stop to those racking backaches. Occasionally they returned when strenuous business affairs exhausted the physical forces, but a dose or two of Dr. Fenner's Cure gave instant relief.

WHY WOMAN SHOULD VOTE.

She Is the First to Suffer From Evils of Bad Government.

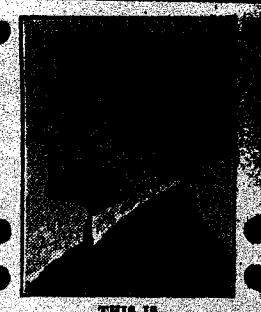
For all time the family relation has been and will be the most essential factor for continuing the race and perpetuating ideas and institutions that are destined to survive. For more than any other reason because he is a home-maker man needs the ballot. Woman's relation to the home as home keeper is stronger, finer, closer than man's, and, quicker than he, she recognizes the defects of environment that result from bad government. She suffers more from neighborhood nuisances, filthy streets and insanitary conditions. If the schools are defective she is the first to know it. If for want of room children are excluded from school she grieves over it. When an evil influence overshadows the neighborhood she is first to feel it. These things often injure her and her influence on her family before they thoroughly attract the serious attention of the men.

Men, absorbed ten or more hours of the day in business pursuits, are not conscious of good or bad government except as it touches and passes through the home interests. Woman, ever present in the home, is alert to discover and realize danger. Is it wise longer to withhold the ballot from these home keepers who sorely need this safeguard to make strong their influence upon the growing family?

Is not the ideal home that in which the father and mother have equal power and where the best characteristics of both parents find expression? The ideal state is that in which the best characteristics of both man and woman are represented. We assert that the home interest is paramount in any good government and by according woman the franchise the continued supremacy of the home and the permanency of institutions are secured.

CORNELIA K. HOOD.

A Question of Worldwide Interest.



Do you know that this question of the right of women to self government is one which is commanding the attention of the whole civilized world and that many men of worldwide reputation have espoused it? This is true, and therefore the present situation demands that every voter shall give intelligent and conscientious examination into the merits of this question.

Woman's Genius For Organization.

I believe in the admission of women to the full rights of citizenship and share in the government on the express grounds that few women keep house so badly or with such wastefulness as chancellors of the exchequer keep the state, and womanly genius for organization applied to the affairs of the nation would be extremely economical and beneficial.—Theodore Parker.

COLLECTOR STRANAHAN'S LETTER.

In the Oswego Times and Palladium last week appeared a severe arraignment of the Hon. N. N. Stranahan in the matter of the tax rebate to this county from the State. Mr. Stranahan, in his letter to the Oswego Times and Palladium (published in this week's TIMES), makes it plain that the course he pursued was strictly honorable and in compliance with a specific agreement made with a committee selected by the Board of Supervisors entrusted with full power to act. But in order to avoid even the appearance of unfairness, Mr. Stranahan now proposes to turn the entire matter over to the Supervisors, send County Treasurer Moore a draft for the amount retained by him and allow the Supervisors to determine whether or not they will carry out the contract made with their committee. The letter is dignified and courteous in tone and should be satisfactory to all concerned.

ACCORDING to recent statistics, although farmers compose one-half the population of the United States, only 2 per cent. of crimes are committed by them.

KANSAS is bleeding anew in the cause of kerosene, while Texas demands that its wells of petroleum shall remain crude and undefiled by the touch of monopoly. The rich and juicy fountains of greasy wealth seem to lay broad and deep the foundations of trouble. The contention in both States is unfortunate because it has a tendency to develop an esoteric and unnecessary vocabulary.

NAN PATTERSON'S release on her own recognizance has closed a most sensational trial of murder in New York City. The disagreement of the jury at two previous trials seemed to preclude the possibility of securing a conviction on the charge of murder, and on motion of District Attorney Jerome the case was disposed of as stated.

THE Chicago teamsters' strike received a solar-plexus blow when President Roosevelt announced recently to the representatives of the unions at Chicago that he approved of Mayor Dunne's efforts to preserve law and order; that back of the City of Chicago stood the State of Illinois and back of the State stood the United States government to guaranty peace and to repress all attempts at rioting and violence.

EMPEROR WILLIAM'S severe arraignment of the Russian army has caused a profound sensation in European diplomatic circles. He openly charged that drink and dissipation had been an important factor in the defeat of the Russians, and he warned the German army against over-indulgence in intoxicants, believing that it was reserved for the soldiers of the Fatherland to protect Europe against the alleged "yellow peril."

THE wreck of a Pennsylvania Railroad express last week at South Harrisburg, Pa., caused the death of some twenty persons and more than one hundred were injured. Among those who were fatally injured was Sam Shubert, a resident of Syracuse and one of the leading theatrical managers of the country—and as he was only 29 years old, perhaps the most successful for his years in the world.

DECLINE OF METHODISM IN NEW YORK DOWN-TOWN DISTRICTS.

Unless some practical method be derived to strengthen the Methodist churches in the down-town districts of New York, the work of evangelism will have to be continued by other denominations. A few years ago there were several strong and aggressive churches on the west side of the city. There was Duane on Hudson street, Bedford street, Jane street, Green street, which afterwards consolidated with Asbury; Washington square, Seventh avenue, Eighteenth street and Twenty-fourth street churches, each had a large membership and the pulpits were filled by able preachers.

Further uptown in that portion of the city lying west of Broadway and Sixth avenue and south of Fifty-ninth street the following Methodist churches have ceased to exist in the last thirty-five years: Trinity, in Thirty-fourth street, and its successor, the Free Tabernacle; Greene street and its successor, Asbury; St. John's, in Fifty-third street, which united with the Forty-third street to form Union Church; St. Luke's, in Forty-first street, and the Mission, in Fifty-sixth street. The membership of the Methodist churches of this section was reported in 1870 as 6,026, in 1875 as 5,696, in 1900 as 5,225, and in 1904 as 3,913. Church statistics of course are not to be taken as accurate, but they are approximate and suggestive. Most of these churches were once out of debt, but their aggregate debts now exceed $100,000. The attendance upon their services is much less than formerly and their income is greatly reduced. Their contributions to the connectional benevolences have diminished; the allowances for ministerial support are generally less than in the days of prosperity. Two or three of these churches are more happily circumstanced than the others and are able to struggle along. Washington square has a substantial endowment which is used for local purposes chiefly; and a large bequest has been made to Duane by Alexander Russell for the work below Houston street.

The conviction seems to be that something must speedily be done to strengthen the remaining institutions The cause of the decline appears to be the unceasing movement of population uptown and out of the city; the great increase of foreign population and the difficulty of prosecuting religious work in a field so uncertain and unfruitful.

Pathfinder Field Day.

The Club Field day on Friday was a very successful event, and the game of baseball was fast and furious, the scores running so high that, lest ball players doubt our veracity, we refrain from publishing them.

As the season advances, the afternoons at the Island grow more popular. This week Mrs. Holmes will serve in her best style the following excellent menu:

Board of Public Works.

The Board of Public Works has accepted $20 from the Sage Bridge Co. for the placing of the Phillips street bridge, as the company preferred to rebate that amount from the $200 cost of the bridge, rather than send a force of men here to do the work.

The Board will install an electic light, corner of Ontario and Third streets.

SAD DROWNING ACCIDENT.

While E. A. Wicks and C. A. Swancott, of Utica, both members of the Government Hydrographic Survey corps, were engaged this morning at 11.50 o'clock in taking current meter measurements on a car which travels across the river on a wire cable, just below Battle Island, the staging on the east side of the river gave way, loosening the cable, which fell on both men, throwing them into the river about mid-stream. The current is very swift at this point, but both men struck out for shore, assisting each other as best they could. When near the shore, Swancott, who was only 21 years old evidently became exhausted and disappeared, while Wicks, more dead than alive, effected a landing and saved himself, utterly unable to render any further assistance to his unfortunate companion.

Both engineers arrived in Fulton last night. Swancott was married in Utica last Easter. The body has been recovered and the relatives of the unfortunate man notified.

Dr. G. A. Guile of this city was in Albany last Friday and Saturday, attending the annual meeting of the Dental Society of the State of New York, as a delegate from this district, which comprises about ten counties. Dr. Guile's term of office does not expire for four years, and his selection as a delegate is a distinguished honor.

A thoroughly practical suggestion has been made by Chief Waugh of the Fire Department. The plan, which will soon be carried into execution by the Fire and Police Commissioners, is to equip both hose carts with extension ladders and fire extinguishers, so that the present hook and ladder will not be called into requisition unless a fire should occur in the manufacturing district. At present the hook and ladder is lumbersome and heavy for the horses to handle and there does not seem to be a necessity for its use at many of the fires to which the department responds.

EARLY HISTORY OF FULTON.

Building of Churches and Formation of Religious Societies.

I said there were three church structures in Fulton in 1835. They were as follows: The Methodist Episcopal Church, built 1820-30, on Oneida street just west of their present structure. The basement was so far completed that church services were held therein during the Summer of 1829 with Rev. George W. Densmore as circuit preacher. This became an independent station, Aug. 15, 1829, with the Rev. William W. Rundell as pastor; in 1835, W. S. Bowdish was pastor.

On April 30, 1832, the Presbyterian adopted the name of Presbyterian Church and society of Fulton and Granby, and they built their edifice on the corner of Oneida and Second streets, where W. J. Boomer's store is at present. It was deglicated Nov. 8, 1833, with the Rev. John Eastman as pastor with a salary of $250 a year; board and washing and a convenient private room at the home of George Salmon, jr. His labors continued during 1835.

The Universalist Church was in process of construction, but not completed until 1836. It was situated on the west side of Second street and just a little south of Cayuga, now occupied for mercantile business. The Rev. Timothy E. Eaton was the pastor during 1835-6.

Lewis Falley was postmaster and Jonathan Case sheriff in 1835.

Jacob C. Thompson was a justice, and while I do not know the exact date of the following occurence, I have the original paper. It reads as follows:

"Overseer of Poor of Volney in Oswego, N. Y., vs. John Marvin, warrant on complaint of Jacob C. Thompson for profane oaths. Prisoner pleads not guilty. Jacob C. Thompson, just ice. The prisoner made and uttered three profane oaths, said By G—, and By C—, on the 15th day of September, after sunset. Prisoner submits. Fined $1.12½ and costs 77 cents." This was on the Sabbath day and was under the old law, but under the new dispensation in the city of Fulton of today it is very different.

The Howard Insurance Company of New York was the second one to do business here, but the Scotish-Union or National had been in business many years at that time, and is represented by G. F. Schenck, now at No. 18 South First street.

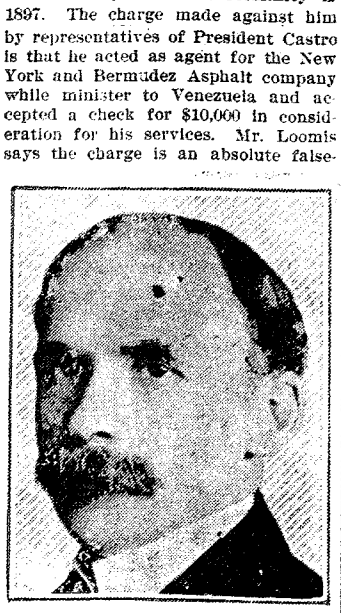
WHERE THE PURPLE VIOLETS GROW.

Words and Music by John A. Allen.



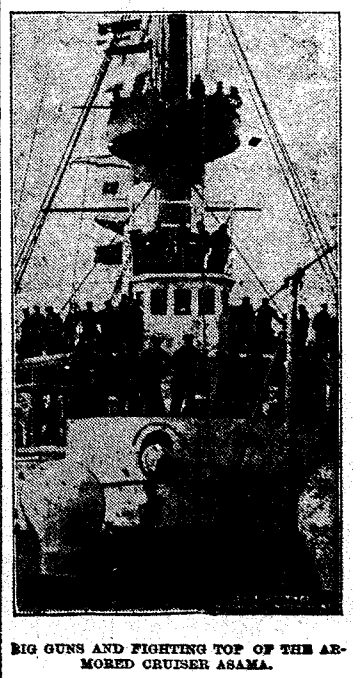
Where the Purple Violets Grow.

American Melody Co., N. Y. Copyright 1904.

FRANCIS B. LOOMIS.

Assistant Secretary of State and the Venezuelan Asphalt Case.

Francis B. Loomis, assistant secretary of state of the United States, whose official integrity has been assailed, has done much to promote commercial relations between South American countries and the United States and was appointed minister to Venezuela by President McKinley in 1897. The charge made against him by representatives of President Castro is that he acted as agent for the New York and Bermudez Asphalt company while minister to Venezuela and accepted a check for $10,000 in consideration for his services. Mr. Loomis says the charge is an absolute falsehood, that he never asked or received anything from the company and that the charge is based on an exchange of checks which took place between him and the asphalt company's manager when he was leaving Venezuela. Owing to the high rates of exchange due to unsettled conditions in Venezuela it is difficult to get Venezuelan money converted into United States money, and Mr. Loomis says that to get Venezuelan money he had in a bank turned into American legal tender he exchanged checks at the posted United States government rates, giving a check equivalent to that which he received. Secretary Taft of the war department is investigating the matter.



FRANCIS B. LOOMIS.

Mr. Loomis was born in Marietta, O., in 1861 and in 1883 was graduated from Marietta college. For several years he was on the staff of a New York daily paper. President Harrison made him consul at St. Etienne, France, and while there he wrote reports on commercial conditions which attracted much attention. On his return from France in 1893 he became editor in chief of the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune. He was minister to Venezuela from 1897 to 1901, when, at his own request, he was transferred to another diplomatic position and became minister to Portugal. He assumed the post of assistant secretary of state in 1903.

The Asama and Three Like Her Make a Fast Quartet.

Though the Japanese have not many battleships they have an advantage in the possession of a large number of modern, up to date and speedy cruisers. Most of the cruisers are in the squadron under Admiral Kamimura, and it is said that every ship in his fleet went into dry dock after the fall of Port Arthur and that not one of his cruisers has less than nineteen knots speed. The Japanese have nine armored cruisers and a still larger number of protected cruisers. The former have a total of 73,686 tonnage as compared with 14,724 possessed by the Russian cruisers of the same class. The armored cruiser stands next in importance to the battleship. Four of the Japanese cruisers of this class, the Asama, Idzumo, Iwate and Tokiwa, were built about the same time and are of the same type. The Asama is one of the speediest of the quartet and can make twenty-three knots. She was laid down at Elswick, England, in 1898, has a displacement of 9,750 tons and a length of 408 feet. The batteries of the cruiser consist of four eight-inch and fourteen six-inch guns and twelve twelve-pounders and a dozen three-pounders, all rapid fire guns.

BIG GUNS AND FIGHTING TOP OF THE ARMORED CRUISER ASAMA.

The fighting top of the Asama shown in the picture is used by sharpshooters and is large enough for the employment of machine guns in this capacity.

ELECTION FRAUDS.

Conditions Where Women Vote and Where They Don't.

Those who are searching for an argument against the political rights of women are continually pointing to the frauds in Denver as an example of the workings of woman suffrage.

It is difficult for one to retain one's dignity when reading some of the effusions upon the Denver frauds in their relation to woman suffrage, especially when we know that women took little or no part in them.

If the testimony of those who have made a study of these questions for years can be taken, the election frauds in Denver are as nothing compared with those in some of our cities where men only vote.

Mr. Rudolph Blankenberg of Philadelphia, chairman of the committee on election frauds, says that in Philadelphia there are more than 100,000 fraudulent names on the voting register; that when the polls opened at 7 a. m. one ballot box had already been stuffed so full of fraudulent votes that it was impossible to get any of the legal ballots in; that 142 voters were registered as living in one small house not able to lodge a dozen; that out of thirty-six registered letters which he sent to voters alleged to be living at another house twenty-nine were returned through the mail with the report that the persons were unknown there.

Vice outside the election frauds has become so flagrant that the Law and Order society has been tackling the situation, and its executive officer, D. Clarence Gibbony, is said to have broken up 400 gambling dens and about 1,000 houses of ill repute. They have been making these raids without the co-operation of the city police, because it was found whenever they told the police what gambling dens they were going to investigate the gamblers always received warning in advance. And now a bill has been introduced in the legislature forbidding the Law and Order society to make any raids without previously notifying the police.

What adds still more to the terribleness of the situation in Philadelphia is the fact that a majority of the voters submit to all this with the patience of lambs, while in Denver they are making vigorous efforts to get rid of it.

What is true of Philadelphia is true of a majority of our large cities. If women were given the ballot today in Philadelphia there is not a doubt but the whole mass of corruption would be laid to them. It would at least show the failure of woman suffrage if they were not able to eliminate all the corruption that has been intrenching itself in the very life of the city government for years.

Christ's rebuke to the scribes and pharisees seems most fitting in its application to these people who are so afraid of the votes of corrupt women when he says: "Woe unto you, scribes and pharisees, hypocrites, ye blind guides, which strain at a gnat and swallow a camel!"

ELNORA MONROE BABCOCK.

A Good Suggestion.

Mr. C. B. Wainwright of Lemon City, Fla., has written the manufacturers that much better results are obtained from the use of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in cases of pains in the stomach, colic and cholera morbus by taking it in water as hot as can be drank. That when taken in this way the effect is double in rapidity. "It seems to get at the right spot instantly," he says. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Overdue and Missing.

The word "missing" applied to a ship brings all hope of safety to an end and settles the loss of friends ashore and of the underwriters, says Mr. Joseph Conrad, writing in the London Mail. But the word "overdue" only strengthens the fears already born in many homes ashore and opens the door for speculation in the market of risks. Within the memory of the present generation a missing ship has never been known to turn up. But the name of an overdue vessel, trembling, as it were, on the edge of the fatal heading, has been known to appear as "arrived."

LIVER TROUBLE CURED.

Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. Kennedy's NEW Medicine, Drove the Disease Out of Mr. Larsen's System.

A proprietary medicine that is not without honor in the city where it is made, must be a good thing. No chance for deception there, where everybody knows all about the men who make it. In Rondout, City of Kingston, N. Y., where Dr. David Kennedy lived and practiced for so many years, his new medicine is highly regarded and many wonderful cures have been wrought by it. There is Mr. Christopher Larsen, the leading painter and decorator of that city, who says:

"I have not had a sick day since I was cured of kidney and liver trouble, and painter's colic, by Dr. Kennedy's new medicine called Cal-cura Solvent. It drove the disease out of my system, so it never came back. Nothing like Cal-cura Solvent to purify the blood." $1.00; all druggists.

The Gloaming.

The "gloaming" is by origin akin to gloom. The root idea is to look covertly from beneath the brows not with full open eyes, and so the gloaming is that time of day when the sun, sinking below the horizon, shines obscurely under the advancing shades of night, as eyes may gleam dimly from lowering brows.

Byron, the poet, wrote, "As gloaming, the Scottish word for twilight, has been recommended by many literary men and particularly by Dr. Moore in his letters to Burns, I have ventured to use it on account of its harmony."

The evening star is called the "gloaming" star in Scotland, and Lowell's "The snow had begun in the gloaming" and Hogg's "'Twixt the gloaming and the mirk, when the kye come hame," are familiar instances of its use.

Why Suffer From Rheumatism?

Why suffer from rheumatism when one application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm will relieve the Pain? The quick relief which this liniment affords makes rest and sleep possible, and that alone is worth many times its cost. Many who have used it hoping only for a short relief from suffering have been happily surprised to find that after a while the relief became permanent. Mrs. V. H. Leggett of Yum Yum, Tennesee, U. S. A., writes: "I am a great sufferer from rheumatism, all over from head to foot, and Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only thing that will relieve the pain." For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

The Banana.

The prohibitionist looks on with favor, for it does not mix with alcohol, and some think the habitual use blunts the longing for firewater. Thus Captain Parsons of the English-West Indian line says that since his seamen and stokers have been allowed to help themselves freely to the cargo of bananas they have not wished so much rum. There is a trace of copper in the banana, and deep thinkers believe this is beneficial to the human clockwork.

The taste for the banana is not acquired. As Mr. Crichton-Browne exclaims in a burst of Ciceronic eloquence: "An appreciation of it is not reached through slow stages of diminishing repulsion, but comes at the moment of first introduction. The infant absorbs it greedily; children devour it with delight; the adult does not despise it, and the edentulous octogenarian blesses its agreeable tenderness."—Boston Herald.

Costermongers In Morocco.

In Morocco the costermonger recommends his wares by pledging the credit of a saint: "In the name of Mulai Idriss! Roast chestnuts!" "In the name of our Lord Mohammed Al Hadj! Popcorn! Popcorn!" "In the name of Sidna Ali-bu-Rhaleh! Melons! Nice, sweet melons!" "God is gracious! Beans! Fried beans!" "There be no might nor majesty save in Allah! Water! Cool water!" These and the like are heard at every turn. Even the auctioneer who is calling out the price of a slave or the bids for a Rabat carpet is careful to interlard his professional talk freely with allusions to his Maker and the plethoric roll of Moorish saints.—London Times.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the Very Best.

"I have been using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and want to say that it is the best cough medicine I have ever taken," says George L. Chubb, a merchant of Harlan, Mich. There is no question about its being the best, as it will cure a cough or cold in less time than any other treatment. It should always be kept in the house ready for instant use, for a cold can be cured in much less time when promptly treated. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

The Sword of a Knight.

The sword of a noble knight was mentioned almost as often as himself in the songs of the troubadours of the middle ages. In the olden time this trusty weapon was named and personified as accomplishing countless brilliant deeds. In the proverbs of all nations it is spoken of with reverence and trust. It represents the rank and renown, the heroism and honor, the glory and greatness, of nations in the past. One of the first weapons made by man, it became his most important arm and auxiliary of warfare. It has always been the visible badge of birth, bravery and freedom. To surrender it was to admit defeat and disgrace. So long has it been the constant companion of rank and valor that it has acquired a dignity of its own. Like no other weapon, it has a quality entirely distinct from its character as a blood shedder. In England even at the present day the sword alone is considered adequate to confer knighthood.

Of Bishop Bathurst, who was a great whist player, it is related that on hearing the name of a new appointment in the chapter there was wrung from him the passionate exclamation, "I have served the Whigs all my life, and now they send me down a canon who doesn't know clubs from spades!"—London Mail.

How to Ward Off Old Age.

The most successful way of warding off the approach of old age is to maintain a vigorous digestion. This can be done by eating only food suited to your age and occupation, and when any disorder of the stomach appears take a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets to correct it. If you have a weak stomach or are troubled with indigestion, you will find these Tablets to be just what you need. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggists.

Whittiers of Danvers.

One day a stranger strolled into the old Berry tavern at Danvers. A number of men were seated in the office and were asked by the newcomer, "Will you kindly tell me where I may find the Whittier house?"

A young business man, not a native of the town, to be sure, but who had lived in it a number of years and belonged to New England, spoke up, saying: "You mean Joe Whittier, the contractor? He lives at Danversport."

"No, no; I refer to John G. Whittier."

"John G. Whittier? Never heard of him. The only other Whittier in this town is Clarence Whittier, janitor of the town house. He lives on Essex street."

The stranger became both amused and impatient and said: "I am talking about John G. Whittier, the poet. He's dead, you know. I want to find out where his home was."

"Oh, well," said the young business man, with a sigh of relief at his ability to impart information, "if it's anybody who's dead go right over to Will Crosby, the undertaker, across the street. He'll tell you all about it."—Boston Herald.

The Hope of Misfortune.

Pain is a soul tonic. Sorrow often brings out the best there is in us. Happiness does not develop character. It gives it surface brightness and decks it with prismatic bubbles. It takes the deep reaching arm of misfortune to trouble the depths and bring out the pearls that lie there. The most magnetic faces are lined by thought and noble care. Strong, unselfish love, even if misplaced and unappreciated, ennobles the lover. It is the frivolous vanity born emotions that fritter away character and make faces insignificant. To fail in high aim after earnest and honest effort is not failure. The gain it brings in strength and discipline will appear in other directions. Misfortune has often in the history of the world been the means of making a poet, orator, philanthropist, scientist or statesman out of a person whose career but for the misfortune or physical disability would have been commonplace and influence limited.—Medical Talk.

Strictly Genuine.

Most of the patent medicine testimonials are probably genuine. The following notice recently appeared in the Atchison (Kan.) Globe: "Joe Tack, a well-known engineer, running on the Missouri Pacific between Wichita and Kiowa, lately appeared in a big one, with a picture, and when he was in this office today, we asked him about it. He said he had terrific pains in his stomach and thought he had cancer. His druggist recommended Kodol and he says it cured him. He recommended it to others, who were also cured. "Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat and cures all stomach troubles. Just as surely as the sun shines your stomach can be brought back to its originally pure condition and life sweetened by this lasting and truly the greatest digestant known. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington, druggists.

Talked Just Like a Man.

Miss Florence Marryat, the novelist, daughter of Captain Marryat, had some mannerisms of her own. The following anecdote is told by William Downey: "'Here's a letter from Florence Marryat,' said Mr. Tinsley, the publisher, to me one morning. 'She wants me to buy a new three volume novel from her. If I'm out of the way when she calls you can talk to her.'

"I asked how I was to recognize her. 'You'll recognize her easy enough,' said Mr. Tinsley. 'She is a tall, striking looking woman, and she'll talk to you just like a man.' A few days later a tall lady called. I fancied she might be Miss Marryat. She looked around the office, and then, addressing me, she said, 'Is Bill in?'

"To this I replied that Mr. Tinsley was not in. Could I do anything for her? 'I must see Bill himself,' she said. 'Tell the old bounder I called.' 'You're Miss Marryat?' I ventured. 'Yes. But stop! How the dickens do you know I'm Miss Marryat? I never saw you before.'"

HENRY C. FRICK'S CAREER.

Steel Maker, Master of Coal Trade and Power In Financial World.

The career of Henry Clay Frick, whose name has been brought into the discussion over the affairs of the Equitable Life Assurance society, shows that he is a man of remarkable powers. Mr. Frick is chairman of the committee appointed to examine into the affairs of the big life insurance concern and has been mentioned as a possible successor of James W. Alexander as its president. He was born in West Overton, Pa., in 1849, of a respectable family of some means and was educated at the public schools of his native place and at an academy. He was for a time a bookkeeper in a flour mill and then embarked in a small way in the coke business. The business grew slowly, but steadily, until in 1873, when he was twenty-four years old, came the great panic of that year. Values went out of everything. He bought all the coal and coke properties he could, and at panic prices, and when the reaction came found himself well started on the road to enormous wealth. At forty he was master of the coal trade, and this brought him into connection with Andrew Carnegie. When the various Carnegie interests were consolidated Mr. Frick became chairman of the new company and active head of one of the largest industries in the world. It was the big strike at Homestead in 1892 that brought him to public attention. A fanatic named Bergman shot at and stabbed him, wounding him badly, and the incident added to the excitement caused by the labor troubles.

Mr. Frick recently built a $500,000 "cottage" at Beverly Farms, Mass., for a country residence. It contains a pipe organ which cost $6,000. He spends large sums on works of art and is said to have given a great deal of money in a quiet way to charitable undertakings. Some time ago two women called at his office to get a small contribution for a new free bath house in Pittsburg. They could not obtain an interview with him and were going away disappointed when Mr. Frick's confidential clerk came out with a slip in his hand. On it was written, "Give the ladies this check and tell them Mr. Frick cannot see them today." When they saw the amount of the check they almost fainted. It was for $5,000.

whole world kin. The strenuous life which Mr. Roosevelt lives finds a responsive note in the life of the vigorous and aggressive west, and the greetings he has received from residents of towns on his route have been interesting and often picturesque. On a holiday the president prefers to take his hardships with the rest, and a log shack has been his home while in camp in the mountains of Colorado. With the advent of Mr. Roosevelt temporary partitions were put up, and one rude apartment was assigned to the use of the chief magistrate of the United States. That was as far as distinctions were allowed in the hunter's camp.

THIS is the day of the natural waisted woman. The W. B. Erect Form has changed the American figure. It has supplanted discomfort with ease—it has banished the impossible and exaggerated figure produced by the old corset idea. It removes the strain of lacing from the sensitive parts of the body and throws all pressure upon the hips and the strong back muscles, supporting the stomach within the corset and not forcing it below the garment. The Erect Form is made in more models than ever before. There are forty distinct styles of this popular make, each meant for a distinct type of woman. Dealers in all sized towns and cities the land over, sell the Erect Form. Prices range upward from $1.

Rice as a Soporific.

"If people would eat plenty of rice they would not need drugs to make them sleep," said a New York drug clerk, pausing for a moment in putting up a sleeping potion for a woman. "There is much said about rice as a strengthening food, but few Americans know that it has soporific powers. If properly cooked it has. Rice should be washed many times until the water no longer appears milky. It should then be soaked a few hours, salted and boiled rapidly about thirty minutes. When cooked in this way it can be eaten each day with relish, and the person who eats it sleeps well and dreams not at all."

suggestion in your news article of recent date that I was retained while the bill was pending is of course simply unthinkable; such an act would have been dishonorable to myself and discreditable to the county. Nor had I the slightest supposition that I would be retained until the committee called upon me for such purpose. I then stated to the committee the fact that I had filed many claims for private individuals, and always with the understanding that I should receive a percentage of the recovery, paying disbursements myself and making no charge unless successful, for the reason that such claims were always problematical, and for the further reason that the statute allowed no costs to attorneys in the Court of Claims, and that my compensations had uniformly been in all such cases from 25 to 50 per cent. of the recovery, with the result that the committee and myself agreed upon such terms in this case with the understanding that the compensation should be 30 per cent. of the recovery. I paying all disbursements, and no charge to be made either for service or disbursements unless successful.

While I was hopeful of recovery, and so stated to the committee, it is only fair to say that many of the best legal minds in the State were of the opinion that recovery could not be had, and such opinion is shown not to have been groundless by the fact that the Court of Claims dismissed the claim of Ulster county in the test case, and while upon appeal the counties were successful before the Appellate Division, two of the justices thereof dissented from the prevailing opinion, holding that the counties had no cause of action. Upon appeal to the Court of Appeals the judgment of the Appellate Division in favor of the counties was upheld, but Judges O'Brien and Martin dissented from such a conclusion. It will be seen that when the Judges of the Court of Appeals divided in their opinion as to the merits of the claim, both the committee and myself were justified in believing that the result of the litigation was at best uncertain, and that therefore an arrangement to take the claim upon a percentage, saving the County from an expense in case of failure, was a natural and it seems to me a proper one.

Four months of constant effort was expended in obtaining data upon which to base the claim, there being no records in many of the town clerk's offices of the transactions, and the study and consultation with the various attorneys having similar claims throughout the State, during the five years in which the litigation was pending, was constant and arduous, and involved the expenditure of a considerable sum of money. My partner, S. B. Mead, was associated with me as counsel in the matter; the claim was vigorously prosecuted to a successful issue, the judgment satisfied by me, and the sum of $43,247.19 paid over by me to the County Treasurer immediately after I received it, 30 per cent. having been retained by me as a compensation in accordance with the agreement stated. The retention of the sum agreed upon as compensation was in accordance with the practice I had always pursued in such cases with private clients, and with no thought of taking any undue advantage of the county.

It is now urged that the entire sum collected should be paid to the treasurer and the Board of Supervisors permitted to pass upon the whole subject. To that course I have no objection whatever; and to that end I shall, on my return to New York, send the County Treasurer a draft covering the balance of the judgment.

I may add that in pursuing such a course, I having signed a waiver of my lien upon the judgment, which the State requires in all such cases, it will rest entirely with the Board of Supervisors to say whether it will carry out the contract of its committee. I am constrained to this course with no belief that I am morally or legally bound to do so, but to the end that no fair minded man shall be able to say that any undue advantage has been taken by me. I should have pursued such a course in the first instance had I supposed there would be any disposition in any quarter to question the authority of the committee or the fairness of the charge.

Dated Fulton, N. Y., May 15, 1905.

Very respectfully,

N. N. STRANAHAN.

Mammoth One-Ring Circus.

From a bundle of city exchanges it is seen that Brown's United Shows and old-fashioned one-ring circus which will be seen in Fulton, are astounding the largest audiences everywhere, and the newspapers wherever the circus exhibits, are at a loss for adjectives with which to eulogize the incomparable and world-famous Shows.

In the language of the day, Brown's All-New United Monster Shows which come to Fulton and will give two performances on North First street, (Nelson's field) are described as the glory crowned giants, royally and transcendently surpassing all other popular priced circuses. The proprietor's coming to Fulton is not like that of a stranger, not as an adventurer, but as a time-tried, thoroughly tested man of the people. His shows have never changed their names nor has the proprietor ever perjured himself by unkept promises. On the contrary he holds every promises a sacred pledge as chaste as it is matchless. This honorable, honest business way has sent Brown's United Shows to the zenith of their glory and they stand today alone and in the solar system of big shows. Only the best and highest salaried performers are employed. As a result the mammoth water-proof tent, with a seating capacity of 5,000 persons, should be filled on Thursday afternoon and evening, May 18.

Until the last session of Congress, when a portion of these license taxes were devoted to road-building in Alaska, the people received no return whatever for their taxes and were denied, and are now denied, a voice in Congress. There is no one who may officially make known our wants even though denied a vote, as all delegates are.

We have even had to submit to a moss-backed unprogressive and thoroughly incapable Governor, foisted upon us for three terms because, forsooth, your good Senator Depew has been imposed upon and has been prevailed upon to recommend to the President the sublime incompetent who now misrepresents the people of Alaska. If the President would listen to the endorsements of a good live up-to-date man like Collector Stranahan of New York, Alaska would have a Governor of whom all might be proud. Depew is fond of his jokes, and the biggest one he ever prepetrated is Governor Brady of Alaska.

If Senator Depew would make fewer trips to Europe and would visit Alaska before he entirely reaches his dotage, Alaskans would have more hope of attaining to the legislation that they need and that is denied no other civilized people on earth.

In addition to contributing its fair share of the tariff taxes, the internal revenue taxes and all the other taxes that are levied by the federal government on its citizens for the support of its machinery, for its army and navy and all the other national expenses, the district of Alaska, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1904, contributed to the national treasury of the United States the sum of $168,975.43 in license fees. This sum does not include the license taxes that were paid by those in corporated towns. It includes only the money that found its way into the national treasury, and the figures are from the annual report of the secretary of the treasury.

Alaska also paid $197,260 70 as taxes for fur seal skins.

Valdez has formed a political club, the object of which is stated to be to work for the nomination of Fairbanks in 1908. Members of the club have written to Mr. Fairbanks, calling his attention to the merits of Hon. N. N. Stranahan as a suitable running mate. You might be glad to know that Mr. Fairbanks is better liked in Alaska than any other public man.

I have been too long out of the harness to write an entertaining newspaper letter, and besides I do not imagine the people of Fulton take a very lively interest in Alaska, and few of them remember me. However, as Editor Hughes of The Times has been kind enough and enterprising enongh to request me to write something for publication, you may submit this letter to him, and if he sees anything in it that he cares to cut out and put into readable shape in his own good way he has my consent to do so.

FULTON GHORAL SOCIETY

First Annual Meeting and Re-election of Officers—Report of Treasurer.

The Fulton Choral Society held its first annual meeting last Wednesday evening in the Baptist church, the Rev. A. H. Grant, president of the society, occupying the chair. Secretary and treasurer, T. H. Webb, presented his report, which showed $43 remaining in the treasury after all expenses of the year had been defrayed.

The second Wednesday in May was definitely decided on as the date of the annual meeting. An amendment to the constitution was adopted and the following officers re-elected for the ensuing year: President, the Rev. A. H. Grant; vice-president, Mrs. L. Fowler Joy; secretary and treasurer, T. H. Webb; executive committee, the Rev. W. B. Sawtelle, Miss Georgetta Foster and W. J. Furness.

A vote of thanks to the Presbyterian and Baptist church societies and also to all members of the orchestra, was unaminously adopted.

An adjournment was taken to June 7, when important changes in the constitution will be discussed and directors for the year's work will be selected. Rehearsals will begin on October 1st.

California Mining Interests.

The New York Investor of May 8 has the following to say regarding Mr. A. L. Wisner, who is president of the banking and brokerage firm of A. L. Wisner & Co., Inc., 32 Broadway, New York, one of the most prominent and successful firms in its line in the United States. A. L. Wisner & Co. are mine owners and mining and oil operators as well as brokers. They own, control and operate all properties they finance; they select only the choicest properties that money can buy. They have particularly strong Western connections. They are working on a system and a basis that insures the very best possible results, and their success has been really remarkable. The California and New York Oil Companies, Consolidated, one of their enterprises, has just been withdrawn from the market as completely financed, after the sale of 700,000 shares of stock in a few months. This company owns the famous 3,000-barrel Coalinga gusher, the greatest oil well in California. It is paying heavy dividends and is probably the most meritorious oil enterprise ever floated on the New York market. The Marchie mine, which they also operate, is shipping ore to the smelter, running from $200 to $400 a ton, and is proving to be one of the greatest gold mines in America. It is regarded by well-posted mining men as capable of paying $1,000,000 a year in dividends for half a century. Their other enterprises are all of the highest grade, and are first-class investments.

Mr. Wisner is a man of force and character, as well as the most unswerving integrity, and to his untiring energy and ceaseless efforts is due the enviable position his firm occupies in financial circles. The number of investors for whom he has made money is legion, and this fact, together with the high reputation he enjoys, is causing the business of A. L. Wisner & Co. to expand by leaps and bounds. He certainly has a brillant future before him.

This firm is represented in Fulton and Oswego by Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Goodjon, 309 Buffalo street.

Margaret, widow of the late Jerome Eddy, aged 73, died on Thursday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Olin, after an illness of several years, with creeping paralysis. The funeral was held from the late home on Saturday and the body was taken to Richland for interment.

Mary J., aged 60, wife of Mr. Luzerne S. Austin, died suddenly on Saturday at her home in Volney Centre from organic heart disease. The funeral was held from the late home on Monday afternoon, the Rev. C. J. Taft officiating. Interment was made at Sayles Corners. The husband and three sons survive.

Nelson B. Dingman, aged 67, died on Sunday at the home of his son, Mr. E. J. Dingman, West Second street. The funeral was held from the late home this Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, the Rev. G. R. Foster officiating. Interment in Mt. Adnah.

Norwood R. Dines, aged 61, died on Friday at his home in Emory street, after a long period of ill health. The funeral was held on Monday from the late home and interment was made in Mt. Adnah.

Dr. D. E. Lake received notification on Monday of the death of his father, C. Lake, aged 97, in Baltersia, Ont., Dr. and Mrs. D. E. Lake and Dr. and Mrs. H. L. Lake left on Monday evening to attend the funeral.

The death of the Rev. Noah E. Jenkins occurred Thursday at his home at Lambs Corners near Mexico. The deceased belonged to the Wesleyan Methodist church and for many years had charge of churches in the Northern part of the State and was for many years the pastor of the church at Pratham this county. For the past few years he had given up the ministry and resided on his farm at Lambs Corners. He is survived by his widow, who is a sister of John Avery of Mexico, and a son and daughter. The funeral was held at the family residence Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

At the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Kellogg, May 17, Ida L. Foster, wife of James S. Foster, aged 28 years. One year ago it was discovered that the dread disease, consumption, had fastened itself upon her. All that medical aid and loving care could do to stay the disease was done, but to no avail. The deceased bore her long and painful illness with sweet patience and remarkable fortitude. The last few weeks the patient anxiously waited for the summons to depart and be at rest. Her husband, one little daughter, her father, mother and a large circle of relatives and friends remain to mourn her loss, but they are conscious that their loss is her eternal gain.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to sincerely thank the friends and neighbors who so kindly assisted us in our recent sad bereavement, also the choir for appropriate music rendered, and those who furnished the beautiful flowers as a last tribute of respect.

Chief Ross on Thursday received word from Chief of Police Molyneux of Lockport, to the effect that William Kirby and Edward Saguiney who were wanted by the Niagara Paper Company for stealing 220 pounds of copper wire from them, might be in Fulton. Instructions were given the local police and the men were soon discovered with Fulton men on the circus grounds in North First street. As soon as the men were discovered they ran and it was not until evening that Officers Bray and Blodgett located them on the West side. They were taken into custody and an officer was sent to take them to Lockport.

The bids were opened for street sprinkling:

The Board of Fire and Police Commissioners agreed to furnish one sprinkling wagon with team and driver to sprinkle streets designed by Superintendent of Public Works at 50 cents per hour, to be done under direction of said Superintendent.

Mr. A. A. Carr offered to sprinkle the streets advertised during season of 1905 for 37½ cents per hour, the city to furnish wagon; work to be done under direction of Board or Superintendent of Public Works.

The City Clerk was instructed to write S. C. HISTORICAL POINTS

Commercial and Manufacturing Industries in Fulton in Years Gone By.

In regard to the three grists mills spoken of in a former article, I find in the account books of my father, William Schenck, who was a boatman on the Oswego river from 1816 to 1828 inclusive, that on the 27th day of October, 1826, he brought from Salt Point (Salina) on the boat "Perserverance"—at that time the largest on the river—four mill stones and some casting for Norman Hubbard's mill. The millstones weighed just four tons, which, with the rest of the cargo, made a very large load for a boat in those days. It seems that the mill was in course of construction, but was not completed to do any grinding until the Spring of 1827. It was located south of Oneida street, where the north end of E. E. Hart's coal sheds are at present, and extended westerly over a small part of the present raceway and was supplied with power from the new State dam through a flume.

After Mr. Hubbard's death in 1827 and certainly by April 1st, 1830, it was rented by Henry Wells and William Jerome for one year. Some time in 1831 it was bought by John Warlock (the tool maker), and part of the payment was to be 1,000 axes at $1 each. Not being able to complete his contract, he took Mr. Kenyon into partnership with him (that was in 1834) who continued with him until the Spring of 1836, when Joseph Whitney leased the mill for one year. In 1837, or thereabouts, the mill was moved in a westerly direction for about eighty feet to admit of the building of a part of the present raceway, which was begun in 1836. From 1839 until 1842 it was conducted again by John Warlock, then R. C. and S. N. Kenyon bought it and were owners and operators until they sold to Edwin T. Bronson and Joseph B. Lyon of Oswego. April 1st, 1848, they mortgaged the property to the Kenyon's, who foreclosed the mortgage the next year, and it went into the hands of Surdam & Reed of New York; that was in 1849. In 1850, Mr. W. S. Nelson purchased of the New York men on contract and sold his contract to Wm. Lewis of Oswego. Mr. Lewis put his two nephews, John and Ira Lewis, into the mill; they were endorsed by T. H. Mott of Oswego. They failed, and it was operated one year by Mr. Statts, and then sold to R. C. and S. N. Kenyon and Johnson, who were running it in 1862, when it burned.

Henry and Oliver French built their mill in 1832, on the north side of Oneida street, (the southeast corner was in the street a trifle), where the late "Genesee Mills" stood. Joseph P. Whitney was employed in this mill a long time. In November 1840, Messrs. Charles G. Case and Thomas W. Chesbro bought it, and it was continued by them as a flouring mill until 1861, when James A. Baker & Co. became the owners. The next year this was destroyed by fire at the time the Cayuga (Hubbard) mill and others burned.

Both of these mills had four run of stone each. These two mills were the only ones running on Steen's location in 1835. Although there had been a grist mill many years prior to that time, of which I will speak later, and of the structures erected upon the foundations of the buildings burned. The old stone grist mill, built by Timothy Pratt upon the Oswego Falls reservation, was also running in 1835. Historians have given 1832 as the date of the building of this mill. I find, however, that the key-stone of the arched doorway of that mill is now in possession of Mr. H. L. Paddock of this city, and the inscription on it is "Nov., A. D. 1830." I also find that Mr. Pratt had business relations with William Schenck, which show that flour was ground there in 1831. This mill was also used as a linseed oil mill by Mr. Pratt. He sold it to Mr. Gardner Wood, who continued it as an oil mill until just before the rebellion, 1860 or 61. It was then used, a short time for the making of lead plate. About 1866, Mr. D. C. King used it as an oil mill and for two or three years following. Then it was unoccupied until the Oswego Falls Pulp & Paper Co. had it removed to build their pulp mill in 1892.

The Andrew Downie's monster tenting circus, museum, and menagerie, will exhibit at Fulton on Friday, June 2, giving two performances, afternoon and evening. The history of this gigantic tented amusement institution in the past is a sure guarantee for the future. There will be a grand free street parade at 10:30 a. m. on the day of exhibition, the parade will contain rare and wild animals from all parts of the globe and birds from every known clime. Three grand bands of music, the funny clown band, the miniature golden chariots, drawn by tiny shetland ponies; the world's largest and most costly steam organ, will pass through the principal streets on the day, as above advertised. The price of admission has been reduced this season. Children under the age of 12 years, 15 cents. Adults 25 cents. Doors open at 1 and 7. Performance one hour later.

Woman's Home Companion for June.

The Woman's Home Companion for June has for its cover one of De Longpre's beautiful rose studies, and all the pages are filled with the spirit of the early Summer. "Sacajawea, the Bird-Woman," is one reminder of this; Mrs. Sangster's "Wedding-Bells" another: "A Bungalow that can be built for $660.00" sounds very pleasant; while the fashion notes are of special interest to the June bride and the girl graduate. The short stories, too, are particularly adapted to Summer reading—"A Knight of To-day," "Larry's Angel," "A Suburban Burglar" and "The Stillson Mill." "The girl diver of the Great Lakes" and "The Living Sacrifice of the Carmelite Nun" are especially rich in illustrations as well as the interest of their subject matter. In a culinary way Mrs. Herrick tells what to have for the Sunday-night supper in hot weather, and Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill gives her "Twelve Favorite Recipes." Regular departments are quite up to their usual high standard—the "Pages for boys and girls," the "Puzzle page," "Half-minute paragraphs," etc. Published by the Crowell Publishing Company, Springfield, Ohio; one dollar a year; ten cents a copy.

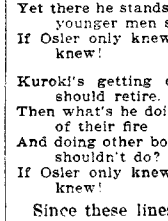
SHELL HOLES IN PORT ARTHUR BANK.

SOME idea of what a shell does to a modern building may be gained from the accompanying picture of one corner of the Russo-Chinese bank in Port Arthur. During the siege the bank was struck twice in the same corner by Japanese projectiles, and the larger of the two apertures made in the brick wall was seven feet high by about five feet broad. During the siege the hospitals were struck repeatedly, and a number of sick and wounded men were killed in their cots. The Japanese declared that bombarding hospitals was not their intention, but that after their big guns had been fired many times their accuracy was impaired and the offending shells fell short of the real marks aimed at. Many of Port Arthur's noncombatants lived in caves, but even here the shells at times searched them out and killed them.

Brigadier General Oswald H. Ernst, who has been appointed to the reorganized isthmian canal commission, was first designated a member of the canal board in 1899 by President McKinley. He has spent his life in study of engineering problems and has been identified with some extensive works of this character. General Ernst was born in Cincinnati in 1842. He was at Harvard university for two years, but left there to enter the West Point Military academy, where he graduated in 1864 as first lieutenant in the engineer corps. He saw active service in the Atlanta campaign of that year and afterward served as assistant engineer on fortifications of the Pacific coast. He was astronomer with the United States commission to observe the solar eclipse in Spain in 1870 and has been superintendent of West Point academy and engineer in charge of numerous river and harbor improvements throughout the country. In 1898 he served with credit in the campaign in Porto Rico.

BRIGADIER GENERAL O. H. ERNST.

Representative Joseph Crocker Sibley, who has begun a fifth term as a member of congress from Pennsylvania, is one of the most picturesque figures in that body. He has been a Methodist exhorter and a sportsman, is a good judge of horseflesh, a yachtsman and an enthusiastic devotee of the automobile. When congress met in extra session not long since he sailed to the national capital in his yacht and, as he expressed it in horsy language, "left it hitched to a post out in the Potomac." A fellow congressman who had just been taken out on Mr. Sibley's yacht remarked:



REPRESENTATIVE J. C. SIBLEY.

"First time Joe came to congress he came on a common railroad train. Then he tried twice to come and did not get here at all. Then he came on a tallyho and then in an automobile. This time he came in a yacht."

"He'll show up in a balloon next time," said John Sharp Williams.

Former Postmaster General Robert J. Wynne, who was recently appointed consul general of the United States to London and has now taken up his residence there, has a son who is a gallant officer in the navy and who was the foremost figure in an international incident which for a time threatened to cause bad feeling between the republic of the United States and the kingdom of Italy. The consul general's son, Captain Robert F. Wynne, was in command of the marine guard of the cruiser Chicago when some of the officers of the cruiser went ashore at Venice and got into trouble with the municipal authorities. While the officers were in a cafe a table was accidentally overturned and some wine glasses were smashed. A collision between the officers and the Italians resulted, and the Americans were taken before a magistrate, where they were sentenced to terms of imprisonment considered to be altogether out of proportion to the offense, even supposing them to have been guilty of the acts charged. Captain Wynne's term of imprisonment was over four months. He and the other officers were for some days confined in a filthy cell and subjected to indignities. All were subsequently pardoned by the king of Italy and investigation exculpated Captain Wynne from any charges of conduct unbecoming a gentleman. The captain fought with distinction at Guantanamo, in Cuba, during the Spanish war, at the battle of Noveleta, in the Philippines, and at the battle of Tientsin in the Boxer insurrection in China, when he was under fire for fourteen hours. He was recommended for gallantry in action on account of his conduct in China.

CAPTAIN R. F. WYNNE.

Clarence S. Darrow, whom Mayor Dunne of Chicago has designated as special counsel for the city in charge of traction litigation, has had a career which fits him to cope with the difficult problems to be solved through his aid. Litigation is anticipated in carrying out the platform on which Judge Dunne was chosen mayor and which declared for immediate municipalization of the traction facilities of the city. Mr. Darrow has long been an advocate of public ownership of such utilities and was elected to the Illinois legislature in 1902 on such a platform. He was born in Ohio in 1857 and started out as a corporation lawyer, but his sympathies soon led him in an opposite direction. He was counsel for Debs in the railroad strike of 1894 and for the United Mine Workers in the arbitration proceedings before the anthracite coal strike commission appointed by President Roosevelt. On this occasion Mr. Darrow made a speech which lasted for two court days without consulting his notes. He is a writer of more than local repute and author of a book which defends the theory of Tolstoi as to nonresistance. He is a vegetarian, practices "the simple life" and is noted for his opposition to all the aristocratic tendencies of society.

CLARENCE S. DARROW.

"PAPA" LINEVITCH.

Russian General Is Energetic and Popular Despite Osler Theory.

When General Kuropatkin was retreating from Mukden a poet named Wallace Irwin, writing in the New York Globe, pictured him as sitting in dejection and reflecting upon what was being done to him by men beyond what Dr. Osler terms the chloroforming age, sixty years. According to the poet, the general soliloquized thus:

That little fellow Nogi, though he's past threescore and ten,
Is prancing like a three-year-old around my Russian men.
Is tying Tieling in a knot that breaks my line in two—
If Osler only knew of this, if Osler only
knew!

Then there's that old Oyama, who my stubborn center stormed.
He certainly is past the age; he should be chloroformed.
Yet there he stands performing tricks that younger men should do—
If Osler only knew of this, if Osler only
knew!

Kuroki's getting on in life and surely should retire.
Then what's he doing on my left directing of their fire
And doing other boyish things an old man shouldn't do?
If Osler only knew of this, if Osler only
knew!

Since these lines were written Kuropatkin, himself fifty-six years of age, has been succeeded in command of the Russian army in the field by Lieutenant General Linevitch, who is sixty-six. According to Osler, he should have been chloroformed six years ago. Nogi is not quite so old as the poet makes him, being five years under the chloroforming age, but he has been a warrior for forty years. General Kuroki is sixty-two, and General Nodzu is sixty-four, so that the military situation in Manchuria does not bear out the Osler theory, it is argued. General Linevitch assumed command of the Russian forces at a discouraging juncture of affairs, as the army had sustained disastrous defeat at Mukden and was on the retreat toward Harbin. His personal popularity with the soldiers is said to have served him in good stead. George Kennan says of General Linevitch in the Outlook:

"PAPA" LINEVITCH IN THE FIELD.

"The army knows and loves only one general, and that is 'Papa' Linevitch. No matter in what part of the army I have been, I have heard everywhere the words, 'If papasha were only here!' He is the man whom both officers and soldiers trust."

RIGHTS WON FOR WOMEN.

Mrs. Logan's Comments on the Work of Susan B. Anthony.

In an article in the New York American Mrs. John A. Logan says regarding the work of Susan B. Anthony and the cause for which she has labored for so many years:

"Susan B. Anthony, the originator of the woman's suffrage movement, deserves the thanks of the women of the nation for the reformation she has brought about touching the rights of women. She and her coadjutors have caused legislation which has protected women and their property from the unscrupulous treachery and selfishness of men. They have achieved wonders along many lines, securing for their sex more consideration, greater equality before the law and more liberal compensation for their labor, though they have not yet succeeded in establishing the rule of like compensation for like service.

"If the qualification of education should be applied to voters a greater number of women would be eligible than men in proportion to the population. They are naturally more inclined to education than men. Surely the causes of temperance, morality, religion, patriotism and education would be greatly advanced were women granted the right of suffrage and if the qualifications for eligibility of all voters to the privilege were raised to a higher standard.

"I cannot believe that the granting of the right would in any sense affect women unfavorably or disqualify them for the holier and higher states of wives and mothers. On the contrary, I believe that they would use the right of suffrage conscientiously, intelligently and with the keenest appreciation of the responsibility resting upon them.

"They might not always act wisely, but they are less corrupt than men, if one may judge from the experience of the government. Among the thousands of employees of the government it is a well known fact that not a cent has ever been lost to the United States treasury through the dishonesty of a female employee, although they have handled millions of money during and since the war."

FOR ALL—MEN AND WOMEN.

A Little Phrase Significant of Centuries of Injustice.

In the March Cosmopolitan John Brisben Walker enumerates the issues before the American people. There are twenty-two in all, and the sixteenth one is "Equal rights before the law for all—men and women."

That phrase, "men and women," is significant of much.

If we say "all," why should it be necessary to add "men and women?" That little phrase bears witness to a vast injustice which has left its record on the language of many centuries. If Richard Chevenix French were alive today he might add a paragraph or two to his "Study of Words," stating that the disfranchisement of women in this enlightened age of the world has led to a singular change in the meaning of certain words. When political matters were being discussed, the word "people" and "citizens" meant not men and women, but men only, and "all" signified not the whole people, but men only. The day is not far off, however, when these words will be restored to their original estate. Half a century ago the movement for woman's enfranchisement was only a subject for silly vulgar ridicule. Today it is a national issue.

LIDA CALVERT OBENCHAIN.

A Good Family Liniment.

Every family should be supplied with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. For cuts, bruises, burns, scalds and similar injuries, which are of frequent occurrence, there is nothing so good. It soothes the wound and not only gives instant relief from pain, but causes the part to heal in about one-third the time required by the usual treatment. As it is an antiseptic all danger from blood-poisoning is avoided. Sold by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Suffrage a Duty.

I leave it to others to speak of suffrage as a right or a privilege; I speak of it as a duty. What right have you women to leave all this work of caring for the country with men? Is it not your country as well as theirs? Are not your children to live in it after you are gone? And are you not bound to contribute whatever faculty God has given you to make it and keep it a pure, safe and happy land?—James Freeman Clarke.

Colds

It should be borne in mind that every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality and prepares the system for the more serious diseases, among which are the two greatest destroyers of human life, pneumonia and consumption.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

has won its great popularity by its prompt cures of this most common ailment. It aids expectoration, relieves the lungs and opens the secretions, effecting a speedy and permanent cure. It counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia.

Stories Told by the Actors

JAMES H. STODDART, the veteran actor, was five years old when he made his first appearance as the child of Martin Haywood in Jerrold's drama of "The Rent Day." He writes: "In the last scene, where Crumbs, played by my father, seizes Martin's goods and chattels and is about to turn him out of doors, I became fearfully excited, and when Martin, my stage father, began berating the real author of my being I could stand it no longer. I ran from Martin and clung wildly to old Crumbs. I had been announced as 'Master Stoddart, five years old; his first appearance on any stage,' so that my identity and my relation to Crumbs were known to the public. The audience yelled with delight, and the conclusion of the act was, of course, completely upset. My debut, therefore, proved highly injurious to my prospects, for some time afterward when other children were required Alexander would say to my father, 'Stoddart, don't bring "The Rent Day" boy.'"

J. H. STODDART.

Edgar L. Davenport of "The College Widow" company tells the following story on an Irishman: "Michael had been on American soil but a short time and had been walking around for several days in a ceaseless search for work. He finally stopped in front of a bookstore, in the window of which was a sign reading: 'Dickens' Works Here All Week, $3!' The Celt pondered over the sign for several minutes, spelling out each character. After scratching his head he said, 'Bedad, that Dickens feller is pretty hard oop fer wurrk if he stays here all week for t'ree dollars.'"

EDGAR L. DAVENPORT.

While Lawrence D'Orsay was appearing in "The Earl of Pawtucket" in St. Louis a few weeks ago he was a guest of the St. Louis club, as was also General Clyde Donaldson, an English army officer, who was not very well up on American affairs.

"I hear that the native Americans—ah—the red men, of course, I mean," remarked the general, "are pretty well exterminated. We shall not see any of them, shall we?"

LAWRENCE D'ORSAY.

"Well, you won't see many on your way east," replied their host, "but Mr. D'Orsay will see plenty of Indians on his way to the coast. In most of the larger towns he will find an American Indian standing in front of nearly every cigar store."

"Oh, that will be jolly good sport, D'Orsay. The only Indians I have ever seen were with the Buffalo Bill Wild West troupe at home," said the general.

"Oh, that is nothing, old chap," said D'Orsay; "the country's new yet. Why, bless my soul, at my summer home—ah—in New York city—I used to amuse myself at my library window—ah—watching a herd of twenty odd buffaloes peacefully grazing within a stone's throw of the house."

After the laugh had subsided the general said, "Oh, I say, D'Orsay, that is putting it a bit strong."

"Not at all. You see, I lived directly opposite the Bronx zoological park."

The general was convinced.

Francis Wilson, who is touring in a new piece entitled "Cousin Billy," once wrote some reminiscences for Collier's Weekly about his encounters with aspirants for fame on the stage. He said he was often called on for advice and nearly every mail brought him a letter reading somewhat like this:

FRANCIS WILSON.

Dear Sir—I have seen and admired your acting for years [oh, that's a familiar phrase!], and I regard you as the foremost representative of your profession. [And that's another—full of flattery!] I know you are a very busy man, and I dislike to rob you of the few moments' leisure vouchsafed you from your arduous and artistic efforts, but can you not spare an ambitious youth [or maiden] a few hours of your valuable time for the discussion of a subject—the stage—which is very near and very dear to his [or her] heart? My parents object to my going on the stage [that's painfully familiar!], and I should have to bear an assumed name, but this we can also discuss if you will only be good enough to grant the interview. Please do not throw this in the waste paper basket. [The writer has an idea perhaps that it should be gilded and framed!] You made a beginning once, and in memory of the difficulties that beset you then give a hearing to one [who beats you now—no!] who is knocking feebly [very feebly] at the door of your profession now! Yours ambitiously, STELLA.

Mr. Wilson says it is hard to give advice to such aspirants for the honors of the stage.

Dr. M. M. Fenner, Fredonia, N. Y.

Dear Sir:—After a sickness of more than five years, I was tempted to try your Kidney and Backache Cure. In the mean time I had tried or been under about 20 doctors care at the beginning of my trouble. It was thought to be only a local one, but as time wore on I became worse, so that at last I could not stand on my feet. Then my arms and hands became useless.

But at last after a very long time the use of both came back to me so that I could walk a little with the aid of crutches. The Doctors helped me to this point and no further, and for 2½ years I kept in the same condition.

Through the use of your Kidney and Backache Cure I am now in good health.

Will say, the doctors told me—all of them—that there was no cure for me, because I was then suffering from Lo-Co-Moter Ataxia.

I Remain yours Respectfully,

WOMAN SUFFRAGE ASSURED

It Is the Logical Outcome of All Christian Civilization.

All the arguments, if they can be called arguments, in opposition to the extension of the elective franchise to women have been arguments based upon expediency only. Now, an argument of expediency is the argument of tyranny always, because it is based upon the suggestion that persons who have the power may deem it expedient or inexpedient, according to their sweet notions, whether they shall extend any power to others or not.

Woman suffrage is the inevitable result of the logic of the situation of modern society. It must come. We cannot stop it. If universal suffrage is a mistake that mistake was made ages ago, because if women are not to have all the rights which the logic of the situation gives to them then we ought to have kept women in subjection. Women ought to have been kept in the situation in which they were placed by the old English common law, which we have been accustomed to boast of so much, but when we opened the door we opened it to all this growth, all this progress and all this improvement, and we have brought society to this one point now where nothing is lacking for the complete enfranchisement of women except the ballot.

The despot who first yielded an inch of power gave up the field. That power could never be recalled. Reforms do not go backward. Everything goes forward. We are simply standing in our own light, certainly in the light of the best interests of the state, when we stand in the way of this forward movement, and I say that we ought to get out of the way and permit this movement to go on and not to resist further this claim for enlargement, for improvement, which the women demand and which every man, I believe, will admit that the near future will bring.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Memorial Day should be fittingly observed next Tuesday. It recalls a crisis in the history of this nation; heroism on fields of battle, and the courage, fortitude and valor of Americans in a war in which each section of our country signalized its consecration to principal, as it was then understood. When Charles Sumner proposed to erase from the banners of the National Army the mementos of the bloody internal struggle, the proposition jarred on the sensibilities of the people of the North. It was even a more gracious act for Congress, during President Roosevelt's administration, to return the banners to the States from which they were captured. The people of the South naturally cherish the recollections of battles fought and victories won in defence of a hopeless cause. Future generations, when they recount the deeds of heroism and devotion to duty of both sections, will not speak more highly of Northern courage or Southern prowess, but will give to each a full measure of praise for the "obedience unto death" which was manifested with the spirit of duty and of high sacrifice.

RESOLUTIONS have been adopted by the Long Island Council of Women's Clubs, advocating a national divorce law and also urging President Roosevelt to appoint a proper proportion of women to serve on the committee composed of ecclesiastics and lawyers to investigate the divorce problem.

MUNICIPAL ownership and railroad problems will occupy the attention of the Hon. William J. Bryan, who will make a tour of the world in quest of practical information regarding them. Mr. Bryan's indefatigable zeal counts for much with the Democratic party. His efforts at resuscitation should be appreciated, as he is unquestionably one of the leaders who takes advantage of every position and is serious in his advocacy of what he considers reform measures.

IN about a week's time the corner stone of the Carnegie Library will be laid and the building will be pushed rapidly toward completion. A list of those who have contributed—no matter how small the amount—toward the furnishing of the structure and site, will be placed in the box, together with other data. Although efforts have been made to keep a correct record of the contributors, yet errors of omission may have occurred and the Library Trustees ask that immediate notice be given of such omission to Mrs. Emens, the librarian, so that the record may be perfected. Our citizens have abundant reason to congratulate themselves over the fact that owing to the zeal of the library officials and the generosity of Andrew Carnegie, Fulton will soon have a public building that will be ornamental and extremely useful to the many generations that are to follow.

COMMON COUNCIL.

Resolutions Adopted Authorizing Issue of $15,000 in Bonds—Part Payment of Sewer Construction on West Side.

A special meeting of the Common Council was held on Monday evening. Mayor Brooker and Aldermen Dilts, Brown, Russell, Prince and Bogardus were present.

The following resolution was presented by Alderman Russell and adopted:

Whereas, The Board of Public Works of the City of Fulton, was, by a certificate in writing dated Dec. 14, 1904, duly certified to the Common Council of said city that the total cost of construction of a sanitary trunk sewer for that portion of the city lying west of the Oswego River, including the cost of maps, plans, supervision and engineering, will be the sum of $30,000. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Common Council of the City of Fulton that registry bonds in the amount of $15,000 in part payment for the construction of said sewer, according to the maps and plans adopted by the Board of Public Works, and duly approved by the State Board of Health and filed in the office of the City Clerk, be issued and sold, pursuant to the provisions of the City Charter; that said bonds be of the denomination of $1,000 each, bearing date of June 1, 1905, and payable as follows: Five bonds of $1,000 each on July 1, 1920; five on July 1, 1925; five on July 1, 1930, to be registered in form, bearing interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually on the first day of July and January of each year and that said bonds shall be signed by the Mayor and City Chamberlain, and countersigned by the City Clerk, under the seal of the city. Be it further

Resolved, That for the purpose of paying interest on said bonds and the principal as the same becomes due and payable, a tax be levied annually upon the taxable property of this city, to be apportioned between the east tax district and the west side tax district in the manner provided in the City Charter, which tax shall be sufficient in amount for said purpose and shall be applied to the payment of said interest and principal, and to no other purpose whatever.

After the presentation and acceptance of the monthly pay roll of the city officials, the Board adjourned.

I have just received a new line of the famous Always-Wear-Well shoes for men, to which I would call your especial attention.

THE CLOTHES

...THAT GENTLEMEN WANT...

THE custom tailor will find his cleverness taxed and every phase of his craft called into requisition to fashion a suit with the distinctive lines—the graceful appearance and perfect proportions that indentify ours—at fifteen dollars or more—tis the only ready-for-service clothing of which we know that has everything (except the price) in common with the finest made-to-order.

OUR STYLES are distinctive and elegant—yet safely conservative—showing original designs—not too far from conventional lines.

MATERIALS of just the proper quality and pliancy to yield to the deft fingers of the tailor-artisans—which gives expression to the grace and shapliness of the garment—in fact the demand of discriminating men are exacting and the ability to meet them are seldom found.

Men of fashion—gentlemen of discriminating taste — well-groomed men in general — expect more of their clothier than of their tailor.

We cater to those who wish to be "well-dressed" without Extra Cost.

A visit is worth your while—we shall be glad to see you.

The Fire department was called on Friday evening to a barn belonging to Joseph Chetney and rented by Henry Smith. The fire originated from a spark from a locomotive, it is thought, and within twenty minutes the structure was in ruins, burning so rapidly that the efforts of the firemen were futile. One horse, harness, and a carriage were destroyed. No insurance. A false alarm was sent in from box 68, on Friday night and from box 152 on Saturday night and the department responded, Three men from Oswego were arrested on suspicion on Friday night but there was not sufficient evidence to hold them. The Board of Fire and Police are making earnest efforts to locate the miscreant whose pleasure is so expensive to the city, but as yet they have been unsuccessful in their quest.

THREE DOLLARS BETTER THAN THOUSANDS.

Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. Kennedy's NEW Medicine, Did More than Many Doctors.

Your pocketbook as well as your health needs consideration, but often both suffer through ignorance of the right thing to buy. That was the case with the gentleman who wrote the following letter:

"Thousands of dollars have I paid to doctors during my life and I don't complain of the doctors; but Dr. Kennedy's new medicine, Cal-cura Solvent, beats them all. Three bottles of it cured me of a spring of heart trouble and terrible pains in the side, back and head. Am better than for thirty years."—H. J. Brandow, Jewett Centre, N. Y.

For $3.00 invested in Cal-cura Solvent Mr. Brandow got what he had spent thousands for in vain. All druggists, $1.00.

Shed Her Teeth.

A passenger on an English railway train pulled the "communication cord" the other day and stopped the train. When the guard came to the compartment in which the cord had been pulled he found a distracted woman passenger. She had been looking out of the window and had dropped her false teeth. She wished to go back and find them.

How He Extricated Himself.

She—Would you have me believe I am the first girl you ever proposed to? He—Goodness, no! I suppose I've asked a dozen. She—And they all refused you? He—Of course. Every one of them knew I was head over heels in love with you. She—You dear boy!—Boston Transcript.

Why Suffer From Rheumatism?

Why suffer from rheumatism when one application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm will relieve the Pain? The quick relief which this liniment affords makes rest and sleep possible, and that alone is worth many times its cost. Many who have used it hoping only for a short relief from suffering have been happily surprised to find that after a while the relief became permanent. Mrs. V. H. Leggett of Yum Yum, Tennesee, U. S. A., writes: "I am a great sufferer from rheumatism, all over from head to foot, and Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only thing that will relieve the pain." For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

The Mexican Bridegroom.

The bridegroom in Mexico finds marriage a very costly business. He is expected to buy the trousseau, and he is fortunate if he can satisfy the extravagance sanctioned by custom and prompted by ardent passion. Young men from the country are said to be often seen in the City of Mexico purchasing all sorts of finery for the ladies of their choice, and the spectacle they present as they consult the measurements, which they carry with them for all sorts of garments, is very amusing.

Earthquakes.

Earthquakes generally do their work with great rapidity, but there are exceptions. While Caracas and Lisbon were destroyed in a few minutes, the Calabrian earthquakes beginning in 1783 lasted four years. Earthquakes travel across the earth at velocities varying between several hundred and several thousand feet a second, the greater the intensity of the shock the greater being the velocity. The sea waves that frequently accompany earthquakes also travel at tremendous speeds. A submarine earthquake near the coast of Japan in 1854 gave rise to sea waves which traversed the whole breadth of the Pacific at the rate of 370 miles an hour. At Simoda, Japan, the waves from this earthquake were thirty feet high. At San Diego, Cal., they were only six inches high.

A Persistent Fighter.

The measures of Wilberforce in the British house of commons for the abolishing of the British slave trade had a hard struggle before they finally prevailed. On Feb. 15, 1805, Wilberforce moved "without entering into any argument" for a bill to abolish the slave trade after a limited time and for a committee to consider its propriety. He had been introducing such a bill almost every year for fifteen years, although his twelve resolutions against the traffic were carried in 1789 without a division. But year after year the bill came to wreck, either in the house of lords or the commons, suffering defeat in 1796 because several of its supporters had gone to see a new comic opera. It was doomed to disaster again in 1805, but finally triumphed in 1807.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the Very Best.

"I have been using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and want to say that it is the best cough medicine I have ever taken," says George L. Chubb, a merchant of Harlan, Mich. There is no question about its being the best, as it will cure a cough or cold in less time than any other treatment. It should always be kept in the house ready for instant use, for a cold can be cured in much less time when promptly treated. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Cairo the Gambler's Paradise.

Modern Cairo must be a sort of gambler's paradise, judging from some facts which I recently had from a friend who has been investigating the subject. In one of the principal streets near Mohammed Ali square a gentleman who knows the town well pointed out over twenty first floors over the shops with the names of bars upon them, every one of which he knew to be a gambling hell, and a police official admitted to the investigator that the town was full of such places. The police do not seem to be at fault. They raid the places from time to time, but the offenders, nearly all foreigners and mostly Greeks, are protected by their consuls and let off lightly and return to the business the next day. I should guess that the business is chiefly carried on for foreigners as well as by them. There is a sort of cosmopolitanism about gambling, and its votaries are drawn from all corners of the earth by the scent of the game. But this seems to be one respect in which Egypt has not improved under British influence.—London Truth.

A Queen's Cold Cure.

"You have a cold, eh?" said the physician. "Well, suppose I give you the same prescription that Queen Elizabeth used?"

He took down an ancient folio.

"Dr. William Bulleyn's prescription for a cold, which Queen Elizabeth used all her life, was this," he said.

"Takes nutmegges, the root called dornike, which the apothecaries have, setwall, gatangall, mastike, long pepper, the bark of pomecitrone, of melon, of sage, hazel, marjorum, dill, spiknard, wood of aloes, cubebe, cardamon (called graynes of paradise), lavender, penironalls, the bone of a hart's heart grated, cut and stamped, and beat your spices grossly in a mortar. Put in ambergrice and musk, of each half a dram. Distil this in a simple aqua vitae, made with strong ale, in a serpentine. To tell the virtue of this water against cold, phlegme, dropsy, heaviness of mind, coming of melancholy, I cannot well at the present, for it is too great."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

DASTARDLY OUTRAGE

Cora Sweet, Aged 12, Assaulted and Murdered in Town of Scriba Last Sunday Morning, While on Her Way to Church.

The body of Cora Sweet, aged 12, was found last Sunday evening at 6 o'clock by a boy in a patch of woods six miles from Oswego. The body was covered with blood, the skull fractured evidently by a blow with a stone which was found beside the unfortunate child and it was evident that she had been outraged.

Abut 10 o'clock on Sunday morning the girl left her home, which is on Seneca street or Middle Road, in the Town of Scriba, six miles east of Oswego, bound for the Baptist church two miles away at Lycoming.

She was last seen by the family of L. A. Morey, who live a half mile east of her home. She spoke pleasantly to them and said:

"I am better than you because I am going to church."

Half a mile farther east the road runs parallel to a dense wood. It was here, about 600 feet from the roadway, that her body was found.

George T. Guile, a farmer, and a boy, Jesse Moat, who were searching for lost cattle, came upon the body.

The girl, who was large and well developed for her age, had evidently made a furious struggle.

There was a gash six inches long and about two inches deep extending from behind her right ear to the base of her skull and two wounds, slight in their nature, above and to the right of the right eye.

Her under garments were torn off and were found by her side. They were drenched with blood and a portion pulled over her face.

Her mother is prostrated at the news and it is feared that the shock will prove fatal to her.

Henry Manser, 28 years old, a farmer employed by Frank Gurney, seven miles east of Oswego, was arrested by Sheriff Cook and locked up in the county jail Monday morning on the suspicion that he is the murderer of Cora Sweet.

Investigations reveal that Manser was in the vicinity of the place where the crime was committed, and footprints leading through the woods across two meadows and two ploughed fields to a spring brook are surely his. The tracks show that the heel of one of the shoes was worn away on the side. The shoes Manser wore when arrested were taken from his feet and they fitted the tracks perfectly. One of the heels of these shoes was worn away on the side.

The identity and capture of Manser so soon after the crime had been committed is due to the work of Mrs. Frank Gurney, who is a cousin of Manser. She had seen the young man leave the house in the morning, return again between 1 and 2 o'clock in the afternoon and go direct to his room. In a few minutes he started off toward the woods again. She could not account for his wanderings and after hearing the details of the horrible crime, believed that the guilty one must have blood stains of some kind on his clothing.

Without saying anything to the other members of the family, she went to Manser's room to examine his clothing, while he was away. There were nothing but the overalls there but under the lamplight she thought the marks on the knees and the front of the overalls looked like blood. There was a damp handkerchief in the pocket. She told her husband of the find when he returned home. Manser spent Sunday night with his mother at the Kanes farm and returned to the Gurney house Monday morning at 5 o'clock, put on the bloody overalls and started for the fields to plow.

While he was gone Mrs. Gurney made another search of the clothing and discovered blood spots on the vest which had soaked through the lining. The spot was about three inches long. It was Mr. Gurney who told the Sheriff of what his wife had found and then Manser was arrested. The cap which he wore in the fields showed evidence of blood stains on the front and also that the stains had been discovered and an attempt made to remove them.

Every resident in the neighborhood and vicinity of the crime for a radius of five miles believes that Manser is the guilty man. A special term of Court will undoubtedly be called to act upon the case.

MEMORIAL SERMON.

Impressive Services Last Sun-Evening in Presbyterian Church—Eloquent Address by Rev. A. C. Sawtelle.

The Presbyterian church was crowded to the doors last Sunday evening, the special occasion being a union memorial service. The members of Post Schenck, G. A. R., Woman's Relief Corps, Columbia Circle, W. J. Pentelow Camp S. of V., and kindred societies, attended in a body.

Those present on the platform who took part in the services were the Revs. G. R. Foster, W. G. Bassett and S. D. Robinson.

The service was an exceedingly interesting one. The choir was assisted by a male quartette and rendered appropriate music. "Gathering Home," by Dudley Buck, was given in excellent voice and was the opening anthem; the Rev. John Richards read the scriptures and Mrs. Thomas Hunter sang "Depths of Mercy" in a superb manner. The Rev. S. D. Robinson prayed, and the Rev. A. C. Sawtelle preached an eloquent sermon from Exodus xii.14: "And this day shall be unto you for a memorial."

The speaker dwelt on the significance of Memorial Day to the Hebrew nation and the detailed instructions given by Jehovah for its observance. The purpose being to keep the memory of the day fresh in the minds of the people and to instruct their children in its fulfillment.

The diversity of opinion regarding a proper observance of Memorial Day in the northern section of our country was dwelt upon by the speaker, who thought that more reverence should be paid to it and its real meaning impressed upon the minds of the youth of the present day. This was fitting because it was a duty we owed to our veterans, living as well as dead, and a duty to ourselves. Honest people always honor true worth and are blessed in so doing. Besides, children should profit by our good example and thus be taught the right principles of patriotism and freedom. A recognition of an all-wise Providence in the history of this nation, "who doeth all things well," is imperative. He it is who can heal the broken hearts of the relatives of those who died for their country. Blessed, thrice blessed and only blessed are those who can say, "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord."

The consciousness that the hand of a loving God has shaped the destiny of this nation should be impressed on the minds of the youth so that they will ever be mindful of the sacredness of the occasion.

Jehovah is with this nation, even as He was with Israel of old. Surely He has not dealt so bountifully with any other people.

Memorial Day has a deep significance to the veterans of the G. A. R.

In closing his remarks, the speaker drew a graphic picture of two grand reviews. The Grand Army of the Republic was marching on; its ranks on earth growing thinner year by year—six of the veterans in this city having passed away since last Memorial Day. But its numbers were being increased and its ranks filled up as they pass in review before the great white throne above.

Kipling's "Recessional" was most appropriately quoted in closing the eloquent address.

God of our fathers, known of old,
Lord of our far-flung battle line;
Beneath whose awful hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine—
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

The tumult and the shouting dies;
The captains and the kings depart:
Still stands thine ancient sacrifice,
An humble and a contrite heart.
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

Far-called, our navies melt away;
On dune and headland sinks the fire:
Lo, all our pomp of yesterday
Is one with Nineveh and Tyre!
Judge of the nations, spare us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

If, drunk with sight of power, we loose
Wild tongues that have not Thee in awe,—
Such boasting as the Gentiles use,
Or lesser breeds without the Law,—
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget.

For heathen heart that puts her trust
In reeking tube and iron shard,—
All valiant dust that builds on dust,
And guarding, calls not thee to guard,—
For frantic boast and foolish word,
Thy mercy on thy people, Lord!
Amen.

Memorial Day Exercises.

The climatic conditions on Tuesday were most delightful and a large number of strangers visited this city. The exercises in the Opera House were largely attended and the deepest interest was manifested in the eloquent address of the Rev. S. D. Robinson.

The exercises were opened with the G. A. R. ritual and the blessing was invoked by the Rev. G. R. Foster. Musical selections were rendered by the male quartette composed of Messrs. N. H. Gilbert, C. M. Allen, B. W. Bennett and H. A. McFarland and a mixed quartette composed of Mrs. Thomas Hunter, Miss Mabel Hodges and Messrs. N. H. Gilbert and H. A. McFarland.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies the line of march to the cemetery was formed, and floral tribute was paid the memory of the dead heroes by their living comrades at arms.

Supper was served by the W. R. C., and the Ladies' Aid, S. of V., in the G. A. R. hall at 6 o'clock.

Numerous Fires.

The fire department was called on Thursday noon to the Daniel Baldwin planing mill in Leitch street, where they found a merry blaze started under the back portion of the mill. The blaze was soon extinguished and the loss was slight. The origin of the fire is a mystery. The firemen had just returned to the engine house, when a second alarm called them to the C. M. Allen cooper shop in North Third street, where a blaze had started in the roof from sparks. The fire was also promptly extinguished with slight loss.

First Communion.

On Tuesday morning fifty little girls and twenty five little boys took first communion in the Church of the Immaculate Conception, he Rev. P. J. Kearney officiating.

Berry Crates.

Mr. R. M. Pierce of Fruit Valley has had three hundred strawberry crates made at a box shop, which will be the first gift crates ever sent from Oswego. Mr. Pierce says that they cost him fifteen cents each. When they have performed the service required of them they will be broken up and used for kindling wood by the men receiving them.

An ordinary berry crate, such as is used by Oswego county growers, costs 50 cents. Many of these are lost each year in transit and others are returned by the express company at a cost of ten cents each. Many of those returned are in more or less damaged condition. Taking into account those that are lost, the repairs necessary upon those returned and the cost in handling and getting them back to the farms, the cost to the growers is not much, if any, less than fifteen cents. Therefore gift crates, at a cost of fifteen cents each, saves to the growers the investment in crates at fifty cents each.

If the growers of Oswego County can be made to see the question in this light, Mr. Pierce believes that the gift crate question has been solved, providing that they can be obtained at the price now charged. Besides, with the gift crates a new clean package is always ready for the fruit.

Swancott's Body Recovered.

The body of C. A. Swancott, the engineer who was drowned in the Oswego river two weeks ago, was found by George Rowland of Minetto on Wednesday afternoon in the vicinity of Cates Eddy. The body was floating face downward in seventeen feet of water. It had been in the water for eight days and was unrecognizable. The remains were taken to Mr. E. P. Coles undertaking parlors from which they were shipped to Utica on Thursday morning and the funeral was held on Thursday afternoon. It is reported that the relatives will commence suit against the government for the loss, claiming that the cable on which the car ran was unsafe.

Interesting Trophy.

Adjutant General Henry has been notified that the famous battle flag of the Twenty-Eighth Regiment of New York volunteers, recruited at Lockport, is to be added to the Capitol war trophies.

At the battle of Cedar Mountain the color bearer was shot down. Realizing he was to lose the colors he cut a piece from the flag to save, and tucked it under his shirt. The flag was taken by the Confederate forces to Richmond, and some time after the war to Washington. The wounded color bearer recovered and years afterward identified the flag by fitting the piece he had saved on the battle field to the torn colors. The flag and an accompanying guidon have now been turned over to the State authorities by the regiment survivors.

"Handle With Care."

If you send a package marked "Handle With Care" by freight, the railway employees will take every opportunity to tumble it around and dump it on the depot platform as though it were a bale of hay. We once saw a railroad employee so sick he could scarcely hold up his head, but when his wandering eye happened to fall on a package marked "Handle With Care" he arose with an expiring effort and threw the blamed thing the length of the depot platform, danced upon it, then shrieked and died."—Alma (Kan.) Sensitive Nerves.

When the points of a hairpin are passed along the cheek from a point near the eye to the edge of the upper lip they seem to separate. The reason is found in the fact that the nerves of the upper lip are more sensitive than those of the cheek and consequently differentiate the two points. Portions of the back are so little sensitive to the touch that two points three inches apart will create the impression of but one.

"The Three Most Beautiful Roses" By Paul de Longpre

At the urgent solicitation of the Woman's Home Companion, Mr. Paul de Longpre, who is the greatest painter of flowers in the world, consented to make a painting of what he considered "The Three Most Beautiful Roses," and the painting is without doubt one of the masterpieces of this great artist. This magnificent picture is reproduced in all its original grandeur on the cover of the Woman's Home Companion for June. Although this cover is an accurate reproduction of a painting worth hundreds of dollars, yet the June number, which has this exquisite cover, may be obtained at any first-class news-stand or direct from the publishers for the trivial sum of only ten cents.

Mr. Paul de Longpre is justly styled the "King of Flower Painters." He not only paints roses, but every flower that grows, and is the highest authority on flowers. His paintings are found in the most select homes. Some have sold for as much as seven thousand five hundred dollars ($7,500.00).

Artists, art critics and competent judges all agree that the covers of the Woman's Home Companion far excel those of any other magazine.

The Woman's Home Companion is a magazine which in beauty and excellence, art, stories, illustrations and fashions, etc., excels all other home and family magazines. The Woman's Home Companion is published by The Crowell Publishing Company, New York City, also Chicago, Ill., at One Dollar a year, and is the favorite magazine in nearly half a million homes, where it is read each and every issue by three million people

The Boon of self Education.

"To give a boy the best of all opportunities—the opportunity of self education—turn him loose in a library," advises Prof. George Edward Woodberry, writing of Sir Walter Scott in the June McClure's.

"Scott" he says, "had the education of the school as a thing of course, and it was valuable to him; but he illustrates the fact that to turn a boy loose in a library is to give him the best of all opportunities—the opportunity for self-education. He read from childhood widely and well, and while yet a boy had such an acquaintance with great literature as would now seem phenomenal, though it was precisely the same as that which a generation later New England boys had at the same age, if they were so inclined."

The Shining Face of Moses.

All down through the ages a mistake has been perpetuated as to the meaning of the Hebrew word "karan," "to emit rays like horns." It is the word used in Exodus xxxiv, 29, to describe the shining face of Moses after he had talked with the Lord. The Septuagint translated it into Greek, "his head was horned." So all through the middle ages and the period of great Italian art the Vulgate had it (whence Michael Angelo and other artists got the idea, Angelo giving to Moses two flamelike locks of hair on the head); the Cranmer Bible and the Douay Catholic English Bible continued the queer error. King James' version at last got it right, "the skin of Moses' face shone, and Moses put the veil upon his face," etc.

Coaling the Sun.

Coaling the sun is an expression used by physicists to indicate the necessity of renewing the stock of motive power, exactly analogous to coaling a vessel for an ocean journey. Many maintain that this is done by the incessant showers of meteorites which rain in upon it from celestial space. Thus it is that the sun's energy is continually kept up and its fires are fed. Atom after atom in the continuous collisions of matter is changed into vapor and adds its quota of energy to the great central storehouse—in fact, "coals the sun."

The Isle of Man.

The Isle of Man is situated in the Irish sea, nearly equidistant from England and Ireland and belongs to Great Britain. The government is vested in a lieutenant governor, executive council and house of keys. It was ruled by Northmen from the ninth or tenth to the thirteenth century; was annexed to Scotland by Alexander III. and was afterward ruled by various kings. It was ruled by the Stanley family from the beginning of the fifteenth century to 1735, when it passed to the earls of Athole. In 1765 the British government acquired most of the royal rights of the Athole family, the last rights falling to the crown in 1829. English is generally spoken, and the native Manx is fast disappearing. It has an area of 220 square miles and a population of 56,000. The three legs used on its coins are the emblem of the island and signify "The Isle of Man kneels to England, kicks at Scotland and spurns Ireland."

Lord Liverpool's Rape of the Teapot.

Lord Liverpool, who was traveling incognito, after breakfasting at a hotel in London, ordered his valet, a raw Sussex youth, to clear the table and pack everything in a portmanteau. By this order, of course, was meant Lord Liverpool's letters and papers. But the youth took it to include the silver teapot and spoons. When Lord Liverpool was driving down Oxford street a cry of "Stop thief!" was raised, and the landlord of the hotel arrived in hot pursuit. There in the street the prime minister had the mortification of having his luggage opened, and in it was found the plate. Never would the statesman laugh at the episode even years after, so great was his fear that the story might get into the newspapers.—London Spectator.

A Grand Gala Day.

The great street parade at 10:30 a. m. is a revelation in the way of a free exhibition, and is worth coming miles to see. The prices have been reduced for this day and date only. Children under the age of 12 years, 15 cents, and adults, 25 cents. Doors open at 1 and 7 p. m. Performance one hour later.

Probing the Beef Trust

MRS. MARY E. MARCY.

THE alleged combination of packing companies popularly known as the beef trust is the subject of inquiry at the present time by several branches of the federal government. One inquiry is being conducted by the department of justice and another by the interstate commerce commission, while the senate committee on interstate commerce has also made investigations in this direction. The packing industry was the subject of a report made to the president in March by Commissioner Garfield of the bureau of corporations. Under the instructions of the department of justice, of which Attorney General William H. Moody is the head, federal grand juries in Chicago, New York and other cities have for some time been engaged in investigations into the operations of the alleged trust. Some indictments have been reported and more are anticipated as a result of testimony taken. The federal authorities are said to have experienced some difficulty in obtaining testimony from those at present connected with the packing companies. There has recently been a remarkable exodus from the metropolis of the west of heads of beef packing firms and managers of departments. Some, it has been announced, have gone on their usual vacations to Europe, others on business trips to Canada or South America. It has been affirmed that some of the gentlemen wanted as witnesses by the grand jury registered under assumed names when they put up at hotels in foreign countries. Although inquiries on the subject have elicited the information that the trips taken were customary with the approach of summer, it is said Chicago has never known a period when so many beef trust officials and employees were away at one time before. When the grand jury could not get the husbands it summoned some of the wives. Just what they said to the jurymen is a secret with that body.

The injunction granted by Judge Grosscup of Chicago in 1903 commanded the packers to refrain from acts in restraint of trade, and it is said that evidence obtained in the course of the investigation shows violation of the injunction or attempts to evade its provisions. Statements have been made that the cattle buyers of the various packing firms of Chicago have been accustomed to hold meetings each morning to agree on prices to be paid for cattle, and it is reported that evidence in proof of such statements is now in possession of the federal authorities.

In both the investigations conducted by the department of justice and by the interstate commerce commission most valuable information has been obtained through stenographers formerly in the employ of packers. The case of one of these stenographers, Mrs. Mary E. Marcy, is especially interesting. She was employed six months in the office of Armour & Co. and eight months in the office of Swift & Co. and while so employed determined to turn the knowledge she acquired of the affairs of the beef industry to literary account. The company's officials knew her simply as a stenographer and typewriter and never suspected that she had ambition to shine in the world of literature or yearned to expose what she regarded as unjust and cruel commercial methods. She was intrusted with confidential correspondence, learning in this way the cipher code in use between the packing companies, and was successful in preserving her shorthand notes and making carbon copies for her own use of many important documents. She used the information thus acquired in a series of articles published in a Chicago periodical. When the federal authorities learned of her case she was summoned before the grand jury and willingly submitted to it the valuable information she had obtained while acting as stenographer.

EXPERT WOMAN WHIP.

Miss Giulia Morosini and Her Fame as "Queen of the Speedway."

Miss Giulia Morosini, who presented to the Road Drivers' association of New York city a silver cup for the winner of the Speedway races, is known as the "Queen of the Speedway" and is considered the most expert woman whip in the country. She is the only woman ever admitted to membership in the Road Drivers' association and the only one having a permit to drive three horses abreast on the Speedway. The association awarded her a championship ribbon and rosette a year ago for her novel display at the annual Speedway parade and for her efforts in behalf of the event.

Miss Morosini is a daughter of the banker, G. P. Morosini, once partner of Jay Gould, and her interest in driving amounts to a passion. Her stable consists of twelve Kentucky thoroughbreds, not one of which cost less than $5,000, and these horses are never driven by any one but herself. Their stalls are covered with white tiling, and on the floors are mats woven with ribbon. The steeds get sugar every day and receive such exquisite care that their coats are always as shiny as silk.

At the recent annual parade on the Speedway Miss Morosini was awarded the honor of having the finest turnout in the parade. She drove the triple hitch composed of Glory, Glorious and Peacock, and the blue blooded animals were resplendent in gorgeous harness designed by herself. She often spends from $7,000 to $10,000 on a cart and harness, and, though she is reputed to pay $100,000 a year for her gowns and has jewels valued at $1,000,000, she gets more pleasure from driving good horses than from anything else. The Miss Morosini cup is of sterling silver and stands eighteen inches high. The handle of the cover consists of a laurel wreath in the center of which is a horse's bit to give a suggestion of character to the trophy.

JAPANESE BASEBALL.

The Waseda University Team and Its American Tour.

The Japanese, who are emulating the Americans in so many things, have even acquired the true American admiration for the game of baseball, and the team from Waseda university, Tokyo, which recently arrived in this country, has surprised the public by the ability of its members to play ball.

MEMBERS OF WASEDA BASEBALL TEAM.

The Jap collegians who have the courage to contest for honors with Americans in the typical American game have their baseball song, their yell and their uniforms. The latter are Japanese rather than American in type, and the players wear blue socks, or "tabi," instead of spiked shoes.

Baseball is now played in most Japanese universities, colleges and middle grade schools, and the team which has come to this country holds the championship of Japan, having defeated all the native college clubs and such foreign teams as exist in the different cities. For four years the players of this club have been under the instruction of Fred Merrifield, a former star player of Chicago university, and the manager of the tour is Professor Iso Abe, a graduate of Trinity college, Hartford, Conn., who has done much to bring the team to its present state of skill. The Japanese are proud of the team, and among the mikado's subjects are many enthusiastic fans.

Thus far the Waseda university players have more than found their match when pitted against first class American nines.

LEVEL OF CIVILIZATION.

In All Nations Parallel With That of Womanhood.

It seems to me that the honest objection of most people to woman suffrage is that it would not be good for the world; it would not be good for the race; it would not be good for mothers.

We know that in all nations the level of civilization is always parallel with the level of womanhood; that no matter how intelligent and free and strong American men are, if they had Hottentot wives or even Turkish wives, they would not have as fine children. The development of the woman is necessary to the birth of strong brains.

America today is going forward to a world position such as no nation has ever had, and we need bigger brains. We need the power to see things as a whole to get the entire drift of affairs. Everywhere in government people fail for lack of breadth of mind, the power to balance all the considerations, to see far ahead and all around. We shall need it more and more as our range of power increases.

At present half of our citizens, the mothers of the country, the people who do more to build brains than anybody else, occupy their minds all their lives long with their small private affairs. They do not spend time thinking and caring about large affairs. They do not participate in matters of public interest, and they can neither bear nor rear as broad minded, as public spirited, as able children, as if they were abler themselves. It takes strong, wise, able women to make strong, wise, able men.

Now, if women have the right of suffrage and think about public affairs, feel the responsibility of them, give their minds to them, turn their consciences on them, it will give us a breed of people better able to take the large place of which I have spoken, having the larger honesty—not the small man to man honesty, but the public honesty that is so bitterly needed everywhere and for lack of which Russia is going to pieces.

I believe that will come to the human race much sooner than otherwise by allowing the women to share the responsibility of government, to exercise their minds and their consciences on the duties they owe to their cities, to the states, to the country and to the whole world.

The Silver Maple.

The highest pinnacle of tree development seems to have been reached when the silver maple was formed in nature's crucible. Think of all the good points in a physically perfect, high strung, blooded horse, apply these points to tree life and we have the silver maple. From the ground up to the topmost leaflet we find expressed in every atom of the tree strength, vitality, purity, beauty and usefulness. The trunk of this tree is as sleek and clear cut as any one could imagine a tree to be. The leaf is beautiful in its shape and color, the underside being a soft very white—from which it takes its name—and as one stands under it and looks up he sees a silver dome, or, as a breeze is blowing, the green and silver leaves shimmer and vibrate like those of aspen, giving the appearance of pale green fire, which is especially noticeable on the approach of a storm. The leaf is five pointed and the entire edge is again indented with well defined teeth. This is the common shade tree of our cities.—St. Nicholas.

AFRAID OF WOMAN SUFFRAGE

Remarkable Letter Circulated by an Anonymous Californian.

There has recently been distributed among the legislators of California a circular letter signed "Pro Bono Publico" in which is set forth the dire results which would follow the adopting of woman suffrage in California, basing his prophecies on imaginary conditions said to be prevalent in the states where women vote.

In one paragraph the statement is made that woman suffrage would have the effect of "driving people out and keeping thousands from coming into the state;" in another, that "should the amendment be adopted California would soon become the Mecca for women from all parts of the country." These two statements can only be reconciled by admitting that women are not people.

Though the governor of Kansas, who has just recommended woman suffrage to the legislature, says, "Municipal suffrage has worked no ill to womanhood or to the state;" though Hon. J. A. Van Orsdel, attorney general of Wyoming, has just been speaking in the most favorable terms of the effect of equal suffrage in Wyoming; though Alva Adams is such a stanch defender of it; though ex-Governor Peabody is also on record as favoring it because of the good it has done in Colorado; though we have abundant testimony as to its good effects from reliable men and women in all the states where women are enfranchised, still the document paints a black picture of conditions in all these states, telling how they have decreased in population, in wealth and in prestige generally.

In this, of course, it is not unlike other antisuffrage literature. But it is unique in some respects. It blames suffragists because "members of their sex marry abroad" and charges them also with "engrafting the kindergartens on the public schools, thus crippling the public schools and costing taxpayers millions of dollars, without any benefit whatsoever."

Verily, respectable persons who are known as antisuffragists must sometimes wince at the old adage, "A man is known by the company he keeps."

How and Why It Rains.

Rain is an accumulation of the tiny particles of the vapor of the atmosphere into drops. These drops, first small of size, attract others of their kind and become drops of such magnitude that they fall to the earth because of their weight. There is a limit to the quantity of water which the air is capable of absorbing and retaining as invisible vapor. Warm air is able to hold more than cold air; hence when the air which is saturated with moisture becomes cold for any reason whatever it can no longer retain its moisture. A portion must under such condition accumulate into drops. These fall to the earth in the shape of rain.

His Hand Bath.

Arguing forcibly, if not convincingly, against the custom of taking a bath, still happily prevalent in certain quarters, a writer relates the savory story of a Kentish farm worker whose horny hand he grasped. "Good Kent dirt," said the man, catching a critical glance. "Haven't had time to wash your hands before tea?" was the question. "Wash my 'ands!" exclaimed the man. Then he became explanatory. "I never washes my 'ands. When they gets 'ard I lies 'em."

Tossing In a Blanket.

Tossing in a blanket was formerly a punishment for insubordinate volunteers during the Napoleon panic period. The Westminster boys once seized a bookseller, Curle, who had pirated and published the head king's scholar's oration without permission, and after tossing him in a blanket ducked him under the pump and kicked him out of Dean's yard.—London Telegraph.

Antiquity of Cheating.

False weights were found in the ruins of the oldest city that has yet been exhumed. And false weights will probably be consumed when the earth drops into the sun and the heavens are rolled together like a scroll. Ancient records and ancient statute books are full of evidence that every new practical device—from capitalistic and labor monopolies, secret rebates and majority owners, swindling monopoly owners, down to adulterations and crooked scales—was familiar to our ancestors of the plateau of Iran before the migrations. Vice is the old inhabitant; virtue is the newcomer, the immigrant, received with reluctance and compelled to fight for every inch of ground he gains.—David Graham Phillips in Reader Magazine.

Ants' Eggs.

The egg of the ant is uniform, smooth, tight and bright, without any division. When the larva has come from it only a very thin membrane is left, which rolls up and is reduced to an imperceptible point, and even if the egg does not hatch it is still so small as to escape the eyes. This is why these eggs are so little known, for what is commonly and improperly called the egg is really the larva and is endowed with life and motion. These eggs, or rather these larvae, of ants are very much sought after by barnyard fowl.

The Art of Expression.

A discontented woman uttered this complaint the other day: "If I only knew how to express myself!" she said. "I know so many things that I cannot possibly convey to other people." She did not dream that the little thing for which she yearned—namely, the art of expression—is the essential attribute of the loftiest genius in letters or the fine arts.—New York Telegram.

Jewels That Live.

Beauty, money and fame cannot be carried beyond the horizon line that shuts around this cradle of a world, but love, joy, peace, gentleness, faith, meekness, temperance, are jewels which by their very nature will survive the transit of the world invisible.—F. E. Willard.

WILLIAM E. HUGHES, Editor.

Publication Office, 56 South First St.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 31, 1905.

THE people of this country are pleased to learn that Secretary Hay has fully recovered his health.

IT is an easy matter to criticise the officials of the Chamber of Commerce and to charge them with indifference, but judgment in all cases should be suspended until the facts are known. Some are inclined to be hypercritical regarding Mr. W. W. Loomis' decision to locate his new industry at Homer. Every reasonable effort was made by Mr. Redhead, president of the Chamber of Commerce, to induce him to remain in Fulton, but to no avail, principally for the reason, we understand, that greater inducements were offered by Homer people. A plant, fully equipped with machinery, was found at the latter place, where the work of manufacturing could begin at once. Mr. Loomis cannot be blamed for taking advantage of the superior offer made by the Homer people, nor should the officials of the Chamber of Commerce be censured because he did so. Mr. Loomis's decision and that of his business associates was learned with regret by all who have the best interests of Fulton at heart—and especially by the officers of the Chamber of Commerce.

THERE is an old but trite saying that "politics make strange bedfellows." It is currently reported that Attorney Udelle Bartlett contemplates entering the field this Fall as an independent candidate for the office of district attorney, in opposition to W. B. Baker, Esq., who is seeking a renomination from the Republican party. Mr. Bartlett, it is understood, has assurances from the Hon. Charles Bulger of Oswego that he will receive the endorsement and hearty support of the Democratic party in his candidacy. It must be a subject of bitter regret to Democrats in this county to learn that their party is so impoverished in available candidates that they are compelled, at the dictation of one man, to be generous to disgruntled Republicans and lend them their support. Mr. Baker, we believe, has so conducted the office of district attorney that he will secure the endorsement of his party for renomination. This is an honor he has merited, which is based on evidence extending throughout his tenure of office, and his renomination and election are assured. Mr. Bartlett's candidacy may cause some slight annoyance, but there will be little anxiety felt regarding the outcome by Republicans.

The Case of Homer Terpening.

Oswego Times, Friday: District Attorney W. B. Baker today served the papers in the action to collect the bond of $1,000 given for the appearance of Homer Terpening, of Hannibal, for trial before the County Court on the charge of rape. When the case was called at Pulaski last week Terpening did not put in an appearance. The sureties on the bond are Ruben Terpening, father of the defendant, who lives at Ira, Cayuga county, and Dr. Harvey J. Terpening, of Fulton, a brother. This is the second bond in this case the District Attorney has prosecuted. The first bond for $1,000 was collected and the money is now in the hands of County Treasurer Moore.

MARRIED.

A pretty wedding was celebrated in the presence of the immediate friends and relatives at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Willard A. Palmer on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, when their daughter, Anna Mae, became the wife of Mr. Norris D. Storey. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. J. Taft, in front of a bank of ferns and apple blossoms. The couple were unattended. Miss Bertha Palmer played the wedding march from Wagner. At 8 o'clock the bride entered the parlor on the arm of her father who gave her away. Immediately after the ceremony congratulations were extended to Mr. and Mrs. Storey, after which a wedding supper was served. The home was tastefully decorated throughout with roses, apple blossoms and ferns. The bride was attired in a very becoming gown of white Persian lawn, trimmed with Valenciennes lace and carried a boquet of lillies of the valley. Mr. and Mrs. Storey left on the 9:34 train amid showers of rice. The couple will be "at home" after June 25 at Chatham, Ont., where Mr. Storey is engaged in the hardware business.

A HEROIC DEED

Ray Westover, Aged 16, Displays Marvelous Heroism in Rescuing His Companion, Ray Palmer, From a Watery Grave.

Ray Westover, aged about 16, last Saturday morning displayed marvelous presence of mind, good judgment and heroism in his rescue of Ray Palmer of about the same age, a son of Mr. and Mrs Ira Palmer of this city. Young Palmer and his companion were climbing on the trusswork supporting the river bridge to reach a point where they could conveniently fish. Palmer missed his hold and fell into the hydraulic raceway, the current of which is very swift. Westover saw the danger in an instant, and hurriedly jumping from his position he ran with all the speed at his command toward the Volney Paper Company's mill, where the water disappears under the bridge which crosses First street. At this point and across the raceway a beam is placed, and under which Palmer would have to pass, as there were no possibility of his resisting the turbulent waters which were tossing him along the surface as if he were a cork.

Westover reached the beam, and running out on it, correctly guessed the point at which Palmer would pass under, lowered his own body down until his feet touched the water. Holding on to the beam, he called to his companion to seize his legs, and when Palmer did so he then shouted lustily for help.

Men from the Volney Paper Mill came to the assistance of the boys and both were rescued from their perilous position Palmer's life was saved. Had he gone under the bridge his rescue would have been problematical; a miracle would have been necessary to save him from a watery grave.

Ray Westover is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Westover of 708 Cayuga street. He is the stuff that heroes are made of, and his parents have reason to be proud of his intelligence and bravery.

To say that Mr. and Mrs. Palmer are grateful to him is expressing it very mildly.

WHY

DO OUR COMPETITORS FIND IT NECESSARY TO REDUCE THEIR PRICE?

It is because having, loaded up with a large stock of cars they find that their car won't sell.

WE DO NOT

FIND IT NECESSARY TO REDUCE OUR PRICE IN ORDER TO SELL. The merit of our line is such that in many cases we have to refuse orders.

WHICH WILL YOU HAVE—A car that can only be sold by reducing the price, or one that sells on its merits?

WE ARE FORCED to refuse all future orders for the Pope-Tribune, as we can get no more this year.

THE FACT that the Olds factory is turning out more cars than any other two American factories combined, shows what the public think of the Olds.

IF YOU can find a spot on earth where there is no Oldsmobile we will send one there tomorrow.

"My kingdom for a horse."
King Richard cried in vain appeal,
Poor chap; he could not know, of course,
Six fifty buys an Oldsmobile.

If you want the best, write me for prices.

THE CLOTHES

...THAT GENTLEMEN WANT...

THE custom tailor will find his cleverness taxed and every phase of his craft called into requisition to fashion a suit with the distinctive lines—the graceful appearance and perfect proportions that indentify ours—at fifteen dollars or more—tis the only ready-for-service clothing of which we know that has everything (except the price) in common with the finest made-to-order.

OUR STYLES are distinctive and elegant—yet safely conservative—showing original designs—not too far from conventional lines.

MATERIALS of just the proper quality and pliancy to yield to the deft fingers of the tailor-artisans—which gives expression to the grace and shapliness of the garment—in fact the demand of discriminating men are exacting and the ability to meet them are seldom found.

Men of fashion—gentlemen of discriminating taste — well-groomed men in general — expect more of their clothier than of their tailor.

We cater to those who wish to be "well-dressed" without Extra Cost.

A visit is worth your while—we shall be glad to see you.

Recently a consignment of twelve ejector guns was sent to Norway, completing an order for twenty-four which had been received from that country. Thus it will be seen that the reputation of the L. C. Smith guns, made by the Hunter Brothers of this city, is world-wide and they are much in demand by sporting men of experience and judgment.

In the Limelight of Publicity

INTEREST is taken in the new labor commissioner of New York state, Philemon Tecumseh Sherman, because he is the son of the gallant soldier of the civil war who coined the immortal phrase "War is hell." But the fact that General William T. Sherman was his father is not his only claim upon the public interest. He has made a reputation of his own on quite different lines from that of the general. He is a student of municipal and sociological questions, has written a book entitled "Inside the Machine," has been prominent in the municipal reform work of the Citizens' Union in New York and was elected a member of the board of aldermen on the Citizens' Union ticket, serving in the years 1888 and 1889. He is classed as an independent Republican in politics.

P. TECUMSEH SHERMAN.

Mr. Sherman was born in St. Louis Jan. 9, 1867, graduated from the St. Louis university in 1886 and studied at Yale for two years thereafter. He took a course in law at the law school of Columbia university and was admitted to the bar and has since practiced his profession in New York. Mr. Sherman is thought to bear a strong resemblance to his brave and honored sire.

The shortest speech Theodore Roosevelt ever made, according to a New York crockery manufacturer, was when he was governor of New York state. He was reviewing the sound money parade on a day wet and chilly, relates the New York Times. A delegation of crockery men swung by, and a badge of the division and a small gold cup were presented to the governor. Mr. Roosevelt accepted the cup with a low bow and asked:

"Has anybody a flask?"

When ex-Governor and ex-Director of the Census William R. Merriam first visited Washington he was in knickerbockers and had left Minnesota with his mother to spend the winter with his grandmother. His father was governor at the time, and the Merriams were personages in St. Paul.

WILLIAM R. MERRIAM.

"How do you like Washington?" he was asked by a Washington woman, who had come to call on his mother, and before the mother came upon the scene.

"Oh, I like it all right," he replied.

"And how does mamma like it?" pursued the caller.

"Mamma likes it too. But she likes St. Paul better." Then, fearing he had not been quite polite to Washington or somebody, he added in explanation of his mother's preference, "You see, in St. Paul mamma's a big dog in a little yard."

Some friends had drawn Professor Reiss of Columbia university into talking about astronomy. The waiter in the club where the talk occurred was as deeply interested as the rest; still he wondered. Finally he mustered up courage and said:

"I beg your pardon, professor. I think I can understand how you can measure and find out how far the stars are away, but will you please tell me how you found out their names?"

Connecticut has lost two veteran statesmen within a twelvemonth. Senator Joseph R. Hawley and Senator Orville H. Platt. Ex-Governor Morgan G. Bulkeley was chosen to succeed Senator Hawley, and Frank Bosworth Brandegee of New London was recently selected by the Connecticut legislature to fill the unexpired term of Senator Platt, which has four years more to run. Mr. Brandegee has represented the Third Connecticut district in the house of representatives. He was elected to the Fifty-seventh congress to fill a vacancy and was twice re-elected.

SENATOR ELECT BRANDEGEE.

He was born in New London, July 8, 1864, and went to Yale university, where he achieved distinction by pulling bow oar in the varsity crew, has always been athletic and is of handsome appearance and has genial manners. He has practiced law in New London since 1888, has been corporation attorney of the city and a member of the Connecticut house of representatives, of which he was speaker in 1899. Senator Elect Brandegee has a reputation as a brilliant lawyer and as an orator of marked talent.

When Congressman Nicholas Longworth of Ohio, who is said to be much interested in Miss Alice Roosevelt, was a student at Harvard college he was on a certain occasion introduced to the poet Longfellow. Grasping Mr. Longworth by the hand, Mr. Longfellow immediately said, "Here is an instance where 'worth makes the man, the want of it the fellow.'"

It is said that an expert knowledge of theology is possessed by Amzi Lorenzo Barber, the asphalt magnate whose name has been brought into the Bowen-Loomis controversy through his assertion that the asphalt trust financed the Matos revolution in Venezuela. Mr. Barber was at the head of the trust some years ago. He was a college professor before he went into the business of paving streets and taught natural philosophy to the young men of the Columbian university at Washington. He graduated from that ill paid occupation and in manufacturing pavement became a multimillionaire and a yacht owner. It was at a gathering of yachtsmen that Mr. Barber's knowledge of theological subjects was once put to the test. A clubman excused himself for saying "all hell broke loose" on the ground that he was quoting Milton, line 918, book 4, "Paradise Lost." Another clubman vouched for the accuracy of the statement. Still another asked, "Who first said 'hell is paved with good intentions?'"

AMZI L. BARBER.

Every one looked at Barber, who quickly replied, with a twinkle in his eye:

"Dr. Johnson; but there was no asphalt in his day."

Professor James Stillman of Stevens Institute is the posessor of several degrees from various institutes of learning, says the New York Times. He often relates with pride, however, that he once received two in one day. On the day that he received his Ph. D. he also received that degree of degrees of which he is most proud, D A D.

The declaration of Chicago for municipal ownership in the recent election of Judge Edward F. Dunne as mayor and the changes in transit arrangements impending in consequence of this result lend interest to the visit to this country of James Dalrymple, general manager of the tramway lines of Glasgow, Scotland.

JAMES DALRYMPLE.

In Glasgow the tramway lines are owned and operated by the municipality, and it was on this account that Judge Dunne, as soon as he learned that he had been chosen mayor, cabled the lord provost of Glasgow to learn if Mr. Dalrymple could be granted a leave of absence so that he might give the Chicago authorities the benefit of his experience in the management of street car lines under the system of municipal ownership. Leave was granted, and he began preparations for his American trip. During his stay he will be the guest of several societies advocating the municipal ownership idea. Mr. Dalrymple is a graduate of the University of Glasgow, a member of various learned societies and the author of several works of a scientific and historical nature.

De Wolf Hopper, who last winter gave Canadians an opportunity of seeing the elaborate revival of "Wang," is not fond of cold weather. While in Canada he wrote to a friend in New York: "It is slaying. My only parallel for it is a cold room, with a nude man sitting on a cake of ice, his feet out of the window and his hands violently agitating a few bells. The only thing lacking in this simile as far as I know is the bump at the end."

It is said of Francis C. Hendricks, superintendent of insurance of the state of New York, who has been called on to look into the affairs of the Equitable Life Assurance society, that everything he has had in the way of political preferment has come to him without the appearance of his lifting a finger to get it. He amassed a fortune before he went into politics, and when he found that he had time to devote to public affairs one office after another came to him in almost continuous succession. He was born in Kingston, N. Y., in 1834 and in 1861 settled in Syracuse, which he has since made his home and of which he has been alderman, fire commissioner and mayor. He served two terms as an assemblyman, three terms as state senator and in 1891 was appointed collector of the port of New York. In January, 1900, the term of Louis F. Payn as superintendent of insurance was about to expire and much pressure was brought to bear on Theodore Roosevelt, then governor of New York, to reappoint him. He refused to do so, however, and in his place named Mr. Hendricks. The episode was the subject of much comment at the time.

FRANCIS C. HENDRICKS.

Recently a friend spoke to Jefferson De Angelis about a young woman in his company. "She's very pretty," remarked that individual, "but her eyebrows are too dark."

"Oh, I don't think that detracts from her beauty," was the comedian's reply. "Her eyebrows aren't as black as they are painted."

MRS. PEPPER'S FEATS.

Spiritualistic Medium Whose Seances Have Excited Debate.

Mrs. May S. Pepper, the spiritualistic medium whose seances have recently excited much discussion, has been since January, 1904, the reader of the organization known as the First Spiritualistic Church of Brooklyn Borough, New York city. She has mystified large audiences by the strange things she has done when in supposed communion with departed spirits. A few months ago she collapsed on the platform owing, as she claimed, to being almost asphyxiated with gas while in communion with the spirit of a person who had committed suicide by inhaling gas. An alleged expose of Mrs. Pepper's methods has recently been made by Harvey and Norena Teeter, who are known in connection with their lecture work. They charge her with resorting to sleight of hand tricks in the reading of sealed letters by concealing them in a flexible Bible, taking them in a back room, opening and reading them and then replacing them on the stand upon the platform. They also declare that it is just as easy for Mrs. Pepper to commune with the spirits of imaginary persons as with those who actually had existence and died.

Mrs. Pepper was formerly a servant girl on a farm near Providence, R. I. Her name was Mary Ann Scannell, and she married George W. Pepper in 1889, but afterward obtained a divorce from him. One of the converts to her organization is a New York publisher. He bought two safes some time ago from a man who died shortly after the purchase was consummated. The combinations were in cipher, and when the publisher discovered that he could not open the safes he consulted Mrs. Pepper. She communicated, as claimed, with the spirit of their former owner and learned from him how to open them. The publisher followed the instructions received from Mrs. Pepper and was successful.

HOBSON'S CONQUEROR.

Girl Who Won the Heart of Hero of Merrimac.

Gallant Captain Richmond P. Hobson has surrendered at last. The hero of the Merrimac has yielded to Cupid. There have been many rumors relating to the conquest of the captain's heart, but this time there is no doubt of the brave officer's surrender. To make the romance of the affair perfect it is a case of surrender of the south to the north, the captain's conqueror being a northern girl, Griselda Hull, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Hull of Tuxedo Park, N. Y. This time the capitulation is entirely voluntary, and as General Joe Wheeler, who has often pleaded for abolition of sectional lines, says, "If anything were needed to bind the north and south more closely, such weddings as this would do it."

The marriage of the bride's parents also represented a union of north and south, for Mr. Hull comes of Puritan stock, while Mrs. Hull is the daughter of a Kentucky jurist, Judge Russell Houston, a relative of the famous Texan, Sam Houston. Mrs. Hull is also connected with another famous southern family, that of the late President James K. Polk of Tennessee, and her great-uncle was the late Governor Houston of Alabama, who appointed the father of Richmond P. Hobson, the late Judge James M. Hobson, to the bench. The fair conqueror of Captain Hobson is slender in figure and vivacious and charming in manner. In view of his previous osculatory career Mr. Hobson will be prevented from making the usual affirmative reply should his bride ask, "Darling, am I really the only girl you ever kissed?"

Told by the Thespians

ELEANOR ROBSON.

"WHEN I was in London last summer," said Miss Eleanor Robson, who is playing in "She Stoops to Conquer," "I read an advertisement in a paper that was the acme of bathos. As near as I can recollect it the wording was like this:

"'If this should meet the eye of Emma D——, who absented herself last Wednesday from her father's house, she is implored to return, when she will be received with undiminished affection by her almost heartbroken parents. If nothing can persuade her to listen to their joint appeal—should she be determined to bring their gray hairs with sorrow to the grave; should she never mean to revisit a home where she passed so many happy years—it is at least expected, if she be not totally lost to all sense of propriety, that she will without a moment's delay send back the key of the tea caddy.'"

Victor Herbert, the composer of "It Happened In Nordland" and "Babes In Toyland," has been frequently annoyed of late by an amateur musician who has called upon him at his home in West End avenue, New York, and asked his opinion of various compositions which the amateur had written. The other morning he submitted a sonata and said, "You will notice, Mr. Herbert, that this is extremely difficult."

VICTOR HERBERT.

"Not at all, my friend," responded Mr. Herbert cordially. "It is more than difficult—it is impossible."

Marshall P. Wilder, the most successful story teller in vaudeville, recently met a theatrical friend whom he had not seen for some time, and in the enthusiasm of the moment invited him to an impromptu luncheon at his home.

The friend was fond of wine, as Mr. Wilder well knew, and he was somewhat dismayed, after he reached home, by his wife's whispered announcement that there was just one bottle of port in the house, a quantity Wilder well knew would be quite inadequate under the circumstances.

"Never mind; we'll make it do," he replied consolingly, and promptly forgot all about it.

Luncheon was served soon after and the bottle of port emptied, with what seemed to Mrs. Wilder alarming speed. When it was finished the little humorist, much to her amazement, began to insist that the guest should have more. But his offer was very promptly and, he thought, coldly declined.

MARSHALL P. WILDER.

After the guest had left, Mrs. Wilder said: "Marshall, how could you urge that man so? I told you we were out of port, and you kept on doing it even after I had kicked you under the table."

Mr. Wilder looked dazed.

"But you didn't kick me," he said.

There is probably no prima donna in the world who enjoys better health than Mme. Nordica. She is always well and always in good spirits. All of which is doubtless due to the fact that she has a secret recipe for health. Here it is:

Indulge in temperance, exercise and good humor.

Repeat the dose as often as possible without fail.

Miss Isabel Irving, who is playing Constance Neville in "She Stoops to Conquer," had a novel experience in a small town recently.

"We were attracted by several volumes of fiction in the window to enter a nondescript book store in hope of finding something to read," said Miss Irving. "Selecting a volume of unknown authorship, but with an attractive title, I inquired the price of the dealer.

ISABEL IRVING.

"'All or part?' he asked in a matter of fact tone. Noting my surprise at the question, he explained: 'Well, miss, I bought these books on speculation six years ago, and, as nobody around here wanted to buy a whole book at once, I've been closing them out in installments—ten pages for a nickel. As my customers seem to exchange pages, each of them finally gets a whole book for a nickel. These leftovers are the thickest ones in the lot, but you can have your choice for 25 cents. That's bottom, and it's wholesale.' I bought one," concluded Miss Irving, "as a souvenir."

Flowers With Vegetables.

You can't eat your cake and have it too. If you cut flowers all over your grounds, particularly near the house, the place will not look its best. Moreover, we none of us have enough cut flowers for house decorations and to give away. If you plan to raise a great many flowers for cutting in beds and borders you are simply inviting back ache and hours of unnecessary work. The cheaper, easy and sensible way is to have a separate place for raising flowers that you want for cutting. Select a place that is out of the way, so that the removal of the flowers will not spoil the garden or landscape effect. The vegetable garden is just the place, because you can have long, straight rows and cultivate them easily by horse or wheel hoe. You can trust an ignorant laborer to hoe anything that is in straight lines, but he is the ruin of an informal border.—Garden Magazine.

The Waltz In 1781.

I was engaged in looking at these fine people when a gentleman and lady came whirling by and had almost overwhelmed me. I could not imagine what they were about. I had scarcely extricated myself from the danger with which they threatened me when another and another couple came twisting by in like manner. I found on inquiry that this was a favorite German dance called a waltz and is performed in the following manner: The lady and gentleman stand face to face. The gentleman puts his arm around the lady's waist and with the other hand he gets firm hold on her arm. You would at first think they were going to wrestle. Thus prepared and the gentleman having got so good a purchase upon the lady, they begin to spin around and around with a velocity which would have made me giddy in half a minute.—"Twining Papers."

Lacquer For Brass.

Make lacquer for brass as follows: Tumeric root, ground fine, one ounce; best dragon's blood, one-half dram, put into one pint of alcohol. Place it in a moderate heat and shake at intervals for several days. It must then be strained through a linen cloth and put back in the bottle. Now add three ounces of powdered gum shellac; then keep as before in a warm place for a few days more and shake frequently. When thoroughly dissolved strain it again and keep in a bottle tightly corked. The metal must be perfectly clean and free from dust or grease and must be heated. The article may either dipped in the lacquer or coated with a brush, taking care not to go over the same place twice nor to leave any spots uncovered. The lacquer will dry in a few seconds.

A Good Suggestion.

Mr. C. B. Wainwright of Lemon City, Fla., has written the manufacturers that much better results are obtained from the use of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in cases of pains in the stomach, colic and cholera morbus by taking it in water as hot as can be drank. That when taken in this way the effect is double in rapidity. "It seems to get at the right spot instantly," he says. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Climbing Parnassus.

In mythology Parnassus, a mountain in central Greece, was sacred to the muses. The Delphian sanctuary of Apollo was on its slope and from between its twin summit peaks flowed the fountain Castalia, the waters of which were reputed to impart the virtue of poetic inspiration. The highest peak, 8,068 feet, was held sacred to Bacchus and the rest to Apollo and the muses—whence the saying of young poets "climbing Parnassus."

Subtle Scheme.

"Do you like Wagner's music?" asked the caller.

"No," said the young woman at the piano. "I hate it."

"Why do you play it, then?"

"Because this instrument is dreadfully out of tune, and if I played any other kind of music you'd notice it."—Chicago Tribune.

F. D. routes and small villages where it has no agents costs only $3 per year, or $1.50 for six months.

Laying of Corner-stone of Carnegie Public Library Building Participated In By Prominent Citizens and Witnessed By Large Assemblage and 2,000 School Children—An Event of Supreme Interest to Fulton.

THE laying of the corner-stone of the Carnegie Free Public Library in this city last Thursday was an event of supreme interest. The weather was all that could be desired. The picturesque residences in the vicinity; the sun glinting the foliage and the historic Oswego River reflecting its genial rays; the dense throng of spectators and the school children en masse, made the scene most impressive. The event was made possible through the generosity of that distinguished citizen of the Republic, Andrew Carnegie, whose philanthropy is world-wide and whose name will ever be held in grateful remembrance by English-speaking nations. It was made possible, too, by the liberality of the public-spirited citizens of Fulton and the indomitable energy and perseverance of the present library officials.

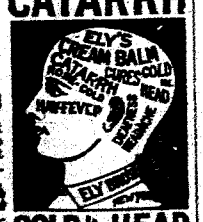
Contractor Wadsworth hurried matters along, and the first floor, which had been partly boarded over, served as an excellent platform for guests.

President E. R. Redhead Addressing the Assemblage.

E. R. Redhead, Esq., president of the library association, presided. There were present on the platform, Prof. Wickes, principal of the Syracuse High School; trustees of the library, faculty of the High School, city officials, and the members of the Common Council.

Mr. Redhead called the assemblage to order, reverently thanking a kind Providence for the delightful weather vouchsafed; regretted that it was impossible to furnish seats for all present, implored the boys and girls to keep as quiet as possible, assuring them that the exercises would be brief and not in the least wearisome. Then all present were invited to join with the quartet in singing "The Coronation."



The Rev. John Richards, of the First M. E. church, read the scriptures and prayed.

In introducing the talented speaker, Professor W. K. Wickes, principal of the Syracuse High School, Mr. Redhead stated that it often happened that an assemblage of this kind was compelled to take a speaker on trust or reputation. In the case of Prof. Wickes, no chances had been taken, for his ability had been demonstrated beyond peradventure at the recent annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce in this city, when the members were delighted with his address. He regarded therefore, as a special favor that Prof. Wickes would [illegible]

Reckless Philanthropy.

An instance of what I should call reckless philanthropy has come to my notice. The story is told of a certain old and very wealthy lady who has never been known to give anything to anybody, but whose will must enrich many institutions—unless the estate is swallowed up by the lawyers. After spending half a lifetime selecting first one and then another charity for her post mortem benevolence she recently had qualms of conscience. She heard mysterious voices say, "Feed my lambs."

At first she took no notice. They became insistent. "At last," she says, describing the experience, "I took the money in my hand and set out to give subscription to ——'s home. On the way I had doubts. 'No,' I said, 'I had better leave them a legacy.' But again I heard the voice. 'Feed my lambs.' Well, my dear, I trembled with agitation. I said, 'I will.' I felt I must do it and I did. I rushed straight to the office and I gave them 5 shillings."—London Tatler.

Old Tudor Ghosts.

At Hampton court palace, near London, are, according to report, several ghosts, all of which belong to the Tudor period. "First is Jane Seymour," writes a writer, "who, clad in white garments and carrying a lighted candle, attends the queen's staircase on the anniversary of the birth of her son, Edward VI. The ghost was laid by the opening up of the staircase. Mrs. Penn, the nurse and foster mother of Edward VI., is the most persistent ghost. Since her grave was disturbed at Hampton church her gaunt figure in long gray robe has walked the vicinity of her old rooms, and the whirring of her spinning wheel has been heard by several people. The board of works instituted an inquiry and discovered a filled up room with an old spinning wheel, the treadle of which appeared to have worn the oaken flooring. The third Tudor ghost is Catherine Howard, who is reputed to haunt a gallery not to be opened to the public."

Strictly Genuine.

Most of the patent medicine testimonials are probably genuine. The following notice recently appeared in the Atchison (Kan.) Globe: "Joe Cook, a well-known engineer, running on the Missouri Pacific between Wichita and Kiowa, lately appeared with a big one, with a picture, and when he was in this office today, we asked him about it. He said he had terrific pains in his stomach and thought he had cancer. His druggist recommended Kodol and he says it cured him. He recommended it to others, who were also cured. Legend of the Ostrich.

Among the Arabs there is a curious legend to account for the ostrich's residence in the desert. "On a certain day it appointed," so the story runs, "all creatures beings met together to decide upon their respective order and precedence. All went smoothly until the ostrich, pleading its inability to fly, disclaimed the birds and claimed to take rank with the mammals. These, however, would have nothing to say to a creature clothed not with fur, but with feathers, while the birds, when the ostrich went dejectedly back, repudiated him also as a traitor to its race. But the ostrich was equal to the occasion and declared that, being neither mammal nor bird, it must be an angel. At this the other animals indignantly rushed upon the ostrich and drove it before them into the desert, where it has lived in solitude ever since, with no one to contradict it."

How Mexicans Test Eggs.

It is a common sight in the plaza to behold a stall woman, who is selling two reals' worth of eggs, pick them up one by one, put one end and then the other to her lips and hand them over to the customer, who repeats the same identical operation. To the inexperienced onlooker it seems as if they were tasting the extremities of the egg. As a matter of fact, they never touch the egg with the tongue. The idea of the performance is that when an egg is fresh one end is distinctly colder than the other. The end which has the air chamber is the warmer of the two. The human lips are exceedingly sensitive to heat and cold, and even the novice at this form of egg testing promptly becomes a capable judge. If both ends of the egg reveal the same temperature, that egg may be counted as bad, as it is a fairly good sign that the air chamber is broken and the contents spread equally within the shell.—Mexican Herald.

A Kissing Festival.

In the old town of Helmagen, in Roumania, an annual fair is held on St. Theodore's day. On this occasion all the newly wedded brides from the surrounding villages throng the town, but the widows who have remarried remain at home.

The young women are generally attended by their mothers-in-law, and in their hands they bear pitchers of wine wreathed with flowers. They salute every one they meet and then present their jugs for a sip to be taken. The person so favored makes the bride a small gift. As it is considered an insult if the proffered wine be refused, the brides are careful to be reserved toward strangers and only kiss those whom they think likely to partake of their wine.

This kissing festival is celebrated in the public streets, in private houses, in the taverns and, in fact, everywhere, but the origin of it is lost in obscurity.

Fruit and Intemperance.

There is but one sure cure for the drinking disease or habit, and that is the simplest of all. The cure consists in eating fruits. That will cure the worst case of inebriety that ever afflicted a person. It will entirely destroy the taste for intoxicants and will make the drunkard return to the thoughts and tastes of his childhood, when he loved the luxuries nature had provided for him and when his appetite had not become contaminated by false, cultivated tastes and attendant false desires and imaginary pleasures. No person ever saw a man or woman who liked fruit and who had an appetite for drink. No person ever saw a man or woman with an appetite for drink who liked fruit. The two tastes are at deadly enmity with each other, and there is no room for both of them in the same human constitution. One will surely destroy the other.—What to Eat.

A Remarkable Grotto.

Fingal's cave is one of the most remarkable natural grottoes in Europe. It is situated on the island of Staffa, about seven miles off the west coast of Mull, Scotland. The cavern is 227 feet deep, 42 feet wide at the entrance and 62 feet high at the opening at time of low tide. Tide has a great deal to do with the size and dimensions of Fingal's cave, because it is eminently a sea grotto.

The ocean's waters are always the floor of the cavern. At time of very lowest tide there is twenty feet of water in the cave. It can be readily entered by means of small boats at all times except at the hour of extreme high tide. In Europe Fingal's cave is considered the greatest British wonder.

About Temperance.

The best authorities on the science of meteorology tell us that without the various changes in the temperature there would be a perfect calm at all times in all parts of the globe. A uniform and unvarying barometric pressure would everywhere prevail and there would be no changes of seasons, no evaporation or condensation, no clouds, no rain. In short, without changes of temperature the atmosphere would soon become poisonous, stagnant and incapable of sustaining human life.

The Diving Bell.

The oldest intelligence respecting the use of the diving bell in Europe is the relation of an exhibit at Toledo before the Emperor Charles V. in the middle of the sixteenth century, when two Greeks, in the presence of several thousand persons, let themselves down in the water in a large inverted kettle with a burning light and came up again without getting wet.

Identification.

"What kind of a looking man is that chap, Gabbleton, you just mentioned? I don't believe I have met him."

"Well, if you see two men off in a corner anywhere and one of them looks bored to death, the other one is Gabbleton."—Puck.

Character.

Each man in his sphere, however narrow or extended, will find that his fellow men weigh his character and his abilities often and unconsciously stamp him with their estimate and that the average resultant of these frequent averages is just.—E. Pierrepont.

The Tired Idle.

To those who are employed and busy time flies with great rapidity. Life is tedious only to the idle. Nothing is more monotonous than the ticking of a clock to him who has nothing to do but listen to it.—Anon.

It is a maxim with me that no man was ever written out of a reputation but by himself.—Bentley.

THIS is the day of the natural waisted woman. The W. B. Erect Form has changed the American figure. It has supplanted discomfort with ease—it has banished the impossible and exaggerated figure produced by the old corset idea. It removes the strain of lacing from the sensitive parts of the body and throws all pressure upon the hips and the strong back muscles, supporting the stomach within the corset and not forcing it below the garment. The Erect Form is made in more models than ever before. There are forty distinct styles of this popular make, each meant for a distinct type of woman. Dealers in all sized towns and cities the land over, sell the Erect Form. Prices range upward from $1.

JAP VICTORY COMPLETE

Twenty-Two Russ. Ships Surrendered or We e Sunk.

CRUISER DONSKOI RUN AGROUND

Japanese Casualties In First Division a Little Over 400—Rojestvensky's Flagship Sunk and the Commander and Another Admiral, Both Wounded, Captured From Torpedo Boat.

Washington, May 31.—The Japanese legation gave out the following cablegram from Tokio:

Fifth report from Togo received afternoon of May 30:

The main force of our combined fleet upon accepting surrender of the remaining Russian main force near Liancourt Rocks on the afternoon of May 28, as already reported, stopped pursuit and while engaged in the disposition of surrendered ships found in a southwestern direction the Admiral Ushakoff, a coast defense ship.

Thereupon Iwate and Yakumo were immediately dispatched in pursuit and invited her to surrender, but she refused and was sunk at 6 p. m. Her crew of over 300 men were rescued.

Cruiser Dmitri Donskoi was also found in the northwestern direction at 4 p. m. and was immediately overtaken and fired vigorously by our fourth division and second destroyer flotilla.

She was attacked that night by the second destroyer flotilla and the next morning was found aground on the southeastern shore of Ureleung Island off Korean coast.

Rejestvensky Captured and Wounded.

Our destroyer Sazanami captured the evening of May 27 in the south of Ureleung Island the Russian destroyer Biedovy, wherein were found Admiral Rojestvensky and another admiral, both severely wounded, together with 80 Russians, including staff officers from the flagship Prince Suvaroff (Kniaz Souvaroff), which was sunk at 5:29 p. m. on May 27. They were all taken prisoners.

Our cruiser Chitose while cruising to the northward on the morning of May 28 found and sunk another Russian destroyer.

Our cruiser Niyitaka and destroyer Murakumo attacked also at noon on May 28 a Russian destroyer which finally went aground.

According to various reports hitherto received and statements of prisoners, the result of the battle from May 27 to May 29 is as follows:

Prince Suvaroff, Alexandre III., Borodino, Dmitri Donskoi, Admiral Nachmoff, Monomach, Jemtchung, Admiral Ousakoff, one converted cruiser and two destroyers sunk.

Nicholas I, Orel, Admiral Apraxin, Admiral Senkavin and destroyer Biedovy captured.

According to the prisoners the Osliabia sunk about 3 p. m. and the Navarin also was sunk.

Almaz on May 27 was observed in a disabled and sinking condition, but her final fate is yet unknown. The full particulars regarding the injury to our ships are not yet in hand, but so far as I could ascertain none was seriously injured, all being still engaged in operations.

Japanese Casualties 400 Men.

The whole casualties are not yet ascertained. Casualties of first division are little over 400. Prince Yorhito in excellent health, Admiral Misu slightly wounded May 27.

Sixth report received the afternoon of May 30:

Loss of Osliabia and Navarin confirmed. Sissoi Veliki also definitely reported to have sunk on the morning of May 28th.

Official statement of Russian losses so far as ascertained:

Following six battleships sunk: Prince Suvaroff, Imperator Alexander III, Borodino, Osliabia, Sissoi Veliki and Navarin.

Following five cruisers sunk: Admiral Nakhimoff, Dmitri Donskoi, Vladimir, Monomach, Svietlana and Jemtchug.

Coast defense ship Admiral Ousakoff sunk.

Two special service ships, Kamtchatka and three destroyers also sunk.

Two battleships, Orel and Imperator Nicholas I; two coast defense ships, General Admiral Apraxin and Admiral Senyanvin, and one destroyer, Biedovy, captured.

Thus Russians lost altogether 22 ships, the aggregate tonnage whereof amounting to 153,411 tons, beside cruiser Almaz suspected to have sunk.

RUSSIAN STORY OF BATTLE.

Two Ships Only of Rojestvensky's Fleet Reach Vladivostok.

Vladivostok, May 31. — Two ships alone of Vice Admiral Rojestvensky's powerful flotilla, the swift cruiser Almaz and the torpedo boat destroyer Grozny, lie at anchor here in the curving harbor of Golden Horn, they having separated from the fleet in the early stage of the battle which began in the Corea strait Saturday, and headed, in obedience to orders, with full speed to Vladivostok.

No other vessels of the Baltic fleet have yet arrived and the signal stations at Askold and Rimskykorsakoff islands reported none in sight.

Officers of the Almaz and Grozny say that both fleets had already sustained terrible losses when the Almaz and Grozny broke through the hostile [illegible] Japanese two battleships had [illegible] their eyes and two cruisers, their sterns high out of the water, seemed ready to plunge foremost to the bottom of the sea.

The Russian fleet, they say, was even in a sadder plight. Rojestvensky's flagship, the Kniaz Souvaroff, and her sister ship, the Borodino, and the cruisers Oslabia and Ural were utterly destroyed and when the fog closed down and hid the scene of battle from sight northward of the speeding ships, a third great Russian battleship, the Alexander III, seemed in sore distress, but limping northward, putting up a valiant fight against throngs of torpedo boats and still continuing her attacks on the cruisers of the island empire.

Torpedo boats were also clinging round the other ships of the fleet like angered wasps, separate flotillas darting in again and again to launch their weapons.

The Almaz, which arrived at her anchorage here Monday evening, bears scars of the battle. Her mizzen mast is shot away and one of her smokestacks is pierced by a cannon shot, but the Grozny, though engaged for several hours in a running fight at short range with a large Japanese destroyer, shows no signs of the fray.

Sunk Japanese Destroyer.

After her commander, Captain Andriffski, had been wounded and an officer and three men had been killed the Grozny succeeded in sinking her opponent with a luckily placed shot and reached Vladivostok without further adventure at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning.

For the past two days Vladivostok had been buzzing with rumors and excitement. The fact that a battle between the rival fleets was imminent, if Rojestvensky was not already at handgrips with Togo, was made known through telegrams from Europe, and when it was learned Monday morning that a Russian cruiser had been sighted off Askold island headed for the harbor the city was filled with the wildest reports of every nature.

The inhabitants clustered in the streets, thronged the waterside or climbed the frowning hills overlooking the harbor for a better view. Finally, towards 6 o'clock in the evening, a graceful cruiser with two snowy white stacks shot in view at the entrance to the Golden Horn and rounded to an anchorage beneath the bristling guns of the curving promontory.

From afar the broken stump of her mizzen mast and a shot hole showing black upon white paint of one stack indicated that the cruiser had encountered the Japanese.

As the anchor chains rattled in the hawse-holes the vessel wreathed itself in smoke—it was an admiral's salute in honor of Rear Admiral Von Jessen. Scarcely had the boom of the last cannon begun to echo from the surrounding hills when Von Jessen's flagship, the cruiser Rossia, answered the salute and a minute later the guns of the fortress took up the cannonade.

Excitement beyond description seized the thronging spectators who with frantic "huzzas" tossed their caps. Citizens embraced each other and danced jubilantly upon the pier, while the crews of the ships in the harbor joined in wild cheering.

In a trice the boats were dropped from the davits and in a moment the officers of the cruisers and torpedo boats in the harbor and the military officials from the fortress were swarming on board the Almaz to learn news of the fight.

Destruction of Flagship.

The story was short. According to the officers of the Almaz, the fleet under Rojestvensky met the Japanese in the strait of Corea near Tsu island and the opposing fleets immediately closed in. Being lightly armored, the Almaz, as had been ordered by Admiral Rojestvensky before the battle, separated itself from the main fleet at the first opportunity and headed for Vladivostok soon after the commencement of the action, but not too soon to observe that the losses on both sides in the titanic combat were great.

Early in the battle an officer of the Almaz while watching Rojestvensky's flagship, the battleship Kniaz Souvaroff, for a signal, saw the flagship shudder from stem to stern, as if under a blow from a gigantic hammer and hesitate in her course, while the waves rose high from her armored sides. Then she commenced to list and sink.

The officers believe that the debut of the submarine boat as an effective agent in naval warfare, or perhaps a large mine, caused the disaster to the Kniaz Souvaroff. The damage, however, was so extensive that the flagship soon went down, leaving the deck officers and many of the crew struggling in the waves.

One of the Russian torpedo boats, either the destroyer Buiny or the Bravi, ran in and picked up a number of the swimmers, one of whom was recognized through a glass as Admiral Rojestvensky.

Under a gruelling attack of the Japanese warships, aided by torpedo boats, mines and submarines, the Borodino, Osliabia and Ural were placed out of action and followed the flagship to the bottom.

The fog which had raised and lowered intermittently during the morning now began to settle down again and the distance of the Almaz, which had now succeeded in disengaging herself in the combat from the struggling ships, made it difficult for her to see clearly, but the officers are positive that they saw two Japanese battleships disappear beneath the sea before their eyes and that two Japanese cruisers appeared on the point of sinking.

The correspondent visited the wounded commander of the destroyer, Captain Andriffski, at the hospital and the captain confirmed the details given by the officers of the Almaz. He described his combat as a running fight in which the Grozny was engaged for several hours, finally sinking the pursuing Japanese destroyer.

Peace Rests With Russia.

Washington, May 31.—"Until some word of peace comes out of Tsarskoe-Selo, Nippon has but to fight on."

This epigrammatic remark of Mr. Takahira, the Japanese minister, made with the details of the victory of the Japanese fleet before him, sets forth also the opinion of the Washington and other neutral governments represented here regarding the effect of the battle upon Russia's policy.

Whether Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, will be the bearer of that fateful word when he sees the president today or Thursday remains to be seen, but the ambassador last night was more emphatic then ever in declaring that the war would go on indefinitely. While admitting that he would see the president in the next few days and have a long conference on the general situation, the ambassador strongly discouraged any hopes of an early peace.

Soon after the president returned from New York last night, Secretary Taft called at the White House and conferred with him for several hours. While the secretary was there dispatches arrived from the Japanese legation, giving details of the battle, which the president read with keen interest. The president and secretary discussed several matters but the outlook for peace occupied much of their time.

It is realized that the crushing character of the Russian defeat gives to the president an opportunity with entire propriety to offer his services to the St. Petsrsburg government in establishing communication with Tokio, but until it can be learned that such an offer would probably be successful this government is not inclined to act.

Throughout the diplomatic corps the keenest interest was displayed in the news of the conference which Mr. Takahira, the Japanese minister, had with the president at the White House last night.

"That marks a step in the direction of peace," said a prominent diplomat, "and it is to be hoped that Russia will recognize, as does the rest of Europe the disinterested earnestness with which the president wishes for an ending of the war. Whatever the popular feeling in this country, I think the Russian government will readily admit that the attitude of President Roosevelt, personally and officially, has been all that Russia or Japan could ask. If Russia had taken the advice of the president after the battle of Liao Yang she would now be at peace with the world, with the greater portion of her navy intact."

Laying of Corner-stone of Carnegie Public Library Building Participated In By Prominent Citizens and Witnessed By Large Assemblage and 2,000 School Children—An Event of Supreme Interest to Fulton

THE laying of the corner-stone of the Carnegie Free Public Library in this city last Thursday was an event of supreme interest. The weather was all that could be desired. The picturesque residences in the vicinity; the sun glinting the foliage and the historic Oswego River reflecting its genial rays; the dense throng of spectators and the school children en masse, made the scene most impressive. The event was made possible through the generosity of that distinguished citizen of the Republic, Andrew Carnegie, whose philanthropy is world-wide and whose name will ever be held in grateful remembrance by English-speaking nations. It was made possible, too, by the liberality of the public-spirited citizens of Fulton and the indomitable energy and perseverance of the present library officials.

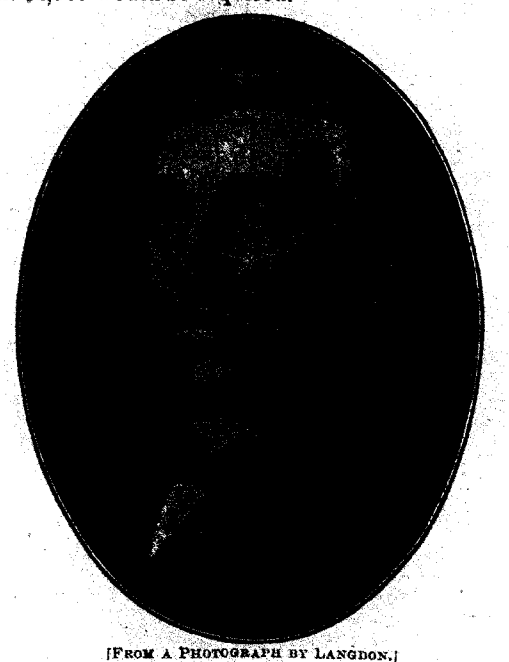
Contractor Wadsworth hurried matters along, and the first floor, which had been partly boarded over, served as an excellent platform for guests.

President E. R. Redhead Addressing the Assemblage.



E. R. Redhead, Esq., president of the library association, presided. There were present on the platform, Prof. Wickes, principal of the Syracuse High School; trustees of the library, faculty of the High School, city officials, and the members of the Common Council.

Mr. Redhead called the assemblage to order, reverently thanking a kind Providence for the delightful weather vouchsafed; regretted that it was impossible to furnish seats for all present, implored the boys and girls to keep as quiet as possible, assuring them that the exercises would be brief and not in the least wearisome. Then all present were invited to join with the quartet in singing "The Coronation."

The Rev. John Richards, of the First M. E. church, read the scriptures and prayed.

In introducing the talented speaker, Professor W. K. Wickes, principal of the Syracuse High School, Mr. Redhead stated that it often happened that an assemblage of this kind was compelled to take a speaker on trust or reputation. In the case of Prof. Wickes, no chances had been taken, for his ability had been demonstrated beyond peradventure at the recent annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce in this city, when the members were delighted with his address. He regarded it, therefore, as a special favor that Prof. Wickes should lay aside his multitudinous duties and be present on this occasion.

At the conclusion of the program Mr. Redhead announced that it was the present intention of the Library Association to dedicate the building in September and that it would be ready for occupancy by about Oct. 1. Contributions toward furnishing the building would be gratefully received; it was estimated that about $1,500 would be required.

PRESIDENT REDHEAD'S HISTORICAL SKETCH.

We reach to-day in the ceremonies of this hour another era in the history of our public library.

I recall with great distinctness, as though it were but yesterday, the beginning of the discussion or agitation of the question of a public library for Fulton. That was over ten years ago. We owe to our lamented fellow-citizen, Marlon H. Brando, more than to any other one, the direct incentive for action toward the establishment of a public library. His work as a traveling salesman for a large importing tea house, took him frequently over parts of New England, particularly the State of Massachusetts. He saw there in every city and in every town or village of any size, with scarcely an exception, the public library. His keen intelligence saw the benefits of such an institution. Every recurring trip increased his enthusiasm, and no sooner would he return to his home for a few days of rest between his trips, than he began to talk about what he had seen and heard. It was his one thought and ambition to open a public library here. No wonder, then, that with such an enthusiastic, single-purposed man to lead, that the project soon took root and began to show signs of life.

On Nov. 21, 1895, the charter of the Fulton Public Library was given by the Regents of the University at Albany, DeWitt C. Gardner, Marlon H. Brando, Byron G. Clapp, Arvin Rice and the writer being named as trustees. Those now living have been continued as trustees to the present time and in place of our honored associates now dead, Albert J. Snow was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of DeWitt C. Gardner and Thomas Hunter in place of Marlon H. Brando.

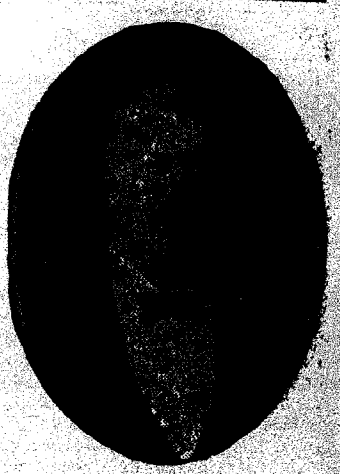
In the light of developments since the library was opened, it seems strange that we waited nearly three years after the granting of the charter before we availed ourselves of its privileges. How slow we often are to use the opportunities which are either already ours or within our reach, to better our conditions. We thought then that we had good reasons for waiting, but we see now that we lacked faith and courage. The people were more ready to respond to our appeals than we supposed. So that when we asked for subscriptions to open the library the people gave generously, and on the evening of Nov. 16, 1898, the formal opening ceremonies were heard and witnessed by a crowd that packed nearly to suffocation the present library rooms, and many more were unable to gain admittance. On the following day the Fulton Public Library began active work in charge of our popular and efficient librarian, Mrs. Helen B. Emens. From that day to this, the patrons of the library have been walking in the "straight and narrow way" that leads to the second story of the Phillips block.

We began with about 2,100 volumes, the most of which came from the High School Library and from the libraries of old Falley Seminary. We have added to these during the now nearly seven years of library work, 2,600 volumes, making a total of 4,700 volumes now on the shelves of our public library. These, with the reading room equipment of daily and weekly papers and magazines, have been a source of pleasure and information to a large and increasing number of our citizens, old and young, many of whom would have few advantages of this kind, were it not for the public library.

The rooms now occupied by the library, desirable and convenient as they are in many respects, were regarded as temporary quarters. The thought of a permanent home in the shape of a library building suitable in location, size and convenience, has long been in the minds of the trustees. The question how shall we get it? has often been considered. When Andrew Carnegie's benefactions for the erection of public libraries became marked several years ago, we thought that there was no good reason why we in Fulton should not share in the benefits of his noble generosity. Accordingly, Mr. Brando wrote a long letter to Mr. Carnegie, descriptive of Fulton and its needs. Whether this letter was so lengthy that Mr. Carnegie or his secretary never found time to thoroughly study its contents, or whether the needs of others places were in his opinion greater than ours, we never learned, for no answer came to the letter. However, we were not discouraged, and believing that if we seek we shall find, if we ask we shall receive, Mr. Brando, the speaker, and several others sent to Mr. Carnegie at frequent intervals brief reminders of what we would like to have him do for us in Fulton. It looked as though all our communications, eloquent and convincing as they seemed to us, were consigned to the waste basket. But when Mr. Gilbert L. Wells was president of the village of Fulton, he wrote during his second year of office to Mr. Carnegie for a gift of a public library. Either because the seed already sown so bountifully was now ready to spring up, or because he was more persuasive in his appeals, within a few days, in May, 1902, he received the following reply:

Responding to your communications: If the City of Fulton pledges itself by resolution of Council to support a free public library at a cost of not less than $1,500 a year and furnishes a suitable site, Mr. Carnegie will be glad to furnish $15,000 for the erection of a free public library building.

JAMES BERTRAM
Private Secretary
From Andrew Carnegie.



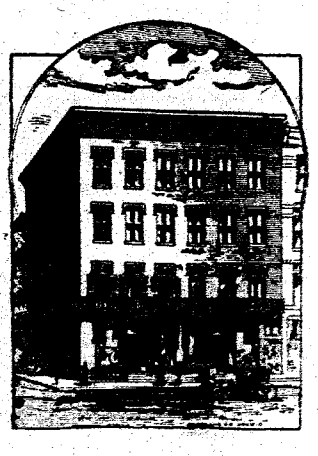
The letter brought, of course, great joy to all the friends of the library, but coming as it did just as the change from village to city government was taking place, it was deemed wise to hold in abeyance the library project until the new order was thoroughly established and the city machinery in fair working condition. Early last year the final move was made. The Common Council of 1903 having voted the annual appropriation of $1,500 for the support of the library, it remained to raise the money for the site and for the furnishings of the new library. The most of you recall the discussion which arose as to the location. After a free and a full discussion of the question for several months, a public meeting, to which all interested were invited and given ample opportunity to express their views, was held, and upon a vote being taken, it was unanimously carried to accept the site on which the library is now being built. Do you ask whether this was a wise choice? I answer unhesitatingly, yes. In the first place, no other site could have been chosen and paid for. It practically meant therefore this location or no library building at present. Whether or no Mr. Carnegie or any one else would offer us in the future a public library building, I leave to those who delight in the doctrine of chances. I prefer a good certainty to a rainbow-hued uncertainty. In the second place, there will be advantages in this location which no other site could furnish with the same expenditure of money. Where else could we have an assembly room and an historical room in connection with the library for $15,000, with an ornate style of architecture? I leave the further discussion of this topic, if it shall be necessary, to the day of dedication next September, when with a completed structure, beautiful in design, and convenient in its arrangement and appointments, we can all of us better judge than now whether the selection of the site was not under the circumstances the wisest that could be made.

Overlooking this noble river which has contributed so much to the pleasure and to the prosperity of our people, there shall arise I confidently believe, an edifice, whose corner-stone we lay today with these simple but impressive ceremonies, which will be a delight to the eye, a rest to the body, a stimulus to the mind, an inspiration to the soul.

PROF. WICKES' ADDRESS — FULTON UNIVERSITY.

Prof. Wickes' address, which follows, was an exceedingly able effort, punctuated throughout with many incidents both humorous and instructive:

In the commingling glory of earth and sky today, the old song haunts one with its melody, "Sumer is a-cumen in." So, too, the sunlight of a brighter intellectual day dawns on this fair community. For here and now you lay the corner stone of a building erected to house a "collection of books," which, says Carlyle, the great Scotch writer, "is the true University of these days." And what a glorious monument! Let Columbus, discover of a New World, have his stately memorial—and Grant, the mighty soldier, sleep in peace in his splendid tomb—and Farragut, eagle of the sea, make immortal the name of the American sailor—and the sainted Lincoln stand in sculptured grandeur, liberator of a race. No one of these can overmatch in age-long power for good, the clear-brained, great headed Scotchman, Carnegie, founder of libraries; friend of mankind. For while discoverer, soldier, sailor, liberator, contributed to material grandeur—or political power or personal freedom—the philanthropist appeals to and evokes the noblest powers of the immortal mind and spirit of man.



PROF. W. K. WICKS
Principal of Syracuse High School

In the riches of the mind, stored up in this building, each and every one of you may have a share. Pay into it such brain as you are blest withal, and you shall find your capital increasing at compound interest. True, it will make a great difference in your profits as to the kind of books into which you put your brain-capital. You may be the "book-worm," incessantly devouring in indiscriminate fashion any and every book, on the principal that "a book's a book although there's nothing in't." Or you may, with the wisdom of a Bacon, find out what books should be tasted, or chewed or digested. Happy will you be, and rich will you become, if you find in books "a substantial world both true and good!" Thrice happy if you find and favor those books so dowered with a lasting genius that they hold "children from their play and old men from the chimney corner."

For let it be noted that the aged, sinking back into "the rocking chair of old age," will seek this spot to find comfort in reading, or in listening to the voice of youth beguiling away the weary hours of the dear old folks at home. Hither the middle-aged will come to find material for clubs and societies and to keep abreast of the ever-accelerating progress of the mind's activities. And here many a man and woman, outside of school doors, will get such education as newspapers, magazines, philosophy—and poetry, in the case of the sanest, sweetest spirits—can bestow. Hither many a boy and girl will come to devour more novels than they can digest—to travel with "poor old Robinson Crusoe," and penetrate with Henty every nook and corner of the world; to glow with wicked exultation over the adventures of Jack Sheppard, or thrill with spasmodic sympathy over the telling story of John Bunyon—dear old tinker of Bedford jail!

A blessing, then, on Fulton University! Man or woman of leisure or of labor, here in silence and shelter, in "the still air of delightful stories;" boy and girl in shop, or mart, or school—here is a spot where work and play may both be forgot, or happily blended in such recreation of mind, such quickening of the imagination as will bless your better natures and your nobler powers. And should any carper or pessimist decry a purpose so grand and a philanthropy so generous, it will surely come to pass as in ancient time, that against it "the stone shall cry out of the wall, and the beam out of the timber shall answer it."

In introducing Mrs. Emens, the librarian, who was to lay the corner-stone, Mr. Redhead stated that he knew of no person who could more appropriately take part in the exercises. He paid a glowing tribute to her wonderful tact and judgment as a librarian, which were thoroughly appreciated by all patrons of the library.

MRS. EMENS' ADDRESS.

In behalf of the City of Fulton and in the interest of the great cause of education, we today lay this corner stone of the foundation of a building to be known as the Fulton Free Public Library.

May the library to be housed in this building here to be erected become a great inspirational force in our city; a permeating, enlivening and enriching force in the life of the people—helping us to more nearly realize the high ideals for which libraries and all other educational institutions are maintained—a wiser government, a better home, a happier life.

We believe that this library will help to transform this community into more intellectual, more thoughtful, better equipped, more roundly developed citizens.

May it help the boys to become manly men, and the girls to become womanly women, and may it give to every one who comes within the circle of its influence a broader outlook, wider horizon, a clearer vision and the possibilities of an ampler life.

May its portal become a veritable door to a "City of Refuge, where all "Art welcomed morning and evening with the tongues of blessing, prosperity, happiness and friendship," and where "All who will may enter in and no one be denied."

Mr. President and Chairman of the Building Committee: I here declare this corner-stone properly and accurately laid. We look to you to see that the superstructure which shall rise upon it will verify in every particular the fair promise of to-day.

K. of P. Convention.

The Knights of Pythias of the thirty-fourth and fifttieth District will hold a mass convention in Syracuse, on Wednesday evening, June 7, to which all Knights from Auburn to Amsterdam, and from Oswego and Watertown to Binghamton are invited. Accommodations at Empire House, corner of North Salina and West Genesee streets, have been secured for the occasion.

A joint team from Watertown Lodge No. 222 and Cretona Lodge No. 376 of Watertown, will confer the Knight Rank in long form on several Esquires, G. C. Max, L. Holtz and other Grand Lodge officers will be present, and every member of the order is cordially invited to be in attendance.

The Call of Nature.

The very suggestion of June is full of life—full of dreams of past Summers and hopes for the Summer to come. It leads our fancies back over recollection's golden bridges, to the white winged yacht that, like the sea gull, skimmed across the lake while we almost wondered what unseen power urged it on.

The early June days, too, call into full flower the woodland blossoms that May first coaxes into bloom. It warms the heart of nature, and cheers and perfumes the stray pathways with purpling hepaticas, blushing anemones, dainty Spring beauties and coy violets—violets yellow and white and blue.

The warm June sun tempts the lone fisherman from his every day routine to try his luck as an angler and, if the bait holds out, he is quite likely to come home in the twilight, as happy as a lord; if luck is against him he will get his satisfaction from the thought that a lesson in patience oftentimes bringeth its own reward.

There is a joy in the return of June that fills us with wholesome longing for the out-of-doors, the highways and byways of nature, the pure air of the mountains. It is the open-door season when we stand upon the threshold of Summer and look yearningly toward the hills, the lakes, the woods, the ocean—wherever Nature is at home, for Nature is always hospitable.—From "Vest Pocket Confidences," in Four-Track News for June.

OUR STYLES are distinctive and elegant—yet safely conservative—showing original designs—not too far from conventional lines.

MATERIALS of just the proper quality and pliancy to yield to the deft fingers of the tailor-artisans—which gives expression to the grace and shapliness of the garment—in fact the demand of discriminating men are exacting and the ability to meet them are seldom found.

Men of fashion—gentlemen of discriminating taste — well-groomed men in general — expect more of their clothier than of their tailor.

We cater to those who wish to be "well-dressed" without Extra Cost.

A visit is worth your while—we shall be glad to see you.

HISTORICAL POINTS.

In 1835 there were three school houses within the corporate limits of the "Village" of Fulton.

There had been a school house that was built in 1817 on the corner of First and Rochester streets, where the Universalist church now stands. The land was donated by Daniel Falley. He contributed also for its erection and personally paid Margaret Falley for teaching there the first year. Mr. Levi Carrier taught school there also, but the begining of one of the greatest events in the early history of Fulton took place in this school house. I will speak of it at a subsequent time.

It was intended to accommodate all the pupils of the "Upper and Lower landing," but did not prove quite satisfactory, and as a result the school district became divided and the "Old Red school house" was built on the south side of State street, just a little east of Second, in the year 1822, and became known as District No. 1.

In 1832 the "Red School" house was built on the corner of Cayuga and Seymour (Second) streets. This building has been raised and a story built under it. It is occupied now by John Collins as a liquor store. The first teacher here was Joseph Cross, a young man from Massachusetts who was studying for the ministry. Miss Amanda Gardner, Griffin C. Lathrop, H. G. Spencer, and I think the pioneer man teacher, Mr. Benjamin Robinson, were teachers there.

This school house was opened for the benefit of the Baptists, February, 1837. They continued meeting there until 1840. They had been negotiating for the purchase of the Universalist church (which stood only a short distance south of this school house) which was owned by private individuals. Pending the negotiations they held their services there. That continued pleasantly for only a few months when their pastor said something derogatory to the Universalist persuasion. Then the agreement came to an end and the Baptists returned to the school house. They held their services there until 1842, when they went into their new lake-stone church. Be it remembered that in this school house on the 2nd day of June, 1838, the "First Baptist Society of Fulton" was incorporated under the statute law.

The "White" school house was built in the Spring of 1835 by Mr. Peter Schenck, on lot 8, block 31, facing Seymour street. It was somewhat of a private enterprise, but it was used for an "over-flow" school when the others would not hold all the pupils.

Miss Eliza Daggert taught school here two seasons and Griffin C. Lathrop a season. It ceased to be a school house when it, with the other property of Peter Schenck, fronting on First street was sold, Jan. 10, 1844, to the Fulton and Granby Presbyterian Society.

This school house also had its church history, for on the 8th day of May, 1843, "a meeting of the First Wesleyan church in Fulton, together with some friends of liberty of the Presbyterian church, was held at the White School House" and approved a "discipline published in the True Wesleyan."

In the same school house, at a later day, the following resolution was passed: "That the church formed April 22 (1843) be considered the True Wesleyan Church of Fulton." Shortly afterward they hired the Universalist church above spoken of and remained there until their own church edifice was erected.

It was the Saratoga Mutual Fire Insurance Company that was represented here next—but do not forget that the Scottish Union National Fire Insurance Company is worth millions above all liabilities, and you are expected to give me your next renewal.

Our National Prosperity.

The United States, after a twelve-months' halt in its trade activity, has again moved forward, with evidence on all sides of healthy industrial expansion. Two tests habitually applied by experts as a measure of trade conditions in this country are the exchange of bank checks at its clearing houses, showing the volume of business actually done, and the consumption of manufactured iron, showing the plans of general industry. If merchants, bankers, and manufacturers make fewer payments through their banks, it means that the sales and purchases in their industry are reduced. If orders for iron and steel diminish, it is a sign that manufacturers, builders and transportation companies forsee small business and are curtailing orders for new machinery, new structural material, and new rails or cars. Each of these signs of the times foretold with unpleasant clearness the reaction of 1903. The shrinkage in clearing-house exchanges, and the cutting in two of the country's iron production pointed unmistakably to the coming storm. But the storm passed over rapidly. This season, bank checks put through the country's clearing houses have surpassed all records in our history, rising in value 50 per cent. over 1904. Iron production has reached a magnitude twice that of December, 1903, and never approached in the history of the trade. Consumption at the rate of nearly two million tons a month, where a million tons was the highest monthly average of any year up to 1900, is witness to the state of our industries—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for June.

Central New York Society of Artists.

Through the courtesy of Professor George F. Comfort, Director of the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts, an exhibition of paintings by artists residing within the somewhat indeterminate region called Central New York will be held in the gallery of the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts during the month of December, 1905. This exhibition will be held under the auspices and control of the Central New York Society of Artists.

The officers of this society are as follows: George W. King, Richfield Springs, N. Y., president; Hiram S. Gutsell, Ithaca, N. Y., first vice-president; A. W. Moore, Rochester, N. Y., second vice-president; Robert Franklin Dallas, Syracuse, N. Y., treasurer; W. Castle Keith, Syracuse, N. Y., secretary.

While this exhibition will be devoted chiefly to oil paintings, a limited number of pictures in water colors, pastel and black and white can be exhibited.

No limitation is placed upon the time when the pictures for this exhibition may have been painted.

All pictures for this exhibition must be delivered at the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts (in the Onondaga County Savings Bank Building, Syracuse, N. Y.) not later than November 20, 1905, the exhibitors bearing the expense of delivery and return. Pictures not called for by exhibitors within five days after the close of the exhibition will be returned to them at their expense. Pictures that may not be accepted by the Committee of Selection, if not called for by the senders within a week after their non-acceptance shall have been mailed to them, will be returned to the senders.

Artists intending to send pictures to this exhibition can procure blank exhibition cards by addressing the Chairman of the Executive Committee, Robert Franklin Dallas, 717 East Fayette street, Syracuse, N. Y. One of these cards, with blanks properly filled out, should be attached to each picture sent, and a duplicate should be mailed, not later than November 10, 1905, to the Chairman of the Executive Committee, to whom inquiries for any further information concerning this exhibition should be addressed.

A speeding automobile met a smoothly gliding cutter on the road.

Ice Cream Powder.

Mr. Albert H. Dunham, representing the Genesee Pure Food Company of Le Roy, N. Y., was a pleasant caller at the Times office one day last week and before leaving presented the editor with two packages of Jell-O Ice Cream Powder for making Ice Cream. With two packages of this preparation a gallon of the most delicious ice cream can be made in ten minutes, as everything but the ice is contained in the package and requires no cooking, eggs, flavoring or sugar. This is the Ice Cream Powder that received highest award gold medal at the St. Louis Exposition 1904, and is pronounced the greatest pure food success of recent years.

Enough of the powder to make a gallon of Ice Cream costs but 25 cents and nearly every grocer in town sells it.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

NEW M'KINLEY STATUE.

Sculptor MacNeil's Lifelike Design For Ohio's Capital.

In Columbus, the capital of Ohio, on the plaza in front of the capitol building, will stand a noble monument in honor of that illustrious citizen of Ohio, William McKinley. The commission to execute the sculpture for this monument was awarded to Herman Atkins MacNeil, and he has recently finished in his studio at College Point, N. Y., the statue of Mr. McKinley, which will form the central feature of the monument. This figure is of heroic size and portrays the martyred president in a speaking attitude, holding in his left hand the manuscript of an address. The facial expression is pronounced exceedingly faithful and was obtained by the sculptor through study of both death masks and photographs, while the model who posed for the statue was William Baumert, a wealthy resident of College Point, whose figure is said to resemble strikingly that of the lamented McKinley. The coat he wore when posing was that worn by Mr. McKinley when he delivered his last inaugural address. The figure of the dead president will be of bronze, nine feet in height. It will occupy the center pedestal of the monument and will be flanked by groups typifying Peace and Prosperity. The memorial will cost $50,000, one half of which was appropriated by the Ohio legislature and the other half subscribed by citizens of Columbus.

STATUE OF WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

The commission for the Columbus memorial was awarded to Mr. MacNeil after a competition in which about 150 other sculptors submitted designs. Mr. MacNeil was a pupil of Falguiere at the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris, won the Roman Rinehart scholarship in sculpture, is famous for his Indian groups and executed the central cascade fountain at the St. Louis world's fair, in some respects the most important sculptural composition there.

Cuban Diarrhoea.

U. S. soldiers who served in Cuba during the Spanish war know what this disease is and that ordinary remedies have little more effect than so much water. Cuban diarrhoea is almost as severe and dangerous as a mild attack of cholera. There is one remedy, however, that can always be depended upon as will be seen by the following certificate from Mrs. Minnie Jacobs of Houston, Texas: "I hereby certify that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy cured my husband of a severe attack of Cuban diarrhoea, which he brought home from Cuba. We had several doctors but they did him no good. One bottle of this remedy cured him, as our neighbors will testify. I thank God for so valuable a medicine." For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

MAKING LIFE MASKS.

Joseph Palmer of the National Museum and His Novel Work.

The custom of making life masks of persons of distinction has greatly aided sculptors in giving to posterity faithful representations in marble or bronze of the features of famous men and women. Joseph Palmer of the National museum at Washington, who was selected to make a life mask of President Roosevelt, has performed that honorable task in the case of several executives of the nation. Of course it is only now and then that he is engaged upon a work of such importance. In between such employment he has made casts of all sorts of things, from fish to Indian idols and from snakes to whales. He has been in the service of the Smithsonian institution for a quarter of a century. Among his subjects have been many redmen whose names are household words. Mr. Palmer had an amusing experience when making a life mask of Chief Joseph of the Nez Perces not long since. After the face of the chief had been covered with plaster and quills for him to breathe through had been adjusted in his nostrils some of the Indians present seemed to get the idea that it was all a plot to kill their leader in some highly civilized way. Their behavior became such that Mr. Palmer feared for a time that he would be scalped.

JOSEPH PALMER MAKING A LIFE MASK.

The process of taking a life mask is necessarily a delicate one, for if an accident should happen during the operation of encasing the face of a great man in plaster the injury to the subject might be serious or even fatal.

In making a cast from life the face of the living subject is smeared with oil while the person reclines in a seat constructed like a barber's chair. The plaster is then poured over the face, quills being inserted in the nostrils for breathing. It takes but a few minutes for the plaster to set, and when it is removed from the face a mold has been formed from which the cast can be made by pouring in plaster and reversing the previous process.

WILLIAM AND CECILIA.

German Crown Prince and His Bride. A $500,000 Wedding.

Not in many years has the German capital witnessed so elaborate fetes and spectacles as those in connection with the marriage of the crown prince, Frederick William, to the Grand Duchess Cecilia of Mecklenburg-Schwerin. The auspicious event has furnished the occasion for reviving some ancient wedding customs not practiced for 200 years, one of them being the so called court at cards, in which the bride and groom while playing cards with the king and queen receive the congratulations of the court. Another of these customs is the dance by torchlight in honor of the bride, which originated in very early days.

FUTURE EMPEROR AND EMPRESS OF GERMANY.

The mother of the bride, the Grand Duchess Anastasia, disregarding strong hints, ordered thirty toilets for her daughter from Paris, but the actual wedding dress is of German make, a point upon which the kaiser was most insistent. The cost of the nuptials to the German nation has been estimated at about $500,000.

One of the most picturesque features of the nuptial ceremonies, the reception of the royal couple at the Brandenburg gate of the city of Berlin by the chief burgomaster, the city fathers and 100 young women of leading families in Gretchen costumes, was planned to popularize the wedding in view of the fact that only a few could witness the marriage ceremony in the palace chapel by the court chaplain, Dr. Drysander.

The crown prince is a very daring horseman and has often been reproved by his father for risking his precious neck. He is also a clever tennis player, but his bride can defeat him on the court.

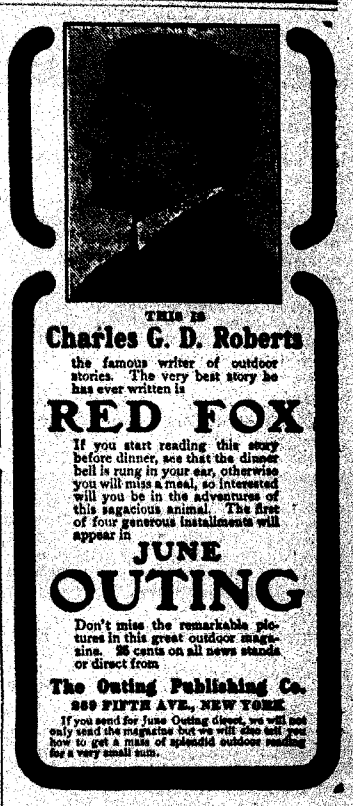
The Saddest Sight.

"What is the most distressing thing you ever saw in a courtroom?" was the question propounded to a group of lawyers recently as they sat together in the office of one of their number. One told of hearing a judge pass sentence of death on a woman; another told of the scene between a mother and son as she bid her boy goodby for the last time before he started to serve a ten years' sentence in the penitentiary, and as the question went round the circle each related a story of court scenes. Almost the last one in the group said: "Gentlemen, the saddest thing I ever witnessed in a courtroom was when a healthy, strong, handsome man and woman, with a group of bright, intelligent boys and girls, their children, appeared before a circuit judge, the one plaintiff, the other defendant, in a divorce suit. The look of distress on the faces of those innocent children as they sat and listened to the criminations and recriminations of their parents, intent on breaking up what had been a happy home, was the saddest sight I ever witnessed."—Kansas City Journal.

Court Jews.



Court Jews were the officially appointed bankers and money lenders of European rulers down to Napoleon's times, after which most of them became merged in the great business houses which deal nowadays with international finance. One of the founders of the house of Rothschild was court Jew at Frankfort toward the close of the eighteenth century. It was with him that the elector of Hesse-Cassel deposited £1,000,000 when the first Napoleon was threatening his dominions, and the way in which the sum was protected and restored when Europe was settled again first made the name of Rothschild famous in finance. Up to this period Jews had no rights as citizens in most German states or in Austria, and the office of court Jew was necessary to give them standing.—London Globe.

The Banshee.

The banshee is the domestic ghost or spirit attached to certain Irish or highland Scottish households and is supposed to take an interest in the welfare of the family generally, and especially to wail at the death of any one of its members. The banshee is pictured in Irish folklore under the form of a little old woman with long hair, which she continually combs, at the same time keeping up an incessant weeping and wailing. The incident of the comb is exactly similar to the legend of the German lorelei, a spirit which sings, while the banshee weeps, as an accompaniment. The proud distinction of possessing a private banshee is allowed only to families of pure Milesian stock. The word is derived from the Gaelic ban-sith, a woman fairy.

A Queer Insect.

The "walking sticks," "walking leaves," etc., are among the most curious forms of insects inhabiting tropical America. They belong to the great family of phasmidaes and are as odd specimens of animated nature as one could well imagine. The type of the family is an elongated creature with a cylindrical brown body, looking exactly like a small limb or twig with the bark on. Some of the branches of this numerous family live in the torrid portions of Africa, where they attain enormous sizes. Vane, the great traveler, said he had seen them so large that "they had the general appearance of great, animated clubs moving up and down the branches and trunks of the gigantic tropical trees."

PRIZE SPEAKING.

Misses Hubbard and Lewis and Messrs. Cullen and Kilbourn Successful Contestants.

The annual prize-speaking contest between High School scholars is an event looked forward to with not a little anxiety and some trepidation on the part of the scholars and their friends, but usually with pleasure by the public, especially those who are deeply interested in the schools.

A program of unusual merit was presented on Monday evening in the opera house by the High School faculty, and the contestants reflected credit on their instructors.

The prize-winners were:

LADIES.

First—Miss Florence Adelle Hubbard, whose clever presentation of the dramatic story of Pauline Pavlovna, won the plaudits of the assemblage and the approval of the judges.

Second—Miss Mabelle F. Lewis rendered "Guenn" (Blanche Willis Howard's story) in a most captivating manner. The Misses Lela E. Church and Marguerite I. Jewett, proved dangerous antagonists.

GENTLEMEN.

First—Mr. John F. Cullen succeeded in impressing the critics with his clear enunciation and natural oratorical ability. His subject was Henry Watterson's "Oration at the opening of the Columbian Exposition in 1902."

Second—Mr. William W. Kilbourn's selection was "The unknown rider," by George Lippard. It was most effectively rendered.

Mr. Richard M. Carr in the "Quarrel between Brutus and Cassius," and Mr. Charles W. Young in "Keenan's charge," gave most painstaking and impressive interpretations, eliciting well-merited applause

The judges were Dr. R. K. Piez of the Oswego Normal School; Professor Losey, Syracuse University, and Professor Lewis, Syracuse High School.

In announcing the awards, Professor Lewis complimented the faculty of the High School and the students on the ability displayed.

MILK DEALERS' ASSOCIATION.

Conference Held Regarding Action of Nestle Food Company.

The information exclusively published in last Wednesdays Times, that the Nestle Food Company, would discontinue the taking of milk from farmers on July 31, was received with consternation by all. Over three hundred farmers are directly effected and every line of business in our city must suffer in consequence, unless some provision is made to relieve the situation by the erection of a diary products building in Fulton.

The Nestle Company and the Border Company have agreed not to encroach longer upon each other's provinces and the Nestle Company will on July 31, give up the condensed milk industry, although they will continue the manufacture of their food. The working force at the Nestle plant will be greatly reduced in numbers.

The Fulton Milk producers association, officered by President, Cyrus C. Wilcox; vice-president, Charles Hess, treasurer, Noah Merriam; secretary; V. W. Shattuck, are engaged in an effort to evolve a successful future out of this dire calamity, and in that effort, they should be aided and abetted to the utmost by our citizens. At a meeting of the farmers and members of the Association held on Tuesday, plans for the future were discussed and a feasible method of procedure was suggested. About 300 shares of stock were subscribed at the meeting. The Board of Directors of the Association were appointed a committee to carry on the work and they were given full power to act.

A meeting will be held on Thursday afternoon at the office of Attorney G. S. Piper, for the further discussion of the matter.

Rev. Clinton Taft Called to Binghamton.

Binghamton (N. Y.) Republican: Rev. Clinton Taft, of Fulton, N. Y., has been called to the pastorship of the new East Side Congregational Church. Mr. Taft is highly recommended. He was one of the two candidates presented to the church by the recent State Congregational convention held in this city, and was highly endorsed by both lay and ministerial delegates. He preached before the East End society last Sunday and made a favorable impression. Mr. Taft is a young, energetic man, and has filled the pulpit of the Congregational Church at Fulton for the past four years.

Mr. Taft presented his resignation to the Volney Church last Sunday morning, to take effect July 1. He has been pastor of the church since April, 1902, and during that time he has succeeded in advancing the spiritual and temporal interests of the society so that it is now in a most prosperous condition. The friendliest relations have existed between the pastor and people; his resignation came as a great surprise and was received with sincere regret by the officials of the church.

Mr. Taft is a young man of sterling worth—conscientious and painstaking in every effort put forth; a logical and convincing speaker and a devout follower of the lowly Nazarene. While the people of this city sincerely deplore his loss, they are confident that the church at Binghamton has secured an able and efficient pastor—one whose influence will be felt and of whom they will be proud.

The Gas War In the Quaker City

REFORM and gas are in the air in Philadelphia. The two are inextricably mixed up. With so much gas in the air there was bound to be an explosion, and the latter has so shaken up the Quaker City that it has hardly been able as yet to recognize itself. The shock has broken the grip of the gas magnates on the city government, and the effect of the jar has been felt throughout all municipal departments.

THOMAS DOLAN.

The immediate cause of this remarkable episode was the attempt of the United Gas Improvement company to secure a new lease of the gas works owned by the city. The central figures in the affair are Mayor John Weaver, who opposed the proposed lease, and Thomas Dolan, president of the gas company. Both are interesting and picturesque characters in their way. The United Gas Improvement company is not simply a Philadelphia affair. It is said to have a monopoly of lighting in thirty to forty of the most important municipalities of the United States. It employs an army of clerks and officials, is housed in one of the finest office buildings in the Quaker City and owes its success to its close identification with the powers that be in the political world. It has been reckoned one of the most powerful corporations in the land, and its genius is Thomas Dolan.

The present lease of the city gas works to the United Gas Improvement company is for thirty years, the first ten years of which will expire in 1907. When the proposal to negotiate a new lease was made Mayor Weaver announced himself in favor of postponing consideration of the question until that year. But the gas company deemed the time opportune for obtaining terms more advantageous to itself. Consequently it urged the adoption by the two bodies composing the city council of a resolution giving over the gas works to the company for seventy-five years. The sum of $25,000,000 was to be paid by the company for this lease in installments between the date of the passage of the act and 1907. The lease provided that the price of gas should remain as at present—$1 per 1,000 feet—until 1911 and then be reduced in successive years until it should reach the price of 85 cents in 1936 and from that time until 1980 be 80 cents. It has been estimated that the ultimate profits of the gas company, according to these terms, would be about $1,000,000,000. The council passed the resolution making the lease amid great uproar and cries from spectators of "Thieves!" "Robbers!" and "Shame, shame!" Mayor Weaver announced that he would veto the resolution, but the leaders of the dominant political organization and the representatives of the gas company said that they could checkmate him by securing its passage over his veto. The mayor engaged the eminent New York lawyer and former secretary of war, Elihu Root, Republican, and former Judge James Gay Gordon, Democrat, of Philadelphia, as his special counsel. He broke completely with the political organization headed by Israel Durham and went to work to reorganize the city government. When the heads of the most important departments would not hand him their resignations he removed them, making ad interim appointments to their places, knowing that the councils would not confirm his appointees. As the term of the mayor has two years more to run he is not compelled to consider the matter of a re-election, should he desire it, for some time. The ministers of the city have been praying that he might be influenced to lead in the work of reform.

The mayor's chief opponent, President Dolan of the gas company, is a little man, weighing about 100 pounds, but of remarkable energy and determination. Though the methods of his company are denounced, it is admitted that his virtues as an employer are many and he is known for his kindness and generosity to his employees.

Mayor Weaver is of English birth and forty-two years of age. It is said he is the first Englishman to become the executive of a large American city. He left England because he thought chances of advancement better in this country. He is a lawyer and yachtsman.

A VERY RICH WIDOW.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and Her Use of Wealth.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, widow of the capitalist who was for many years regarded as the head of the Vanderbilt house, will shortly open the social season at Newport. She is a woman of many social graces and is the mother of Cornelius Vanderbilt, who married Miss Grace Wilson; Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, who married Miss Elsie French; Reginald C. Vanderbilt, who married Miss Kathleen Neilson, and Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, a debutante of last season. Before her marriage Mrs.

MRS. CORNELIUS VANDERBILT.

Vanderbilt was Miss Alice Gwynne. She comes of an old family of Pennsylvania origin and belongs to the Colonial Dames. She has done much for the encouragement of art in the use of her wealth and has expended a great deal of money in charity. One of the acts of patriotism for which Mrs. Vanderbilt is remembered is her rescue from neglect and oblivion of the grave of the Revolutionary hero, General Francis Marion, near Charleston, S. C. Her interest in the matter was aroused by the late Ward McAllister, who was a descendant of a niece of General Marion.

He Understood.

"How is your guardian on diplomacy? Do you think that he can understand the finer points of a secret alliance like ours?" asked the young man.

"I can answer that question for myself," said a sudden voice. "I am in favor of an open door policy just now—and I believe this is your hat, sir."—Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune.

Whooping Cough in Jamaica.

Mr. J. Riley Bennett, a chemist of Brown's Town, Jamaica, West India Islands, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It has proved itself to be the best remedy for whooping cough, which is prevalent on this end of the globe. It has never failed to relieve in any case where I have recommended it, and grateful mothers, after using it, are daily thanking me for advising them." This remedy is for sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Curious Navy Order.

One of the most curious orders given in the royal navy is "All hands black faces," a supply of pigment for the purpose being carried by each warship. When a night surprise is intended it is not only the vessels that are made as little visible as possible. Even the faces of the men must be blackened, for when powerful night glasses are used the showing of a white face is far more palpable than any landsman would suppose.—London Telegraph.

People Should Know How Mr. Miller Was Cured of Kidney and Bladder Trouble by Dr. Kennedy's NEW Medicine, Cal-cura Solvent.

MATTEAWAN, N. Y., Sept. 28, 1901.

Dr. David Kennedy Estate,
Kennedy Row, Rondout, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

I have been troubled with my Kidneys and Bladder for three or four years and doctored with many physicians without obtaining any help.

A few months ago I decided to try Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. Kennedy's latest medicine, and am thankful to say I am now practically cured. You have not asked me for a testimonial but I wish to tell you what Cal-cura Solvent has done for me and hope that others may be so happily relieved. Yours truly,

WILLIAM H. MILLER.

The Wedding Cake.

The custom of having a special cake at weddings was introduced into England by the Romans. This cake, or, rather, biscuit, signified fruitfulness, hospitality and prosperity. The rice that was showered upon a bride had a similar meaning. For many centuries after the Romans left the custom was to break the biscuit over the bride's head, and then the fragments were picked up and piled before her for distribution to her friends. At the restoration Charles II. returned with a small army of French cooks, who speedily converted the ancient biscuit into a delicious piece of confectionery, iced it with sugar and gradually adorned it with emblematical devices, till it towered into the amazing structure which the luxury of later times has developed.—London Chronicle.

Quality vs. Quantity.

Hard muscles and strong body do not depend on the quantity of food you eat, but on its perfect digestion and assimilation. When you take Kodol Dyspepsia Cure your system gets all the nourishment out of all the food you eat. It digests what you eat regardless of the condition of the stomach and conveys the nutrient properties to the blood and tissues. This builds up and strengthens the entire system. Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia, belching, sour stomach, weak heart, etc. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for what is sometimes called America's national disease—Dyspepsia—is destined to eventually work a wonderful and lasting benefit to sufferers from this distressing and mind harassing condition. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Do Not Limit Your Ability.

Poverty and failure are self invited. The disaster people dread often comes to them. Worry and anxiety enfeeble their force of mind and so blunt their creative and productive faculties that they are unable to exercise them properly. Fear of failure or lack of faith in one's ability is one of the most potent causes of failure. Many people of splendid powers have attained only mediocre success, and some are total failures, because they set bounds to their achievement, beyond which they did not allow themselves to think that they could pass. They put limitations to their ability; they cast stumbling blocks in their way by aiming only at mediocrity or predicting failure for themselves, talking their wares down instead of up, disparaging their business and belittling their powers.—O. S. Marden in Success Magazine.

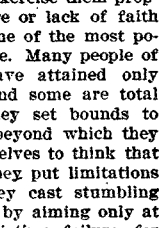
No other pill is half so good
As DeWitt's Little Early Risers.

The famous Little Pills EARLY RISERS cure constipation, sick headache, biliousness, etc. They never gripe or sicken, but impart early rising energy. Good for either children or adults. Bob Moore, LaFayette, Ind., says: "No use talking, DeWitt's Little Early Risers do their work. All other pills I have used gripe and make me sick. DeWitt's Little Early Risers brought the long sought relief. They are perfect." Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.



China's National Tree.

The tung-shu, or wood oil, tree is worthily named the national tree of China. It is stately in appearance, with smooth green bark and wide spreading branches, affording a fine shade. It belongs to the euphorbiacae, or spurge, family, of which the castor oil plant is a member. It bears a fruit resembling a shell bark hickory nut, but as large as a small orange. Each nut contains three triangular seeds similar to small Brazil nuts. The oil is pressed from these seeds, and the refuse is used as a fertiliser. The oil is used principally for polishing woodwork and dressing leather. Considerable quantities are exported. The wood of the tung-shu is used for making musical instruments, fine boxes and the framework of small houses. It is free from the ravages of insects.

The Window Habit.

In nearly every home in New York that has windows fronting on those avenues traversed by elevated trains there are one or more particular cushions known as the "elevated cushions." As their name implies, they are cushions on which the members of the family rest their elbows when leaning out of the window to look at either the passing elevated trains or what is going on in the street below. This looking out of the window habit is particularly a New York one, one that is noticed immediately by those coming here from out of town. Residents of other cities look out of their windows if there is anything in particular going on, but here women and children by day and men, women and children by night may be said fairly to live with their heads projecting from the windows. This habit is not prompted by any particular curiosity; it is simply born of the desire to be in touch with what is going on, though one may be a hundred feet above it.—New York Tribune.

Just What Everyone Should do.

Mr. J. T. Barber of Irwinville, Ga., always keeps a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy at hand ready for instant use. Attacks of colic, cholera morbus and diarrhoea come on so suddenly that there is no time to hunt a doctor or go to the store for medicine. Mr. Barber says: "I have tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy which is one of the best medicines I ever saw. I keep a bottle of it in my room as I have had several attacks of colic and it has proved to be the best medicine I ever used." Sold by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

First Transatlantic Yacht Race.

The three schooners, Henrietta, Vesta and Fleetwing, were the contestants in the first across the ocean yacht race, in 1866, for a stake of $90,000. Those three yachts made the race in the depth of winter, starting from New York harbor on Dec. 11, 1866, and finishing off the Needles a fortnight later, the Henrietta crossing the line on Christmas eve, the Vesta and Fleetwing finishing in the early morning hours of the great holiday. And for almost the entire length of that 3,000 mile passage they were accompanied by strong westerly winds, heavy seas and alternate squalls of rain, hail and snow. Neither the passengers nor crew were in dry clothes from beginning to end of the race, and they suffered every hardship, barring shipwreck, that could come to any one making the passage in the winter months.

Found a Cure for Dyspepsia.

Mrs. S. Lindsay, of Fort William, Ontario, Canada, who has suffered quite a number of years from dyspepsia and great pains in the stomach, was advised by her druggists to take Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. She did so and says, „I find that they have done me a great deal of good. I have never had any suffering since I began using them." If troubled with dyspepsia or indigestion why not take these Tablets, get well and stay well? For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Venice.

Throughout her career Venice inspired in her sons such devotion as passes the patriotism of most peoples. They revered her as queen, they loved her as mother. Although an exclusive oligarchy ruled the state, yet every Venetian felt that Venice belonged to him. St. Mark was the patron equally of doge and dustman. The legend which all believed, the pageants in which even the humblest had his place, sprang out of the heart of the whole people and symbolized the unity which bound all together. And life in Venice, mere physical life, was pleasant to a larger proportion of the inhabitants and during more generations than it has been in any other city. No wonder, therefore, that when Tintoret, the greatest of her painters—in so many respects the greatest of all painters—was commissioned to decorate the vast wall of the hall of the great council, wishing to express the feeling of every Venetian toward his incomparable city, he chose for his subject paradise.—Thayer's "History of Venice."

Nasal Catarrh quickly yields to treatment by Ely's Cream Balm, which is agreeably aromatic. It is received through the nostrils, cleanses and heals the whole surface over which it diffuses itself. A remedy for Nasal Catarrh which is drying or exciting to the diseased membrane should not be used.

Cream Balm is recognized as a specific. Price 50 cents at druggists or by mail. A cold in the head immediately disappears when Cream Balm is used. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York.

Hither and Yon.

"Hither and yon," inveighed against as a Yankee importation, is simply a form of "hither and yont," a good, classical Scotch expression and a most useful one, signifying "here and there and everywhere" or "all over the place." It is thus defined in Jamieson:

"Hither and yont, topsy turvy, in a state of disorder. S. yont signifies beyond, hither and yon. A. Bor., here and there. 'Noo that they're hither and yont frae ane anither it behooves a' that wish them weel to tak tent that a breach is no' opened that canna be gigit up.'" (Sir A. Wylie, 2, 20.)

Skeat does not give it, but Halliwell, who deals with English provincial dialects, gives "hither and yon, here and there."—Notes and Queries.

Origin of the Honeymoon.

The honeymoon used to last a month. The accepted notion, according to Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase and Fable, is that it must be spent away from home in order that the happy pair may get thoroughly acquainted without being victims of the curiosity of relatives and friends. It is so called from the habit of the ancient Germans of drinking "hydromel," which is a mixture of honey and water, for thirty days after marriage. Hydromel, fermented, contains enough alcohol to make a man intoxicated in short order, so that the honeymoon really was a debauch. Attila, the Hun, indulged so freely at his wedding that he died.

An Odd Wrestling Match.

The extraordinary custom of wrestling for a bottle prevails at Hallaton, in Leicestershire, England, where the villagers have to brace themselves for action on Easter Monday in order to retain possession of a plot of ground left to them in the good old days. The bottle is a large wooden one, bound round with iron rims, and contains ale. It is thrown on the ground that the men of the neighboring village of Melbourne may try to wrest it from the inhabitants of Hallaton. When the battle is over, the victors drink the contents. The same bottle has done duty for nearly half a century. As a preliminary to the great struggle, two meat pies and two dozen penny loaves are scrambled for.

Sought a Safe Spot.

"A Chinaman asleep in a tiger trap is something of a novelty, even for Perak," says a Penang writer. "A cooly was discovered one morning near a Kinta mine, having apparently passed the night in the trap. When roused he said that sleep had overtaken him, and so he chose the one spot least likely for the tiger to visit—the trap that had been set for a year without result. He thought that the tiger knew a thing or two about traps."

The Really "Good Man."

If you are really "a good man," if you can really do good work in any line, you do not need capital. In every trade newspaper you will find advertisements of this character: "The services of a good man more important than capital." A cry goes up from every quarter for really good men, men who can accomplish results, men who will not cause more trouble around a shop than their services are worth. Of course you say you are "a good man," but if you can prove it you are all right. There is no end to the possibilities of a young man who has good habits, good health and is able to do something well.—Atchison Globe.

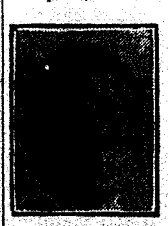
Noted Names In the Army And the Navy

MANY of the famous soldiers and sailors of the United States army and navy of the past are well represented by namesakes in the army and navy of today. U. S. Grant, 3d, grandson of General Ulysses S. Grant, is a lieutenant of engineers, and General Grant's son, Frederick Dent Grant, is a brigadier general. Philip H. Sheridan, son of "Little Phil," is a cavalry lieutenant; Stephen Decatur, Jr., whose name is reminiscent of the war against the Barbary pirates, and Jubal A. Early, son of the famous Confederate general, are midshipmen at the naval academy. Lieutenant Franck T. Evans of the navy is a son of "Fighting Bob" Evans, who commanded the battleship Iowa at the battle of Santiago and who is now in command of the north Atlantic squadron. Lieutenant Evans was a midshipman on the Massachusetts during the Spanish war.

LIEUT. FRANCK T. EVANS.



Major General Arthur MacArthur has representatives in both branches of the service. One son, Douglas MacArthur, who was graduated from West Point in 1903 at the head of the class of that year, is now a lieutenant of engineers. Young MacArthur was born in Arkansas and appointed to West Point from Wisconsin. From the day of his admission he stood near the head of his class and excelled in drill regulations, cavalry, light artillery and infantry work. He made no effort to excel as an athlete. Arthur MacArthur, Jr., another son, is a lieutenant in the navy. Three years ago he was among those injured by an explosion on the submarine boat Fulton. The distinguished father of these two men is not a West Pointer, but a veteran of both the civil and Spanish wars.

MIDSHIPMAN JUBAL A. EARLY.

Midshipman Early's father was graduated from West Point in 1837 and fought under the stars and stripes in the Mexican war and under the stars and bars in the civil war. Many other sons of men who fought for the Confederacy are in the army and navy. Fitz-Hugh Lee, son of the late General Fitz-Hugh Lee, is a lieutenant of cavalry; Joseph Wheeler, Jr., son of General Joe Wheeler, is an artillery captain, and James Longstreet, Jr., son of General Longstreet, is first lieutenant in the Thirteenth cavalry.

Stephen Decatur, Jr., was appointed a midshipman in November, 1902, from New Hampshire. Ralph Earle Sampson, another midshipman, is a son of the late Rear Admiral William T. Sampson, of Santiago fame. John P. V. Gridley, first lieutenant in the marine corps, is a son of the famous captain of the Olympia, to whom Dewey said, "Gridley, you may fire when ready."

STEPHEN DECATUR, JR.

Thomas F. Schley, son of Rear Admiral Winfield Scott Schley, inherited the martial instinct, but, unlike his father, preferred land fighting to sea fighting. He is a captain of infantry. Captain Schley entered the army as a private in the signal corps in 1884 and did not have the advantage of West Point training. In 1897 he was graduated from the Infantry and Cavalry school.

Lieutenant U. S. Grant, 3d, was appointed a cadet by President McKinley in deference to a letter written by General Grant when his grandson was a baby. This letter, addressed to "the president," bore a request that his grandson be named as a cadet as soon as he was old enough. It was presented to President McKinley in 1896, and he promptly complied with what resembled a request from the tomb. When U. S. Grant, 3d, entered West Point he was not content with simply bearing a great name. He went to work with a will to demonstrate that he was worthy of the name, and when the graduation days approached he and Douglas MacArthur were engaged in an intellectual contest for the glory of being "honor man" of the class. MacArthur won, but Grant stood third among his classmates, which was very creditable. When his father wrote one of the instructors to know if his son were upholding the honor of the Grant family, the answer was brief and to the point: "Your son stands considerably better in all his classes than you did." In this connection it is interesting to record that General U. S. Grant stood twenty-first in his class at West Point and that Brigadier General Frederick D. Grant stood thirty-sixth.

DIED.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Potter died at their home on the West side on Saturday.

Mrs. Hattie A. Gillispie, aged 25, died on Friday at the home of her mother, Mrs. Henry Nolan. The funeral was held from the Catholic church on Monday. The deceased is survived by her mother and husband.

Nancy Fargo, aged 85, died at the residence of her son, Mr. Orville T. Graves on Broadway, last Sunday night. The deceased was the widow of the late Leonard Fargo, and is survived by three sons, Orville T., of this city; Leonard and Levi Fargo of Syracuse and one daughter, Mrs. Alonzo Hatch of Fulton. Funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon at the late residence, the Rev. S. D. Robinson officiating. Burial at Mount Adnah.

Mrs. Rachael Miller, aged 86, died at her home in Battersea, Ont., on Tuesday morning. The deceased was the mother of Dr. Jennie Lake of this city, and her death is deplored here by a large circle of acquaintances which she formed while the guest of her daughter during several Winters. Dr. D. E. Lake left for for Battersea on Tuesday and Dr. and Mrs. Lake will return to Fulton after the funeral on Thursday.

Former Supreme Justice, John C. Churchill died at his home in Oswego on Sunday. He was the eldest and most prominent jurist Oswego County has ever known.

In the death of Mrs. Mary A. Connors of the Water Works' Farm, we have lost one of the sweetest and noblest ladies that ever lived. About eight years ago Mrs. Connors lost her husband, a fit companion for such a loving, devoted wife. It used to be said of him that "James Connors' word was as good as a government bond."

Mrs. Connors was a woman of sterling honesty, moral integrity and christian charity. To know her was to love her and her personal magnetism drew her a large circle of friends that ever remained so.

She had the happy faculty of being able to do the right thing at the proper moment, and coming from a family noted for its medical and surgical skill, she was of incalculable value to her friends and neighbors. This trait she evidently imparted to her son, William F., who has been eminently successful as a surgeon specialist. Mrs. Connors fertile mind was so replete with knowledge that she never had time for idle gossip and was never known to say an unkind word of anyone. Loyal to her friends and ever jealous of her family reputation, she often said with justifiable pride that there never was a stain of dishonor on the family escutcheon. So highly did her family prize their reputation that the motto of their coat of arms was "Death before dishonor," and her large family are a living exemplification of the same.

Mrs. Connors was born in the parish of Listoroel, County Kerry, Ireland, seventy-two years ago, and she came to Kingston, Ont., when fifteen years old. The following year she was married in the Cathedral at Hatters Bay, Ont., and soon after moved to Oswego, where the family lived a number of years. They moved to their present home in 1868, where they have since lived.

The immediate cause of her illness was a severe attack of the grippe which occured last March, leaving her extremely weak. Since then the stomach refused food and she lingered, suffering much pain, but never complaning, till the end peacefully came on the evening of the second inst.

Besides her brother James of Osceola, Wis., she leaves three sisters—Mrs. M. Stacke of Osceolo, Wis, Mrs. M Donivan of VanDyne, Wis., Mrs. J. Fitzgerald of Oswego, N. Y., and the following children: John of Sunny Side, Pa., Dr. W. F., of Scranton, Pa., James and Stephen of Lead, South Dakota; Thomas of Whiting, Ind.; Joseph H., of this city; Mrs. F. Mack of Oswego, Mrs. J. Carroll, Miss Kate and Miss Annie of this city.

The services were held at the Catholic church, the Rev. Father Kearney officiating, and the remains interred in the family plot, beside those of her late husband in St. Mary's Cemetery

The great concorse of people who followed the remains to their last resting place, and the beautiful floral offerings told how dearly she was beloved in life and how greatly she will be missed.

SOUTHERN SPAIN

Rev. and Mrs, W. L. Sawtelle Visit Seville During Holy Week and Attend Services in Cathedral, Which Are Elaborate and Impressive—Murillo's Art—Moorish Mosque at Cordova—Graceful Indolence of the Spaniard.

EDITOR TIMES:

The promise to send a letter to your paper and the desire to send greetings through the TIMES to Fulton friends furnish the motive for this communication.

The good ship Koenig Albert landed at Gibraltar, Monday morning, April 17, after a passage marked for fine weather and favorable seas. The afternoon of the same day the writer and his wife effected a peaceable entrance into Spain. The first thing to greet our eyes was a hoisting engine on the dock, with the name of the factory at Bedford, Mass., in a conspicuous place on it. The train from Algeciras, scheduled to leave at 3 o'clock, left at 4. There was no apparent reason for the delay, but a few days sojourn in Spain will accustom the impatient American to the graceful indolence of the Spaniard; he never runs if he can walk, and never walks if he can sit. The trains of Spain resemble a line of trolley cars and run at an average rate of fifteen miles an hour. At each station the name of the station is chanted and the length of stop is given. When all reasons for staying longer are exhausted, the large station bell is rung, the conductor blows a mouth whistle, the engineer blows the cab whistle, a station official blows a tin horn, and the journey is resumed.

Southern Spain is beautiful. The lowlands bordering the sea are very productive and the fertile soil is under fine cultivation. The only fences to be seen were hedges of immense cactus and in places the roads were lined with eucalyptus trees. As the higher altitudes were reached, great forests of cork trees were seen. In two or three hours ride the peaks of the Sierras became visible, and the train labored up the heavy grades, passing through sixteen tunnels before reaching Ronda.

In Ronda the hotel accommodations were endurable. Hunger will cause one to forego his personal tastes, and in a despairing effort to forget the unhappy present, the oil-steeped food was bolted. Ronda might well pride herself upon her beautiful location. From her seat high upon the hills she commands a wide view of both mountains and plains. An old Roman bridge, 500 feet above the rocky Tajo, is the most interesting sight in the town.

Seville—beautiful, gay Seville—was the next stopping place. Arriving in Holy Week, the city was found to be crowded with visitors, and hotel rates were doubled. The struggle through the crowd of porters and cabmen was like a football game in a parlor. Apartments having been found, preparations were made for sight seeing. The Cathedral was the central point of interest; it is a wonderful and imposing edifice. The services of the week were elaborate and impressive. On Wednesday morning the ceremony of the Rending of the Veil before the High Altar was celebrated. The full organ, the stringed instruments, the male choir, and the rich intonation of the service, combined with the actual parting of the veil from top to bottom, produced an effect distinctively religious and reverential. In the evening the streets were thronged with people as the procession of black-cloaked figures preceding the great crucifix, passed toward the Cathedral.

But Seville without the spirit of Murillo and the wonderful monuments of his art, would not be Seville. The collection of his paintings in the museum amply reward one for a trip to Spain; and his "St. Anthony of Padua," in one of the Cathedral chapels, seen in a most favorable light, leaves an impression that is irradicable

The Alcazar, illustrative of the Arabic art that in Spain finds its culmination in the Alhambra, was full of interest. The weary way up the thirty-five flights of stairs to the top of the Giralda Tower was forgotten in the view of city and country that the summit afforded. The great bells of the tower are named for various saints, and the ringing of the bells is an interesting sight. Strength and agility must be requisites for men who aspire to become bell-ringers.

The next place en route was Cordova. Upon entering the train from Seville the conductor stated that an excess fare was required, as the train was limited. There remained but a few moments before the departure of the train, and leaving the lady of the party in the compartment, we sought the ticket agent who proved to be a lady. It soon became evident that a mutual and immediate understanding was not to be hoped for. The lady soon spoke all the English she knew and the gentleman in a brief sentence or two parted with all of his Spanish, and still nothing was to the point. The gentleman then used his full line of gestures (several new ones being introduced for the occasion); he made signs on his watch, rang the changes on the name Cordova, produced his pocketbook, showed his useless ticket, but all to no purpose. Just as it looked as if he was to be separated from his family, or to be accurate, his family separated from him, a gentleman who spoke both languages—came to the rescue. We met this man several times later and learned that he could conevrse in six different languages. It is a matter of regret that he never told how many of them he used on the lady at the ticket window.

In Cordova, the point to which the traveler makes his pilgrimage, is the Moorish mosque. On entering, one finds himself in a veritable forest of pillars. The pillars are about thirteen feet high, but 800 of these produce a remarkable effect. Some of the choicest mosaics to be found on the Continent are in this mosque.

Granada was the last place of the itinerary. In the Cathedral is the mausoleum of Ferdinand and Isabella. But why speak of anything in Granada save the Alhambra? The chaste rhetoric of Washington Irving has introduced the world to this marvelous product of the Moorish artisans. It can be accurately described, photographs faithfully reproduce the various buildings and rooms, but only to the beholder is granted the complete conception of the Alhambra. No wonder that Boabdil, when forced to surrender this stronghold, asked that the gate through which he left this paradise be forever sealed. The halt of his few followers at the mountain pass while he, the last of the Moors in Spain, could look once more upon his lost treasure, is one of the pathetic incidents of history.

A rapid transit of 188 miles in twelve hours brought the sight-seers to Gibraltar, whose hidden English guns command the passage of the Mediterranean, and serve also to hold in check the Spaniards to the north.

And now terminates this screed, which fails utterly to give any proper conception of Andalusia, or to furnish more than a hint of the pleasures in a seven-day tour of Southern Spain. This letter was promised in America; its materials were gathered in Spain; the writing was begun on the Pincian Hill in Rome, continued in Florence and concluded in Venice. Its writer joins with the "Mistress of the Manse" in kindest regards to yourself and all of the many readers of the TIMES.

Mass Meeting in the Park.

Next Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock a mass temperance meeting will be held in the public park on the east side, to be addressed by the Rev. George H. Vilbert of Massachsetts. Mr. Vilbert was formerly a member of the Massachusetts Legislature and is an orator of exceptional ability. He comes recommended by such people as Bishops Vincent and Mallalieu, and Mrs Mary A. Livermore. It will be a rare treat for the citizens of Fulton to hear him. Chairs will be provided for ladies attending. In case the weather is inclement the meeting will be held at the same hour in the First M. E. church.

Church Tea.

A supper will be served by the Missionary Society of the First M. E. church in the church parlors on Saturday evening, June 17, from 5:30 to 7:30 o'clock. The following menu will be served: Croquettes, tomato sauce, creamed potatoes, rolls, salad, brown bread, strawberries and cream, cake, coffee, and tea. Tickets, 25 cents.

Mrs. Amos Wolever,
Mrs. Charles K. Howe,
Chairmen.

EARLY MAIL SERVICE.

As Soon As Schedule Is Complete Arrangements Will Be Made for Delivery of Mail.

Postmaster Amos Youmans stigmatizes the article which appeared in the Syracuse Herald last Friday, under the caption of "Better mail service," and referring to the Fulton office, as being utterly at variance with the facts and misleading. Mr. Youmans states that as soon as he ascertained that an earlier train to this city over the R., W. & O. was among the future possibilities, he wrote to the postal authorities with a view of obtaining reliable information and if possible arrange to dispose of the mail as soon as an official time-table were adopted. The appointment of a mail agent on the train would have nothing to do with the delivery of mail matter in the city.

As to the distribution of the mail, it will be delivered by the carriers at the earliest practicable moment after it is received. The employes and clerks have never presumed to dictate the hours of service, but on the contrary have ever shown a willingness to report for duty whenever an exigency has arisen whereby the public might be better served.

Mr. Youmans stated in conclusion that he had not yet received a reply to his letter of inquiry directed to the Superintendent of Railway Service in New York and it was therefore impossible to perfect plans until at least the schedule was complete and in his hands, and should the new arrangement become operative, he was disposed to facilitate the delivery of early mail matter by sending a carrier throughout the business section of the city as soon as possible after it had been received.

Disquieting Rumor.

A rumor is prevalent to the effect that that the Fire and Police Commissioners contemplate removing Box 95 from in front of the First street engine house to another section of First street. First Annual Union Sunday School Outing and Field Day.

A meeting was held last Monday evening in Judge Wilson's office for the purpose of discussing ways and means for holding a union Sunday School outing and field day on the Fair Grounds, Saturday, June 24. The project was approved and a managing committee selected from each church, clothed with authority to appoint subcommittees to arrange details. The purpose is to have a gala time in which boys and girls, and some of older growth, can unite. The grounds will be open during the entire day, and families can take lunches. Hamilton have issued a large number of invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Edith and Mr. Victor Case Lewis, the event to take place in Zion Episcopal church on Wednesday evening, June 28, at 6 o'clock, the Rev. A. H. Grant officiating. A reception will follow the ceremony from 6.30 to 10, at No. 172 S. Third street. The young couple will be "at home" September 6-13, at No. 133 S. First street.

Supervisor Taft's Natal Anniversary.

Last Thursday evening about one hundred of Mr. Gerard F. Taft's friends of Volney, conscious that it was his 39th birthday, and not willing that such a momentous event should be forgotten, gave him an enjoyable surprise. Games and dancing were indulged in until morning dawned. During the evening Mr. Jay M. Piper presented the popular supervisor with a superb rocking chair. Mr. Piper's address was in a very happy vein and it was responded to in like manner by Mr. Taft. Other valuable souvenirs were also bestowed. It was the sincere desire of all present that many happy returns of the eventful occasion would be enjoyed.

Grand Jurors.

A panel of 24 Grand Jurors, to sit at a Special Term of the County Court on Friday, June 30, was drawn in Oswego on Monday. This jury will hear the evidence in the Sweet murder case. Among the jurors drawn were: Fulton, George Reynolds, Job Bennett, Charles Wheelhouse; Constantia, John Baldwin; Granby, Orville Gifford; Hannibal, Fred Carter; Scriba, Burden G. Jones.

Post Schenck Expresses Gratitude

C. and Ladies' Aid Societies for the superb supper provided, and to all who in any way contributed toward making the exercises successful.

W. D. FERGUSON, Commander,
C. D. HANNUM, Adjutant.

The death of Mrs. Ada Foster, occurred at her home in this city on Friday. The funeral will be held from Grace Chapel on Sunday, the Rev. Charles Atwood officiating. Interment at Battle Island.

On Tuesday evening, at the home of her son, Mr. Ephraim Brainard, Syracuse, occurred the death of Caroline E. Baker, aged 68, widow of the late Rev. A. A. Baker of Manchester, Iowa. The funeral will be held from the late home, No. 209 Maple street on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock and the remains will be taken to Phoenix, for interment in the family lot. The deceased is survived by three sons, Messrs. George and Ephraim of Syracuse, Charles of San Francisco, Cal., and one daughter, Ada, of Syracuse.

Many of our readers will be shocked and saddened to learn of the death of Mrs. Gertrude M. Slocum, aged 63, in St. Joseph's Hospital, Syracuse, on Monday morning, after a surgical operation which was performed on Saturday morning. The operation revealed how futile had been all attempts to stay the approach of the grim messenger, and how intense must have been the pain endured for years by the deceased, who was always interested in others, even when her body was pain-racked by an incurable malady. Mrs. Slocum was born in Dunbaff, Pa., but had resided in this vicinity for over twenty years and had been a consistent and active member of the First M. E. church in this city for several years. The remains were taken to her old home in Dunbaff, Pa., on Tuesday, and the funeral will be held from the family home. Interment will be in the family lot. The deceased is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Thomas Hunter of this city, and two sons—Messrs. E. E. and W. W. of New York City, all of whom were at the bedside when the final summons came.

The Progressive Lackawanna.

With the change of schedule effective June 18th the Lackawanna will place in service two additional Sunday trains.

Train No. 917 will start from Binghamton at 8:15 a. m., arriving at Oswego at 12:15 noon, and train No. 916, leaving Oswego at 3:55 p. m., arriving at Binghamton at 8:10 p. m. This will give people along the Syracuse and Oswego Divisions one more train each way on Sundays. Commencing Monday, June 26, a new feature will be established: The train leaving Oswego at 10:55 a.m. (daily except Sunday) will run through solid to New York, carrying observation parlor car, one of the famous Lackawanna dining cars, vestibule coaches with highback seats, and a comfortable smoking car, arriving at New York at 7:30 p. m. A similarly equiped train will leave New York at 10 a. m. and arrive at Oswego at 6:35 p. m. The steadily increasing popularity of "The Road of Anthracite" renders the increased facilities necessary, and the Lackawanna always tries to please the patrons.

BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS.

At a meeting of the Board of Public Works, held on Monday evening, Messrs. Jesse Morrill, R. L. McCully and B. S. McKinstry, asked for changes in sidewalk and curb to be laid on Academy street, between Second and Third. It was agreed that it should be five feet wide in addition to curb, instead of four and one-half, as ordered on May 22.

Petitioners of West Third street, to the number of fourteen, asked for the opening of a street across the tracks of the Lackawanna road. Action was deferred until a personal investigation could be made by the commissioners.

A petition was presented by Mr. George D. Shaw, signed by twenty three persons, asking for a cement walk 100 feet long on the west side of South Seventh street, from Broadway to meet walks already laid out and to complete said block.

Attorney C. H. David entered complaint about surface water on Broadway, between First and Second streets, which flows onto his property. Supt. Taft was instructed to take care of the matter.

Mr. Thomas McGovern asked permission for himself and five others on West Third street, between Walnut and Chestnut, to run a four or six-inch drain pipe into the manhole of new sewer on Chestnut and Third streets. Referred to City Engineer Young.

Owing to complaints to the board of Health regarding condition of alley way between Putnam's drug store and Rogers' meat store, and the ownership of said alley being in doubt, the matter was referred to City Attorney Mead and Supt. Taft.

The Telephone Company was requested to move their poles on Academy street, between Second and Third, under the direction of Supt. Taft.

Mr. Harry L. Waugh asked that a watermain be laid on North Fifth street, between Seneca and Oneida. Referred to Supt. Taft.

The clerk was instructed to write to Schuyler Schenck of Toledo, O., asking him to deed 16 feet on Schenck street, establishing a property line for road purposes, as per previous correspondence.

Adjourned until June 14.

FIRE AND POLICE BOARD.

At a meeting of the Fire and Police Commissioners on Monday evening it was the decision of the commissioners, because of a shortage of funds, to reduce the number of call men to ten, which with the present regular service men, was deemed sufficient. The following were therefore dropped from the call list: Leon Hammond, Walter Leslie, Thomas Kennedy, E. Johnson, B. Ellis, W. Miller, F. Parks, F. Carroll, James Green, Daniel Roach, Thomas Wilson and Fred Taylor.

Charges were preferred against Fireman Frank Costello for violation of rules. The charges were sustained and Costello suspended.

F. D. Stewart was given contract for removal of manure from the engine house on First street, from date until January, 1906, for $10.

Calvert J. Tibbits was appointed a paid fireman for a period of sixty days.

Field Day.

Last Friday's field day at the Island was attended by over 100 club members and their friends and the event was the most enjoyable of the season. Now that we are favored with seasonable weather, the weekly outings are growing rapidly in popularity and the house committee has ordered preparations made to feed 150 guests on Friday of this week, when the following menu, cooked in Mrs. Holmes's best manner, will be served.

SCHOOL REMINISCENCES.

George C. Cooper Reviews Recollections of Days Gone By—Some Boys and Girls of That Period—Hopes to Visit Fulton in the Near Future.

EDITOR TIMES: I was pleased to note in your issue of June 7, the proceedings of the laying of the corner-stone of the Carnegie Public Library. I was especially interested because within one block of my present residence in Lansing, Mich., we have a library, the gift of Mr. Carnegie, which we consider an ornament to our city, and we are grateful to him for his beneficence.

I remember well the old school house corner of Second and Cayuga streets, near the old Universalist Church. Many a time have I taken a drink of water from a spring in the basement, where a hollow like a bowl was cut out of the sandstone rock for it to stay. The second story of the building was the school house, then down on the street. Afterwards raised up and another story built under and occupied by a Mr. Lane as a wagon shop, while across the street east was a blacksmith's shop kept by Mr. Robinson, who afterwards went to Phoenix and was an attorney for years.

Fred VanValkenburg was a school mate and many a paper wad was sent up to the ceiling.

In speaking of the schools in Fulton, it seems to be forgotten that there were private schools. One kept in the basement of the Old Wesleyan church and another in the second house west of the Baptist church by Miss St. John. Franc Warren (Mrs. Henry Gardener) and Melissa Warren (Mrs. Pratt) were scholars there, Mr. Warren living the first door west and my father living the first door east next to the Baptist church.

After the dissolution of the district, a school house was built on the north side of State street and afterwards they built the Red School house which was afterwards occupied by the Free Methodist Society and later burned.

In the Old Falley Seminary—afterwards and now, I believe, occupied by the Catholic society, I was taught by Miss Minnie Moore. I remember when the brick Falley Seminary was built. It was a farm, and Doctor Lee owned a farm to the east of it through which ran a road going to the Upper Landing to draw saw logs to Timothy Pratt (John W. Pratt's father's saw mill). Gardner Wood, who was Supervisor in 1861, also had an oil mill, while at his residence, opposite John W. Pratt's residence, he had a rope walk, where he made rope.

I wonder how many in Fulton know there was once a fort at the Upper Landing to protect the Falls. It was of earth-work, and I have in my boyhood picked up many flint arrowheads. It was on the grounds of the Hart pottery to the south.

J. Fennimore Cooper, in the "Pathfinder," giving a graphic description of shooting the Falls, speaks of the hill just south of the street leading to the mills, on which they stood and watched the shooting of the Falls. At that time all goods coming from above were unloaded at the Upper Landing and transfered down to what is now called Terry's basin, and then reloaded for Oswego.

A Miss Seymour, daughter of Deacon Seymour, father of Mr. Seymour, formerly of the firm of Gage & Seymour, also kept a private school in the vestry room of the Presbyterian church on First street.

Horace G. Lee and George Moody were my school mates, with others that I do not remember. I believe one or two of the Hewitt boys, (a minister and an elegant gentlemen who afterwards married Mrs. Falley, consort of the founder of Falley Seminary) also attended this school.

My brother, Norm G Cooper of Brooklyn, N. Y., is visiting us and we are talking over old reminiscences of our early life in Fulton since 1845. On his return east he will visit Fulton and I hope to accompany him and review the scenes of our childhood days.

Free Summer School.

Y., makes an exceptionally liberal offer of three month's tuition free in shorthand, bookkeeping, typewriting, etc., to students registering during June. This school does its advertising through the work done in the school room, and anyone desiring a thorough shorthand or business education cannot afford to miss this opportunity. More than 99 per cent. of its graduates have secured positions, and all who complete the course are sure of employment. Write to the principal for information.

County, District and School Commissioner's Conventions.

Through the efforts of Supervisor L. D. Beardsley of Granby, who is also a member of the School Commissioner's Committee, the First School Commissioner's District Convention will be held in the City Hall, Fulton, on Saturday, July 8, at 1 o'clock. The contest over the selection of a commissioner for this district cannot fail to be interesting, as each of the towns has a candidate who is intent on securing the nomination. Who the "favorite son" may be it is difficult to determine at this time. The contest will be fought to a finish. The County Convention will be held at Pulaski, July 6, the First District Convention will be held at Oswego, July 7, and then will follow the School Commissioner's Convention, July 8.

Oswego District Epworth League Convention.

The Oswego District Epworth League will hold its biennial convention at Camden, June 26 and 27. The territory comprises forty societies, and it is expected at least three hundred delegates will be present. Rev. A. C. Locke, D. D., pastor of the Hanson Place Methodist Episcopal Church, Brooklyn, will speak at the evening session, June 26.

At 5 p. m.—Evening of the 26th the Epworth League of Camden will serve a banquet to all visiting delegates. The Rev. S. D. Robinson of this city will preside as toastmaster.

Others who will be present and speak are Rev. J. Richards, Fulton; Rev. M. D. Gill, Mexico; Rev. E. L. Shepard, Belleville; Rev. A. C. Loucks, Presiding Elder; Rev. D. C. Johnson and Rev. E. H. Joy of Oswego.

ON THE PACIFIC SLOPE.

Clarence Partrick Writes of His Experiences and Visits to Points of Interest.

Interesting letters have been received by Mrs. J. C. Partrick, from her son, Mr. Clarence Partrick, who is serving on the United States cruiser Chicago, now on the Pacific slope. He speaks of visiting points of historic interest in Monterey and some of the famous Winter resorts along the coast. The trip through the Golden Gate, en route to San Francisco, was especially memorable and pleasant, the scenery beggaring description. San Francisco did not quite meet his expectations, but a trip to China Town made up for all disappointments, the visitors enjoying the novelty immensely. The parks at the Golden Gate were visited. These cover a large area of country, and the woodland walks and avenues were fringed with beautiful flower plots; ponds for water-fowl abound and play-grounds for children. Fine large monuments are interspersed here and there and tunnels cut through roadways, make the scenery picturesque in the extreme.

The "chutes," where venturesome visitors may slide down steep inclines in boats into the water; a zoo, stocked with numerous animals; circle swings, Johnstown flood, etc., all add to the pleasure of the visitor.

The Chicago is now at Portland, Ore., where the officers and members of the crew will have an opportunity to visit the Exposition.

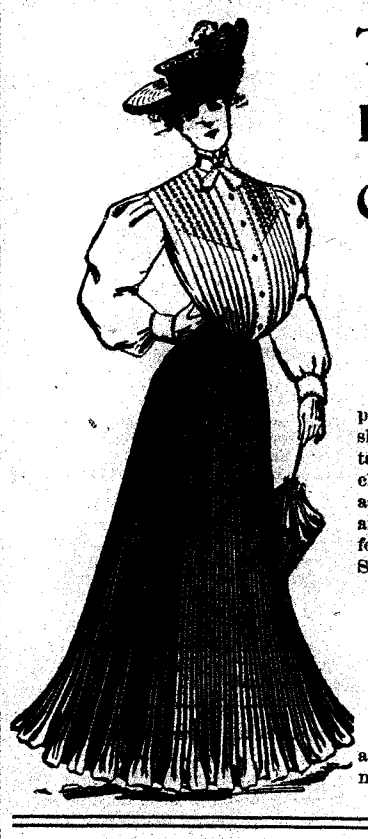
Eighteen Hours Between New York and Chicago by Twentieth Century Limited on the New York Central and Lake Shore Railways.

At the conference of the members of the New York Central lines recently, all lines being represented by their general managers and passenger officials, it was decided, beginning with the regular change, Sunday, June 18, to quicken the speed of the Twentieth Century Limited so as to make the time between New York and Chicago eighteen hours, instead of twenty hours, the New York Central Lines having made the twenty-hour time during the past three years, and having also made the run between New York and Chicago in twenty hours with their Exposition Flyer for the one-hundred and eighty days of the Columbia Exposition in Chicago in 1893, twelve years ago

The New York Central Lines make the point that the New York Central has had in service the Empire State Express, which has been the fastest train in the world for its distance, 440 miles, for fourteen years having held the world's record for that time, and for three years and one hundred and eighty days, having held the world's record for a thousand-mile train in twenty hours.

The proposed schedule of eighteen hours is simply the extension of the time of the Empire State Express through from Buffalo to Chicago, the time having been made for fourteen years between New York and Buffalo.

At the same time, the Lake Shore Limited will be quickened up an hour and will make the time from Chicago to New York in twenty-three hours, instead of twenty-four hours, leaving Chicago at 5:30 p. m., via the Lake Shore, arriving in New York at 5:30 p. m. by the New York Central.



The Southwestern Limited train No. 11, which now leaves Grand Central Station at 1:00 p. m., will, beginning June 10, leave at 2:04 p. m., saving an hour or hour-and-a-half on the present journey to St. Louis and Cincinnati.

An Interesting and Instructive Folder.

"Map of the Underground Railway of New York" is the subject No. 39 of the New York Central's "Four-Track Series," just published. This number gives quite a good deal of information in regard to the Underground Railway and enables one to see exactly where it runs and how long it takes for both local and express trains to make the journey.

On one side of the folder is a map of the Underground Railway, and on the other side is a fine map of New York City, showing the entire city from the Battery to 141st street, and giving a list alphabetically arranged of 77 hotels, 78 clubs and 49 theatres.

In issuing this latest number of the "Four-Track Series" the New York Central has followed its own plan of educational advertising, which it is believed adds materially to its value.

A copy of the "Map of the Underground Railway of New York" will be sent to any address on a receipt of a 2 cent stamp by George H. Daniels, General Passenger Agent, Grand Central Station, New York.

People Who Are Talked About Today

SENATOR J. P. DOLLIVER.

SENATOR J. P. DOLLIVER of Iowa, who is taking a conspicuous part in the senate interstate commerce committee's investigation of the railroad rebate question, was born in that part of Virginia that afterward became West Virginia. He made a speech near his old home in the last campaign and, growing reminiscent, said, with tears in his voice:

"How well I remember this place! This is where I was born. Over there is the chestnut grove where I have gathered many a bushel of chestnuts. Why, I suppose when I was a boy I gathered fully fifty bushels of chestnuts here."

"Yes," shouted a bull chested man in the rear, "and you have been peddling them out ever since!"

Senator Dolliver is fond of telling at his own expense a story of one of his campaigns in Iowa. "I had arranged," said he, "to speak to a large outdoor meeting in a certain town in Iowa. It appears that, hearing of my proposed speech, one of the prisoners in the county jail was for some reason or other extremely desirous of being in the audience that I was to address. This man wrote a note to the sheriff expressing admiration of my oratorical powers and asking permission to go to the town square, where I was to speak, and pledging himself to return to jail just as soon as I should have finished my remarks.

"Well, it appears that the sheriff was a Democrat and, what is more, a bit of a humorist, for he indorsed upon the back of the prisoner's note the following:

"'Permission hereby granted; remainder of the sentence remitted.'"

The boycott instituted by the merchants of China against products and manufactures from the United States puts Sir Chentung Liang Cheng, the present minister of China to this country, in a difficult and delicate position. He is desirous of friendship between his country and America, yet must stand firm for what his countrymen consider their interests. They have determined to boycott American goods in retaliation for the exclusion policy of the United States and to maintain this attitude until the American government agrees to admit to this country without restriction all Chinese except those of the laboring class. The Chinese minister has much admiration for American institutions and has spent much of his life here, for he was educated at Phillips academy, Andover, Mass., and Harvard university. While at Andover one of his friends was Timothy L. Woodruff, who has since been lieutenant governor of the state of New York. At a dinner soon after Sir Chentung's appointment as minister Mr. Woodruff jestingly announced that China's representative was the originator of curved balls in the great American game of baseball. The art of pitching curves has been traced back to a period antedating that of the distinguished Chinaman's student days at Andover, but the fact remains that he played baseball in those days and was considered by his fellow students an expert at the game. He wore a baseball uniform and kept his cue tightly rolled under his cap. He took to rowing, too, and one year was stroke oar of the Andover crew.

CHENTUNG LIANG CHENG.

Senator Charles Dick of Ohio, who was a conspicuous figure in the recent Republican state convention of Ohio, took the late Mr. Hanna's seat in the senate and is a born politician. He is forty-six years old now, and twenty years ago was keeping a feed store in Akron in which the polling place of his ward was set up on election days. As Dick saw the voters coming into his store year after year to deposit their ballots he came to learn the game of politics and has never forgotten how to play it. Like most politicians, General Dick is fond of a story, and he told one recently of an old man who used to make deposits in the bank where he was once a clerk. "I don't know whether this man was a miser or not," said Senator Dick, "but he had that reputation. I do know that he would sometimes make in one day three or four deposits—now $1, now $2, now 10 cents. A man once went to him and said:

"'I'm a doctor, and I'll give you $10,000 if you'll let me kill you. I want to see how, cut in a certain vein, a man dies.'

"The old miser wrinkled his forehead.

"'Let me think a bit,' he said.

"There was a long silence.

"'Well?' said the visitor.

"'Give me till tomorrow,' said the miser. 'I'll think this business out thoroughly and tomorrow I'll give you a decisive answer, yes or no.'

"So the man went away, and the next day he returned. The miser said to him:

"'I can't let you kill me for $10,000, friend. I've figured it all out, and I find that your money would be no good to me after I was dead. I'll tell you what I will do, though. I'll let you half kill me for $5,000.'"

SENATOR CHARLES DICK.

The Duke of Sutherland, who is now on a visit to America, is the owner of the Catania, one of the finest steam yachts in the world, and of the hundred ton schooner yacht Lizette, both of which fly the colors of the Royal Yacht squadron. Though he owns about one-fifteenth of Scotland and also large estates in England, has a long name and an ancient title, the duke is democratic and unassuming in manner. In England he is considered a very talented man, and he has a wife who is known both for her beauty and the brilliancy of her mind. Literature is her leading passion and automobiling comes next in her affection. The duchess is especially fond of driving big motor cars. She is not with her husband on his present trip. She began writing at an early age, and her stories have had much popularity, while her widespread philanthropy has earned her the title of the "Charity Duchess."

DUKE OF SUTHERLAND.

The duke is fifty-two years of age and says if he were a little younger he would have entered as one of the competitors for the kaiser's cup.

Homer Davenport is known the country over as a cartoonist, but comparatively few persons know that he is a farmer, a breeder of Arabian horses and a collector of rare birds and beasts. Mr. Davenport has made a good deal of money caricaturing trust magnates, and much of it has been spent in the pursuit of his hobby. He has a poultry and bird farm at Morris Plains, N. J., which is one of the most extraordinary places of its kind in the United States. Mr. Davenport was born in Oregon and raised on an Oregon ranch, and when the Lewis and Clark fair was proposed for Portland he determined to make an exhibit at the exposition of a typical Oregon ranch and show on it his birds and beasts, which are valued at $82,000. He has carried out the plan, and it is said to be one of the most novel features of the fair. Included in the collection are thirty-six varieties of pheasants, every country in the world being represented; water fowl, storks, cranes, jungle fowl, wild turkeys, pigeons, fancy poultry, quail, tragopans, Angora goats and Arabian horses.

HOMER DAVENPORT.

In illustrating the effect of his cartoons Mr. Davenport once told a story of an old negro from Georgia named Dr. Brown who went into the lobby of the senate chamber at Washington and met the late Senator Hanna, whom he recognized at first sight. When Mr. Hanna asked how it was that he was recognized by a man who had never seen him Dr. Brown answered that he had seen pictures. After being urged he confessed that these pictures were cartoons. He acknowledged this with reluctance and added by way of apology:

"Well, Mr. Senator, to tell you the truth, they didn't look like you a little bit, but I knew you by 'em in a minute."

William Nelson Cromwell, the New York lawyer who was recently installed as head peacemaker in the Equitable Life Assurance society's controversy, has figured in several recent national and international episodes, including the Santo Domingo and Panama incidents. He has been very successful as an adviser of corporations and is a type of the business lawyer of today who aims to excel in knowledge of commercial enterprises and the laws under which they are conducted rather than in attaining oratorical triumphs before juries.

Mr. Cromwell is fifty-one years of age, is a native of New York city and a graduate of the Columbia Law school. He is noted as having received some of the largest fees ever paid in the history of litigation. For his services as receiver of Decker, Howell & Co. in 1891 he got from the court a fee of $200,000 and, in addition, received a silver service as a testimonial from the firm. For settling the affairs of Price, McCormick & Co. he is said to have received $100,000 in one fee. His work as general counsel of the Panama Canal company of France brought him, it is supposed, the largest reward of the kind on record, for he is popularly credited with receiving $1,000,000 as his fee in this case. It is even said that $2,000,000 would be nearer the sum that he realized in connection with the canal project. Although there was much corruption in France in the matter of the Panama canal, Mr. Cromwell has made the assertion that in the passage of the Panama canal bill in the American congress not a single dollar was illegitimately expended.

WILLIAM NELSON CROMWELL.

The June American Boy.

In the thirty-two pages which comprise the June American Boy there is not a dull line; and both in variety and class of matter the paper is head and shoulders above any other periodical for boys. The cover page, entitled "Texas bids goodbye to the President," showing a great throng of happy, smiling faces, makes an appropriate index to the high-class stories and articles in the magazine. Kirk Munroe's stirring story, "For the Mikado," is advanced three chapters. "A page without a pull," being a story of a page in Congress, finishes most happily, and Mr. Spalding concludes "The origin and early history of baseball." Further chapters of "My four years at West Point," and "A French frog and an American eagle" are given. Among the many larger articles and stories which will delight the reader are: "Bunker Hill Day in Boston," a most suitable story for June; "The first Marathon race," which gives the origin of this race which is now a part of important athletic meetings. "Animal-devouring plants" tells of the queer food that certain plants require. "In Lemster woods" is a thrilling story of two boys and a hunger-crazed wolf. "Hendricks' last run" is a fine story of school athletics. "A analysis of sprint running and starting" will appeal to all who go in for this sport. "A 'Shivaree' at Wright's" is a humorous story. "Japanese war news" is an interesting story about the Japanese newsboy and the "Extra." For the boy who wants to do something there are "The boy mechanic and electrician," the making of "A simple telegraph instrument," etc. Every department is loaded with the best of matter concerning boys' hobbies and pursuits. There are also special prize offers to boy poets. There are 82 illustrations. Subscription price, $1.00 a year. The Sprague Publishing Co., Detroit, Mich.

The Great Salt Lake Bridge.

The longest bridge in the world stretches across Great Salt like. It was constructed at an enormous cost to save time and money. Before the bridge was built the railroad skirted the north end of the lake. Now it cuts off forty-three miles of road and runs directly from Ogden to Lucin. The cost of this remarkable bridge was $5,000,000. The piles were brought from the Oregon and Texas forests. By placing all the piles together they would measure nearly 600,000 feet. There are more than eleven miles of permanent trestling, nearly the entire length being under water, which is from thirty to thirty-four feet deep.

Whooping Cough in Jamaica.

Mr. J. Riley Bennett, a chemist of Brown's Town, Jamaica, West India Islands, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It has proved itself to be the best remedy for whooping cough, which is prevalent on this end of the globe. It has never failed to relieve in any case where I have recommended it, and grateful mothers, after using it, are daily thanking me for advising them." This remedy is for sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Cuban Diarrhoea.

U. S. soldiers who served in Cuba during the Spanish war know what this disease is and that ordinary remedies have little more effect than so much water. Cuban diarrhoea is almost as severe and dangerous as a mild attack of cholera. There is one remedy, however, that can always be depended upon as will be seen by the following certificate from Mrs. Minnie Jacobs of Houston, Texas: "I hereby certify that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy cured my husband of a severe attack of Cuban diarrhoea, which he brought home from Cuba. We had several doctors but they did him no good. One bottle of this remedy cured him, as our neighbors will testify. I thank God for so valuable a medicine." For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Oldest Dwellings In Europe.

One of the very earliest human settlements in Europe is Roche Corbon, on the banks of the Loire, seven miles above Tours. Here limestone cliffs stretch for miles and are pigeonholed with caves, which are on different levels and open on to terraces. When the rest of the country was nothing but forest land Roche Corbon was a thriving settlement inhabited by wild skin clad predecessors of the present cave dwellers. These terraces and caves were formed by the action of mighty rivers, and during the glacial period, when the climate of that portion of France was very severe, man drove out the bears and hyenas and took refuge in these natural shelters, which faced south, and so became human settlements of a primitive sort. Near at hand were the rivers and great forests full of fish and game.

The Oriole and the Bee.

Birds, their heads being small, are usually regarded as stupid, but an amateur naturalist has pointed out a proof that the oriole at least is very intelligent. Take the oriole's habitat in the summer, he said, and all around it you will find the decapitated bodies of bees. The oriole is fond of honey, and he has discovered somehow that the bee carries honey in a sac. Accordingly he rushes down on the insect, snips off its head, removes its viscera and then swallows the honey that is now laid bare. This shows intelligence on the oriole's part, but I have not yet described the thing which shows the bird's reasoning power most strongly. It is the stingless male white headed bees that the oriole slays. The sting bee he leaves alone wisely.

The Poor Editor.

The stork disappears, and we look into the cradle and behold a male child. After running the gantlet of measles, mumps and chickenpox he enters school. At the age of ten he is the terror of the neighborhood. At twelve he is an apprentice in a printing office. At eighteen he has acquired two cases of long primer type and an Army press and is the editor of a country newspaper. At twenty he is married. At thirty he is baldheaded, stoop shouldered and is the father of a large family. At thirty-five he is a corpse in a cheap pine coffin, and as 500 delinquent subscribers file past his bier for the last look they are heard to say, "He was a good fellow, but he couldn't save his money."—Lockwood (Mo.) Times.

The Chignon, 1771.

I had my beddus roll on. Aunt Storer said it ought to be made less. Aunt Deming said it ought not to be made at all. It makes my head itch and ache and burn like anything, mamma. This famous roll is not made, wholly of a red cow tail but is a mixture of that and horsehair (very coarse) and a little human hair of yellow hue, that, I suppose, was taken out of the back part of an old wig. Nothing renders a young person more amiable than virtue and modesty without the help of false hair, red cow tail and D— (the barber).—"Diary of Anna Green Winslow," Alice Morse Earle, 1771.

A Political Secret.

Before Napoleon III., emperor of France, became interested in the Mexican empire project he had a plan in mind for certain mysterious military operations in Morocco. A writer says: "The German agent of a firm of Liege gunsmiths used to go at dead of night to a private door in the Rue St. Honore, press a button and be received in secret by Louis Napoleon himself. The German was to secure arms to the order of Napoleon, but all was to be secret. Payment was to be made through a Swiss banking house, as part of the capital of a railway in the Grisons. But it all came to nothing. Mexico claimed the horizon and the German and his guns were forgotten, and the secret of it all is still to seek."

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 14, 1905.

THE Norwegian parliament has dissolved the union with Sweden which has existed for the last ninety years, but in order to show that no ill will was intended to King Oscar of Sweden, the Norwegians asked him to select a young prince of his house for king of Norway. The action of Norway was precipitated by the Swedish king's refusal to establish an independent consular service for Norway. An extraordinary session of the Swedish parliament has been summoned. It is now thought that foreign powers will refuse to recognize Norway as an independent country against the will of Sweden.

THE alleged "big stick," which was referred to in no complimentary terms during the last Presidential campaign, has become the "olive branch" of peace. The action of President Roosevelt in securing respectful attention on the part of Japan and Russia to proposals for a cessation of hostilities, is regarded everywhere as a masterly stroke—a diplomatic triumph of the first magnitude. Commissioners are about to be appointed by the belligerents to meet and arrange for a final and peace-making conference, and it is devoutly hoped by all civilized nations that the greatest war of this generation will be brought to a speedy termination, compatible with the dignity of the nations involved.

PERVERSION OF FACT.

Probably nothing in this world more thoroughly excites the scorn of the professional journalist than a perversion of fact or subversion of truth. It is to be regretted that some men have vaulted into the profession of journalism who cannot be tried by the rules of morality which exist and ought to exist in real life. With them there is no standard of right or wrong, gratitude or its opposite, claim or duty, paternity or sonship. Whenever they are detected in a nefarious scheme the reward they bestow is simply elfish laughter.

The Oswego Palladium has seen fit to quote from The Fulton Times, and we desire, by publishing the article as it appeared in The Times and the quotation as it appeared in the Palladium, to show how much reliance can be placed on the Palladium's news columns:

WHAT THE TIMES DID SAY, MAY 31.

There is an old but trite saying that "politics make strange bedfellows." It is currently reported that Attorney Udelle Bartlett contemplates entering the field this Fall as an independent candidate for the office of district attorney, in opposition to W. B. Baker, Esq., who is seeking a renomination from the Republican party. Mr. Bartlett, it is understood, has assurances from the Hon. Charles Bulger of Oswego that he will receive the endorsement and hearty support of the Democratic party in his candidacy. It must be a subject of bitter regret to Democrats in this county to learn that their party is so impoverished in available candidates that they are compelled at the dictation of one man, to be generous to disgruntled Republicans and lend them their support. Mr. Baker we believe, has so conducted the office of district attorney that he will secure the endorsement of his party for renomination. This is an honor he has merited, which is based on evidence extending throughout his tenure of office, and his renomination and election are assured. Mr. Bartlett's candidacy may cause some slight annoyance, but there will be little anxiety felt regarding the outcome by Republicans.

[From Oswego Palladium, June 1.]

MADE A GOOD OFFICIAL.

FULTON TIMES EVIDENTLY WANTS MR. BARTLETT FOR DISTRICT ATTORNEY.

Editor Hughes, of the Fulton Times, is evidently sore on the Stowell machine and is trying to push Udelle Bartlett, of this city, into the field as a candidate for District Attorney against W. B. Baker this Fall. Leaving out the part where Mr. Hughes lauds the record of the latter the Times' prognostications follow:

"There is an old but trite saying that "politics make strange bedfellows." It is currently reported that Attorney Udelle Bartlett contemplates entering the field this Fall as an independent candidate for the office of District Attorney, in opposition to W. B. Baker, Esq., who is seeking a renomination from the Republican party. Mr. Bartlett, it is understood, has assurances from the Hon. Charles Bulger, of Oswego, that he will receive the endorsement and hearty support of the Democratic party in his candidacy. Mr. Bartlett's candidacy may cause some slight annoyance, but there will be little anxiety felt regarding the outcome by Republicans."

Many of our citizens pay special attention to their lawns and endeavor to beautify them with flowers. Geraniums and valuable plants are set out with artistic taste and skill, and at considerable expense. It all tends to make our city more attractive and to encourage a love for the beautiful. Many complaints of vandalism have reached this office. It is presumed that the overt acts are committed by young and thoughtless persons. Plants and shrubs are taken up, sometimes root and branch, and flowers culled, between twilight and break of day. The flower beds are ruthlessly destroyed. It is unforunate that such a disposition is manifested as all should endeavor to aid in every possible way the laudable effort to make pictureseque the surroundings of the residence section of our city. The police officials have been notified and vigilence will be used to ferret out and bring to punishment the guilty parties. Those who are guilty of such acts will obtain little sympathy from any source should they be caught. They will deserve and will suffer the extreme penalty of the law.

The third annual recital given by the Schumann club, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Harrown Howe on Wednesday evening last, closed the club season in Fulton. The past season has been marked by progress in the literary and musical societies in this city and their friends are deeply grateful to the members for the numerous lectures by men of renown which they have been instrumental in bringing to Fulton during the past Winter. The members of the Schumann club have studied diligently during the past months, and the result was the superb program as published in last week's Times, rendered in a flawless manner. Each number was exceedingly artistic and elicited spontaneous applause. The home of Mr. and Mrs. Howe is beautifully adapted for the entertainment of guests, and the event was highly successful. At the completion of the program a social hour was spent and the members of the club served ices and confections to their guests.

MORTGAGE TAX BILL IS A LAW

The Measure Signed Which Will Equalize Taxation on These Securities.

Designed to Round Up Tax Dodgers and Prevent Discrimination.

Effect on Life Insurance Companies and Savings Banks.

Governor Higgins has signed the mortgage tax bill, which imposes a tax upon real estate mortgages of one-half of 1 per cent annually and provides that this shall be the only tax, state or local, to which such securities are subject. One-half of the tax goes to the state and the other half to the localities.

The new measure will take effect on July 1. All mortgages, except those on property now exempted by state law from taxation and those of $3,000 or less held by building and loan associations on property used for residence purposes exclusively, which are filed for record on and after that date, are subject to the new tax.

Will Equalize Taxes.

The law will equalize absolutely the tax on mortgages. It abolishes the present unequal and in some cases unjust system under which the comparatively few mortgages held by those who can least afford to pay the tax are assessed heavily for local purposes, while the greater proportion escape entirely. It establishes a tax which will not be a burden to any and will be a long step toward remedying the injustices of a tax system which has been the subject of many investigations and many fruitless attempts to change.

It is claimed by those who have given the subject most careful thought that the new law, besides being a measure of relief to those mortgages which have been brought to the assessors' notice by record in the surrogates' courts, will have most beneficial results because it will prevent great financial institutions and men of vast wealth from longer escaping the tax imposed by law; that it will be an incentive to capital to invest in this class of securities, as capital will know precisely to what tax it will be subject and thus by loosening up vast sums will result in a decreased rate of interest to the borrower; that it will be a relief measure rather than an added burden.

Attacked by Capitalists.

The measure has been bitterly assailed, both when before the legislature and while it was in the hands of the governor. The plea was made that it was imposing a tax upon those who could least afford to pay it—namely, the borrowers. But it was noticed that the plea was made almost without exception by the representatives not of the borrowing, but of the loaning, class, by the representatives of trust companies, large estates, big loaning corporations and capital, in general.

In considering the question, most of those who argue against the imposition of this tax seem to forget that under existing laws mortgages are now and for years have been subject to the tax rate assessed by the various localities. In some towns the legal rate of local tax has been almost or quite 3 per cent. Some mortgages have been assessed this ruinous rate. The great proportion have escaped entirely. Millions upon millions of dollars' worth of mortgages, held by men who claimed residence in adjoining states, have gone scot free, so that the choice presented to the legislature had three alternatives:

First.—Should the existing law with its rank inequalities and shameless injustice be permitted to stand?

Second.—Should taxation of mortgages be abolished altogether; or Third.—Should a moderate measure capable of complete enforcement and reaching everybody alike be enacted?

The General Proposition.

The latter course was taken. Here are a few facts which have a bearing on the broad proposition of establishing a uniform tax rate on all securities of this class:

The prevalent rate on mortgages given in the rural districts is 6 per cent. Where that rate prevails the additional ½ per cent cannot be put upon the borrower, because no more than 6 per cent may be legally charged.

The removal of the chance of a possible tax at the rate of from 1½ to 3 per cent will logically cause such offerings of loans on real estate security that lower rates will obtain, the general trend being to lighten the mortgagor's burden.

The savings banks of the state, according to the estimate of a prominent savings bank official, have on deposit not less than $500,000,000, placed there by the small depositors, but by the wealthy as investment made solely to escape taxation.

Life Insurance Companies.

The life insurance companies organized under the laws of this state own mortgages amounting to $270,511,661, according to their reports of Dec. 31 last. One-half of 1 per cent upon this would amount to $1,399,008. It is difficult to ascertain accurately what the increase in surplus of the life insurance companies of the state is for any given year because different companies carry this item under different names, and in some instances other funds are included which may not properly be termed surplus, but as nearly as the matter may be determined these companies increased their surplus in 1904 by upward of $18,000,000. The assertion, therefore, that the tax imposed by the new law would be a burden upon these companies or the policy holders in them seems ridiculous. In view of the special privileges granted by the state to life insurance companies, to the ordinary mind the proposition involved in the tax seems eminently fair.

Savings Banks Surplus.

As to the effect of this tax on the mortgages held by savings banks and any consequent effect on the interest paid to depositors it may be dismissed as not imposing any burden. The case is clear. The savings banks report for the year ended Dec. 31 last a total surplus of $112,853,766 on the market value of their securities or of $81,078,623 at par value. For the year ended Dec. 31, 1903, the surplus on market values was $107,049,076 and $77,595,753 on par values, showing an increase for the year reckoned on market values of $5,804,690 or of $3,482,876 on par values, and this after an increase by a number of banks in the rate of interest paid to depositors of one-half of 1 per cent and also after paying to the state a tax on surplus of $719,585. Assuming that the new mortgages taken by the savings banks during the coming year will equal in amount those taken in 1904, as reported to the banking department—namely, about $70,000,000—the tax upon savings banks mortgages will be about $350,000, or less than half the present tax on their surplus.

On Jan. 1 the savings banks held mortgages to the aggregate amount of $570,000,000. Even if all of these became taxable under the new law the tax would be $2,850,000. This taken from the gain in surplus for 1904 would still leave as the net surplus for the year $2,954,690 on market values and $632,870 on par values. In other words, after paying the mortgage tax and the tax on surplus the surplus would still be piling up to the extent of almost $3,000,000 a year on the market values. Surely the depositors are not suffering under this condition of things.

An Equal Tax.

Opponents of the law suggest that it will result in unjust discrimination between mortgaged and unmortgaged real estate. That is the case under the old law, and if it were enforced it would be to a degree from two to six times as great as under the new law.

The law will put everybody whom it affects at all upon an equality so far as any tax law can do it and will prevent rather than promote discrimination. It will put mortgages upon a basis of taxation lower than that applied to other property, and it is believed will enhance rather than depreciate real estate values and cause a stimulation rather than a stagnation of building operations.

It will certainly relieve the widow and orphan, who have not been able to dodge, from an unjust burden, will round up the tax dodger and do away with a law which from lack of uniform enforcement has created gross inequalities and become an acknowledged disgrace to the state.

KIDNEY DISEASE CURED

A Typical Letter in Dr. David Kennedy's Son About Dr. Kennedy's NEW Medicine, Cal-cura Solvent.

Gilbert F. Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., makes public the following letter from one of the most prominent men in Utica, N.Y., but who does not wish his name used publicly:

My Dear Sir: I received a sample bottle of Dr. Kennedy's new medicine, Cal-cura Solvent, a few months ago. I was greatly pleased with it, and decided to try a large bottle. I therefore purchased three bottles of Mr. Sheehan, and I am pleased to inform you that I have been greatly benefited by it and consider myself cured. If my kidney trouble ever asserts itself again (and I am sure it will not) I will not hesitate to continue the use of this grand medicine. I wish you would send some samples to the parties on the enclosed list. All are suffering from kidney trouble. Yours very truly,

A Funny Blunder.

According to Law Notes, Sergeant Ballantine used to tell this story on Lord Chief Justice Cockburn of England: One night while Ballantine was passing along Piccadilly he came across a policeman who was arresting a woman he claimed was drunk. He stopped to expostulate and stated that the woman seemed to be ill rather than intoxicated. Just at this time Lord Cockburn, who was then attorney general, came by on his way home from the house of commons and joined in the discussion. Immediately another officer rushed up and, seizing Cockburn by the collar, exclaimed, "I arrest you also." "Arrest me!" cried the astonished attorney general. "What for?" "Oh," replied his captor, "for many things. You are well known to the police."

Quality vs. Quantity.

Hard muscles and strong body do not depend on the quantity of food you eat, but on its perfect digestion and assimilation. When you take Kodol Dyspepsia Cure your system gets all the nourishment out of all the food you eat. It digests what you eat regardless of the condition of the stomach and conveys the nutrient properties to the blood and tissues. This builds up and strengthens the entire system. Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia, belching, sour stomach, weak heart, etc. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for what is sometimes called America's national disease—Dyspepsia—is destined to eventually work a wonderful and lasting benefit to sufferers from this distressing and mind harassing condition. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Church Weddings and Cards.

While it is a popular custom to issue cards of invitation to attend a church wedding, it is entirely contrary to the teaching understood to be implied by the church edifice. No private family has a right to issue invitation to the House of God to witness the performance of a rite within the said house as though for the time being the latter had been given over to them for their own particular use. A wedding in a church is not a private, but rather a public rite, at which any parishioner who wishes may be present without an invitation from any one. God's house is at all times a public place of worship, the very spirit of which is utterly opposed to cards of invitation.—Church Eclectic.

If in kind of bilious mood,
You wish an aid to digest food,
No other pill is half so good
As DeWitt's Little Early Risers.

The famous Little Pills EARLY RISERS cure constipation, sick headache, biliousness, etc. They never gripe or sicken, but impart early rising energy. Good for either children or adults. Bob Moore, LaFayette, Ind., says: "No use talking, DeWitt's Little Early Risers do their work. All other pills I have used gripe and make me sick. DeWitt's Little Early Risers brought the long sought relief. They are perfect." Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Sound Reason.

"Lend me your umbrella, dear. It's raining, and I've got to go to the vestry meeting again tonight."

"But, John, why don't you take the one you've been carrying for the last week?"

"What, to the vestry meeting? Why, that's where I got it."—Philadelphia Press.

CATARRH

HAY-FEVER

Gives Relief at Once.

It cleanses, soothes and heals the diseased membrane. It cures catarrh and drives away a cold in the head quickly.

Let the Cat Out of the Bag.

A certain English innkeeper's family conducted a weekly raffle. In this raffle the prizes were turkeys, ducks, young pigs, baskets of eggs and such like rural commodities. A quantity of steel disks, numbered from 1 to 25, were put into a black bag, and the little daughter of the innkeeper put her hand in the bag and drew a disk for each speculator in turn. The person whose number was the highest got the prize.

Well, it had been noticed that the innkeeper's wife got the prize pretty frequently, but nothing was thought of this by the simple, honest rural folk.

One evening, though, the little girl, with her hand in the bag, paused. It was her mother's turn, and she did not draw forth her mother's disks in her usual quick and careless way. She rummaged about. The other raffers looked at one another oddly. The innkeeper said:

"Come, come, child, hurry up."

"But, father," said the little girl, "I can't find the hot one."

Just What Everyone Should do.

Mr. J. T. Barber of Irwinville, Ga., always keeps a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy at hand ready for instant use. Attacks of colic, cholera morbus and diarrhoea come on so suddenly that there is no time to hunt a doctor or go to the store for medicine. Mr. Barber says: "I have tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy which is one of the best medicines I ever saw. I keep a bottle of it in my room as I have had several attacks of colic and it has proved to be the best medicine I ever used." Sold by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Dutch Courage.

Every one when he speaks of Dutch courage means courage that is induced by the cup that cheers and also inebriates—pot valiancy, in short, the exact opposite of what has been called "two o'clock-in-the-morning" courage. Three different origins of the expression have been suggested. According to some, "Dutch" in this case is used simply as the adjective corresponding to the noon "Hollands," as applied to that kind of ardent spirits. Others assert positively that the phrase arose as a sneer at the Dutch troops who showed the white feather of Fontenoy. But perhaps the best explanation is that this uncomplimentary allusion to the Dutch refers to a practice common in former times in Holland of encouraging those who were condemned to execution to drink heavily before they were hanged.

Found a Cure for Dyspepsia.

Mrs. S. Lindsay, of Fort William, Ontario, Canada, who has suffered quite a number of years from dyspepsia and great pains in the stomach, was advised by her druggists to take Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. She did so and says, „I find that they have done me a great deal of good. I have never had any suffering since I began using them." If troubled with dyspepsia or indigestion why not take these Tablets, get well and stay well? For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

The Curve of Health.

The expression "the curve of health," which was first used by Oliver Wendell Holmes, himself a physician, indicates in modern mathematical fashion the fluctuating changes in bodily health, of which all are at times aware and which may be expressed by varying curves outlined on paper.

Many imagine that the normal state of health is best represented by a straight line. This is by no means the case. There is a rhythmic undulation in the flow of our vital force. The dynamo which furnishes the working powers of consciousness and action has its annual, monthly, daily waves, even its momentary ripples. We have our bad times and good times. Some by careful observation of the rise and fall of this curve, have so adjusted their holidays and times of rest and activity as to conserve their energies and avoid the snares of disease. It is from his knowledge of this curve that the family physician can act successfully.

Recovered Speech and Hearing.

Messrs. Ely Bros: I commenced using your Cream Balm about two years ago for catarrh. My voice was thick and my hearing was dull. My hearing has been fully restored and my speech has become quite clear. I am a teacher in our town.

L. G. BROWN, Granger, O.

The Balm does not irritate or cause sneezing. Sold by druggists at 50 cents or mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York.

Brief Criticisms.

Of Gray's "Elegy" a contemporary reviewer wrote: "The excellence of this little piece amply compensates for its lack of quantity." That and nothing more. Of "In Memoriam" a contemporary estimate was that its "simple but touching verses" were evidently inspired by "the full heart of the widow of a military man."

Rather Inconsistent.

The New York Herald is one of the newspapers that is opposed to a tax upon mortgages. Under an Albany headline it printed the following:

Scores of complaints have been received by Governor Higgins and the legislative leaders of the disastrous effect of the uncertainty regarding mortgage taxation. Building corporations and real estate transactions in New York city and elsewhere, it is stated, will be seriously hampered by the doubt concerning the outcome of the struggle over the various tax bills which have been introduced or are in process of preparation.

In another column the Herald prints a story telling of the wonderful boom in building in this city. It says in the opening paragraph:

With plans for new buildings valued at more than $2,000,000 filed yesterday all records for building operations in New York were broken except in a few instances when plans for a great hotel or skyscraping office building were recorded. In the more than $2,000,000 worth of new buildings, plans for which were filed yesterday, the most expensive reaches the figure of only $300,000. Most significant is the fact that in this one day plans for twenty-two six story brick apartment houses and tenements were recorded.

There seems to be something inconsistent in these two stories. It is not the inconsistency of the Herald, mind you. It is the inconsistency of those who are striving to convince the governor that a tax on mortgages has already thrown a cloud over the building world. The building boom was never more vigorous hereabouts than it is today. The builders are not worrying about the mortgage tax bill to any marked extent. Brooklyn has grown up to her houses, and it behooves those who are in the landlord business to increase their supply of rentable quarters.—Brooklyn Times.

Booth and Lincoln's Death Mask.

A touching reminiscence of the great actor Edwin Booth is told in connection with Lawrence Hutton's collection of death masks in "Talks In a Library," recorded by Isabel Moore:

Caunt's was one of the two masks in the collection which affected Booth most. The other, naturally enough, but in a very, very different way, was that of Lincoln. I shall never forget the first time he saw the Lincoln mask. He asked innocently enough whose it was, and when I told him, my heart for a moment stopping to beat, he rose from his seat, took it in his hands and looked at it for a long time without a word. What it meant to him we can imagine. The whole awful, awful business came back to him—the mad, dead brother; the martyred, murdered president. Still, without a word, he put it back in its place, and it seemed to me as he did so that he kissed it with his fingers. I have seen him in that room look at it silently over his pipe many and many a time. But he never touched it or spoke of it again, even to me. What he thought of it heaven only knows.

A Dog Story.

Beerbohm Tree, the London actor, told a story of a dog named Argus which used to accompany him to the theater. The dog was of an emotional habit of mind and was greatly affected by sensational scenes. When Mr. Tree was playing in "Captain Swift" Argus used to take his place in the wing and follow his every word and look until the suicidal situation was reached. The moment Mr. Tree felt for his pistol Argus used to rush into the darkest corner he could find and, burying his head between his paws, listen for the thud of the actor's fall. After that the dog would crawl back to meet his master with a howl of joy at Mr. Tree's apparent return to life.

Mark Education.

The blue jay is a great elocutionist and gives utterance to many unlooked for remarks, but the one most often heard in the woods relates to the possession of a "chee-tidley-enk." Just exactly what sort of creature or thing this is no one can tell, but whenever I am in the woods I hear the jays exclaim "Chee-tidley-enk — got him," to which the meadow lark in the pasture clearing replies, "Oh-so-cheap," with a most sarcastic drawl on the "so" and an inflection on the "cheap." As a rule, the meadow lark says his say while perched on a fence post, and he talks with his mouth wide open. There are a lot of little people in the thickets who are always in such a hurry and talk so fast that it is difficult to tell what they say. There is that gayly colored little fellow the red start, crying, "T-wet wee-whe-whe-whisett," and the dainty summer yellow bird, who has something to say in the same line and much in the same manner. What he wants is wheat, and, although he never eats it, his constant cry is, "Wheat, wheat, t'weat wheat, wheat, wheat." — Dan Beard in Recreation.

Fools All the Doctors.

"There is a hale and hearty looking old chap walking about town," remarked a New York physician lately, "who for years has had a complication of diseases which make him most interesting to the profession. The ailments of which he shows undeniable symptoms are rarely seen in combination, and the state of his inner workings is a matter for speculation among the doctors who have examined him.

"The old fellow himself loves to tell that when he first asked medical advice some twenty years ago the physician, a famous practitioner in those days, wrote across the diagnosis he had put down on paper: 'This man cannot live thirty days. I should like to be present at the autopsy.' That great doctor has been dead these many years, and the dying patient still smiles cheerfully and seeks a cure for his malady. Queer, isn't it?"—New York Press.

Crockett and the Mules.

When Davy Crockett sat in the national legislature as a representative of the state of Texas he had many clashes with men of more education, but less wit, than himself. It is told of him that one day while standing in front of his hotel on Pennsylvania avenue a swarm of mules trotted by under the custody of an overseer from one of the stock farms in Virginia. A congressman from Boston, who was standing near by, attracted Crockett's attention to the unusual sight, saying:

"Hello there, Crockett. Here's a lot of your constituents on parade. Where are they going?"

The celebrated hunter looked at the animals with a quizzical glance, and then, turning to the other, said quietly, but with great emphasis, "They are going to Massachusetts to teach school."—Harper's Weekly.

The Kitchen In China.

"In China everything seems to us to go by contrary, and the front part of the house is devoted to the kitchen," says a missionary. "Upon entering the house at the front door one is introduced into the culinary department, and so important an adjunct to a household is the kitchen that the population of towns and cities throughout the empire is reckoned by the number of kitchens within the walls. Brick chimneys in China are a thing unheard of, and the smoke from the fire is allowed to roll lazily along the ceiling out into the court or through an aperture made in the roof. The kitchen fire is usually built in a mud stove, for any other kind of a stove is unheard of among the poor classes."—Chicago Chronicle.

The Rajah's Guest.

It is the custom in Sarawak that the rajah's house shall be open to his subjects at any time. That same Kayan chief from Baram who visited me, Dian by name, presented himself one night at Astana when the rajah had a dinner party. His appearance, clad simply in a chawat (waistcoat), with five followers in equally full dress, among a dozen people conventionally attired was a piquant reminder that I was "east of Suez." Dian pulled a pipe—I was going to say from his pocket—lit up and bore his part gallantly in the social amenities of the evening.—London Express.

Cutting a Hailstorm.

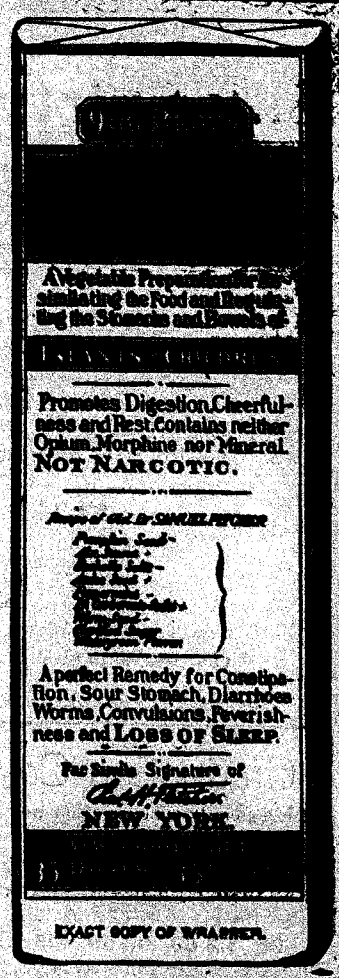
During a severe hailstorm in the Himalayas our native gardener brought out a hatchet and placed it edge upward in the garden to "cut the storm," as he said. Catlin, in his "North American Indians," describes a ceremony of the Mandan Indians in which hatchets and edged tools are sacrificed to the "spirits of the waters" to avert a recurrence of the great deluge, of which the tribe has the tradition.—Notes and Queries.

She Might Wish.

"I have always allowed my wife to wish something for herself for every birthday since we have been married."

"What does she wish generally?"

"Well, the last fifteen times she has been wishing for a piano."



Grammatical Discussion.

Young Arduppe—Is it right to say "deem" or "consider," Miss Arress? Miss Arress—Oh, both are allowable. For instance, I deem you a nice young man, but I cannot consider you at all.

Had to Hunt For It.

She (at the theater)—I don't understand what the detective is supposed to be doing in this piece. He—I fancy he is looking for the plot.

Green Hair.

There are men living today with green hair. This weird color is not a curious fad, but the result of working in a copper mine, where in order to become a marketable commodity the crude ore is roasted in furnaces. It is stated that, although no offensive odor emanates from this process, there is nevertheless some strange substance therein that produces a chemical change of the hair and beard, so that they become as green as grass. Strange to say, the texture of the hair suffers no injury, but remains as soft and glossy as ever.—Pearson's Weekly.

Superintendent Guthrie, in Friday's Oswego Times, regarding this contest, is quoted as saying: "The Republicans of this town are loyal to their party. The question arose as to whether or not the delegates should be instructed for me and it was decided to settle the question through the ballot box. Supervisor Wilson took no active part in the instruction contest. He was placed on the other delegation without consultation and as I understand it he knew nothing about the matter until the tickets were out. He was also on my delegation."

An effort was made to bring Judge Stowell's name into the contention, but the effort proved abortive. In an interview, Judge Stowell said: "Mr. Lockwood and Messrs. Guthrie, Acker, Brackett and Burt called on me at different times in the interests of Mr. Lockwood's candidacy for School Commissioner. I told Mr. Lockwood and the other gentlemen however that I could do nothing for him.

GEORGE E. EDMUNDS, A. B.
PRINCIPAL

BACCALAUREATE SERMON.

"High Ideals" was the Topic Selected by the Rev. A. C. Sawtelle in Addressing Members of Graduating Class.

The Rev. A. C. Sawtelle of the Presbyterian Church preached the Baccalaureate sermon last Sunday evening in the First M. E. Church, to the members of the class of 1905. The Revs. John Richards, George R. Foster, Nelson Reynolds, S. D. Robinson, Clinton Taft and Wayland Bassett were present on the platform and took part in the devotional exercises.

The text was from John xiv.6, "I am the way, the truth and the life."

As a prelude to his address, Mr. Sawtelle stated that he doubted if the members of the graduating class were aware, when they asked him to deliver the baccalaureate sermon, that he was an undergraduate and would not finish his collegiate course for at least one year. This, to him, was not an insuperable objection, for the reason that he felt he could come in closer contact with the members because of that fact.

The speaker urged his hearers to seek a high ideal and to measure up to that standard. Every man and woman should have a grand purpose in life. Failures were not always due to a lack of ideal, but to a wrong ideal. It was an important question, and he believed that each member had reached a conclusion—a more or less definite idea—of what his work was to be, provided the necessary qualifications were forthcoming. It therefore became a very important question as to whom we should follow.

Jesus Christ became the ideal for all ages. He alone had absolutely perfect qualifications. As a man, He knew what failure was. As a teacher, He preached the truth. He was truth. He came to give life; He was the life. In His life is summed up all ideals of human life. In following His precept and example we find untold blessings. He was the way because He was the truth. Neither the Scribes nor Pharisees have ever been able to refute His teachings. The power of Christ's teaching lies in the fact that it can not be proven false. It carried with it in the highest sense the principle of love, and His teaching was in perfect accord with His life. Was there ever a man who lived such a life? Did He not teach all the virtues—love of God and man? His system of morals and philosophy became the highest development of character.

Members of the class of 1905, the speaker said in conclusion, what is your ideal in life? In any walk it should be successful, but we can only be successful in this life and that which is to come by taking Christ as our ideal. He is worthy of all we can bestow. Let us then be wise in starting and lay a good foundation by living up to the truth. "I am the way, the truth and the life."

Keep Your Brain Busy.

Dr. Duke, the leading English brain specialist, says the trouble with most brains is that they are not kept busy enough. The brain ought never rest except during sleep, and most persons take too much of that. A good, healthy circulation of blood would be maintained in the brain if professional men would relax themselves from their intellectual pursuits, not in golf, but in chess problems and scientific investigations.

Swells of Ancient Egypt.

From what has come down to us, written, painted or chiseled, the Egyptian lord must have been a great swell. The details of the twelfth dynasty show Egyptian elegance at its best. The lord has a male housekeeper, his maitre d'hote, called "superintendent of the provision house." There was a "superintendent of the baking house," and the mixer of drinks had the title of "scribe of the sideboard." Perhaps he was a butler and regulated the supply of wines from the cellar. There were gardeners, porters and handicraft men, all busy in attending to the master. "A preparer of sweets" must have been a confectioner. The Egyptian when he was no longer mortal had hopes of being well fed in the hereafter, as he believed he would be nourished in his particular heaven with abundant goose and beef. Offerings to gods show the variety of the Egyptian menu, and in one are included ten kinds of cooked meat, five kinds of birds or game, sixteen varieties of bread and cake, six assorted wines, four brews of beers, eleven sorts of fruits and an endless number of sweet things.

Flowers In Northern Russia.

An English traveler in northern Russia writes to the Gardener's Chronicle that nothing surprised him more than the universal presence of well grown flowering plants in dwelling rooms. Even in the cells of monasteries and in the studios of city photographers farther north than Archangel he found such plants as oleanders, crotons pelargoniums and fuchsias in almost every room. The double windows, so necessary to keep out the cold, have a draft tight space between them filled with flowering plants, and it does not seem necessary to open them for air during the short hot summer. From September to June the country is buried in snow and shut in by ice. The average temperature for January is only 10 degrees. The July temperature, however, has an average of 60 degrees F., which is hardly to be wondered at when it is remembered that the sun shines twenty-two hours out of the twenty-four.

Lost the Prize.

James Crossley, a noted English bibliomaniac, hied him one memorable day to a bookstall in Shudehill market and, spying a little volume, took it up and glanced carelessly through it. After awhile he asked its price from an old woman and was told it was two and sixpence. "I'll give you sixpence for it," said Crossley. "Nay," replied the poor old dame; "it cost me 2 shillings." Whereupon our book devourer threw it down in disgust and retired. A gentleman, overhearing the altercation, stepped forward and purchased it at the sum demanded. Crossley returned soon after and, noticing the book had gone, anxiously inquired what had become of it. "Sold," answered the woman, "for what you refused to give." "Tell me who bought it, and I'll give him 10 shillings for it!" said Crossley eagerly. The moral is self evident.

A Ray of Light.

The straightest thing in nature or art is a ray of light when passing through a medium of uniform density. Hence the eye is enabled to test the straightness of an edge or tube by holding it as nearly as possible coincident with a ray of light, such parts as depart from straightness then intercepting a ray and causing a shade to be cast upon other parts. It is not known at what early period in the history of mankind the discovery was made that straightness could be thus determined. It is certain that thousands of mechanics use the method daily without being able to give a rational explanation of it.

A Japanese Test.

In Japan it appears that one factor entering into the choice of a daughter-in-law is her skill in raising silkworms. There is more to this than appears on the surface of the statement, for it seems that the thread spun by a silkworm is regular and even in proportion, as the worm has been regularly and carefully fed. The prospective mother-in-law carefully and minutely examines the garments of the aspiring bride, judging of her qualifications by their condition.

The Man Who Never Kicks.

There are some people who through slackness, indifference or sheer terror of their fellows go through life suffering many unpleasant things without protest. They dislike "fuss" or they are too careless or happy go lucky to assert themselves; hence they come off badly everywhere. These are the men who always get the uncooked chops and the tough cuts off the joint.—London Saturday Review.

An Altered Case.

Ascum—Have you seen anything of Jiggins lately? Doctor—Yes. I prescribed a trip to Europe for him only this morning. Ascum—Indeed! He's getting wealthy, isn't he? Doctor—Well, I can remember when I used to prescribe for him simply a dose of sodium bromide for the same complaint.

A Prudent Suggestion.

"Many people have suffered embarrassment because of their social aspirations."

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "Before you insist on getting into the swim you want to make quite sure you are a swimmer."—Washington Star.

Improving.

"Is your son improving much with the violin?"

"Oh, yes! We can now tell whether he's tuning or playing!"

He travels safe and not unpleasantly who is guarded by poverty and guided by love.—Sidney.

Y's Banquet.

On Friday evening the annual business meeting of the Y's was held at the home of Miss Ira Grove, West First street. The home had been trimmed with bunting and the letters Y. W. C. T. U. wrought in evergreens, were displayed upon the walls.

The election of officers which preceeded the banquet resulted as follows: President, Miss Dora Barker; first vice president, Lawrence Ranger; vice president's, denominational, First Methodist, Miss Edna Hoffstater; Presbyterian, Miss Helen Van Sanford; Baptist, Miss Ira Grove; Congregational, Miss F. Newell; State Street Methodist, George Fuller; Episcopal, Holden Pratt; corresponding secretary, Miss Edna Andrews; recording secretary, George Harding; treasurer, Miss Addie Gardner.

At the conclusion of the banquet, Mr. Walter Rust as toastmaster, called upon several members for toasts, Miss Maude Newell speaking on "The Chapel work and the need for teachers." Miss Dora Barker spoke on "What the Y's should do in the future."

The young people discussed the urgent necessity for convenient meeting houses in the center of the city and the idea was advanced that the rooms in the Phillips block now occupied by the Public Library, would soon be available and they were very desirable. It is possible that some of the organized church classes will join with the Y's in the project, thus assuring its success.

Sea Water.

Sea water is a complicated mixture of a great variety of substances. Roughly speaking, it consists of 96½ per cent of fresh water plus 3½ per cent of mineral salts. Three-fourths of these salts are chloride of sodium, or common table salt, and the next largest constituent is chloride of magnesium. After these come sulphate of magnesium, sulphate of lime, sulphate of potash, bromide of magnesium and carbonate of lime. In addition to these substances sea water contains minute quantities of quite a variety of elements, including iodine, phosphorus and arsenic. It also contains some silver, copper, zinc, nickel, cobalt, iron and gold. There is said to be 2 cents' worth of gold in every pailful of sea water, but as yet nobody has found a way to extract it. Copper and zinc are found in some seaweeds, and certain species of coral is three-millionths silver.

I obsarvates de 'tention of de gin'ral dis way: Co'se he prays jest like we all mornin' an' night, but when he gits up two, three times in a night to pray den I rubs my eyes an' gits up, too, an' packs de haversack, ca'se I done fine out dere's gwine to be old boy to pay right away."—From Mrs. Roger A. Pryor's "Reminiscences."

Edible Birds' Nest.

The nests eaten by eastern people are made by birds of the swift tribe, which are remarkable for the character of their saliva. This, being extremely sticky, quickly sets into a substance resembling gelatin, of which their edible nests are made. In shape these resemble half a saucer and are usually to be found in caves, attached to rocks. They have no particular taste, but serve as a basis for thick, clear soup, to which various flavorings may be added at pleasure.

Kaigun Taisho Yamamoto — President Peters as a Golf Player — Florence Nightingale—Governor La Follette's Victory—Murphy's Presentiment.

ADMIRAL YAMAMOTO

ADMIRAL GOMBEI YAMAMOTO, who sent flowers to the Japanese naval hospital at Sasebo for Vice Admiral Rojestvensky, is the Japanese minister of the navy. Baron Yamamoto was raised to the rank of kaigun taisho (admiral), one year ago at the same time that Togo was promoted to this rank. With the flowers that he sent to the bedside of the captured and wounded Russian commander Admiral Yamamoto sent a note expressing his respect and sympathy, and he also issued a general letter to the surviving officers and men of the captured or sunken Russian ships conveying his sympathy and his hope that they might soon recover and be released from suffering. The baron is forty-nine years of age and is a graduate of the Japanese naval college. He first won distinction in the war with China and was conspicuous in the naval battle of the Yalu in that war. He was promoted for his conduct in this fight and at the time of the Boxer uprising, in 1900, he became a member of the imperial cabinet. He is a man of remarkable decision, and the energy and efficiency he has shown as minister of the navy are believed to have had much to do with the recent successes of the Japanese in naval warfare.

The new president of the Long Island railroad, Ralph Peters, gets up at 5 o'clock in the morning to play golf. His friends predict that he will make a "drive" in the railroad business and that the directors of the road will not regret their choice of a golf enthusiast as its head. He has a son, Ralph Peters, Jr., who plays on the Princeton golf team, but it is said the older man can still defeat the younger at his favorite game. President Peters is the son of a railroad man and has himself been in railroad work since he graduated from the University of Georgia in the class of '72. For twenty years he was superintendent of one of the divisions of the Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis railway. He has held responsible positions with other railroad corporations and for four years prior to becoming president of the Long Island was superintendent of one of the divisions of the Pennsylvania road. He is fifty-two years old and lives at Garden City, N. Y., in a house once occupied by W. K. Vanderbilt.

RALPH PETERS.

Florence Nightingale, heroine of the Crimean war, is passing the evening of life in a house in London that has been her home for forty years. At eighty-five she is still active in work for the sick, though she has long been too much of an invalid herself to go on errands of mercy as she did when a nurse. So wise and practical is her advice yet considered that all plans for the care of the sick and wounded in the South African war were submitted to her by the English war office authorities for approval and suggestion. She has taken great interest in Red Cross work in Manchuria during the Russo-Japanese war.

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE IN 1854.

Miss Nightingale was born in May, 1820, while her English parents were staying in Florence, Italy, and her mother named her after the city of her birth. She was tenderly nurtured and as a girl was chief almoner and nurse to the cottagers around her home. When her family went to London and she was presented at court she took greater interest in the charitable institutions of London than in its social gayeties, and her sympathy for the suffering led her to become a nurse. Thus it came about that she had become remarkably proficient in the care of the sick when, half a century ago, the Crimean war broke out and reports came to England of the terrible condition of the wounded and sick at the seat of war. Miss Nightingale volunteered to go to the front and organize a system of nursing, and her knowledge, skill and courage resulted in great alleviation of the sufferings of the soldiers. She has since been known as "the angel of the Crimea."

Just before his first meeting with the late Mr. Whistler, Mark Twain was warned the artist was a practical joker. Twain determined to be first with "the funny business," and when in Whistler's studio he assumed an air of hopeless stupidity, and approaching a newly completed painting, said:

"Not at all bad, Mr. Whistler, not at all bad. Only," he added reflectively, with a motion as if to rub out a cloud effect, "if I were you I'd do away with that cloud."

"Great heavens, sir!" exclaimed Whistler, almost beside himself. "Do be careful not to touch that; the paint is not yet dry!"

"Oh, I don't mind that," responded Twain, with an air of perfect nonchalance, "I am wearing gloves, you see."

Simeon Ford, the New York hotel keeper, who has developed into one of the best after dinner story tellers in New York and who has also written a humorous book, tells this story at his own expense:

"I was once asked to address the ladies' club, and I set out to give them a rip-roaring funny speech. 'That's what they want,' I said to myself. 'Now, Simeon, it's up to you to see that those ladies have a joyful day of it.' Well, I was so funny during that speech that it was all I could do to keep from ruining all my points with my own laughter. When I had finished the president came to me and expressed her thanks.

SIMEON FORD.

"'But,' she added consolingly, 'you made a great mistake, Mr. Ford. The ladies all thought you were going to give them a funny speech.'

"A few days later it was my fate to be forced to listen to a long and tedious speech by an amateur speaker. I listened to him attentively for more than an hour, because, you know, I like to have people listen to me when I set out to bore them with language. Well, I am glad I listened. Just as we were ready to drop off to sleep he said:

"'And now, as Lady Godiva said when she was returning on her ride, I am drawing near my clothes.'"

Governor Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin is thought to have won the most notable victory of his political life in the passage by the legislature of the railroad rate commission bill for which he was fighting for several years. The bill embodies the ideas enunciated in the platform on which he ran for governor in 1904. He is to speak during the summer at Chautauqua assemblies and next winter will take the seat in the United States senate to which he has been elected.

GOVERNOR LA FOLLETTE.

Governor La Follette got on the "outs" with the Republican machine in his state very early in his career. He was only twenty-five when he went to congress. Philetus Sawyer, then senator from Wisconsin and leader of the party in the state, received him graciously and secured him a position on the Indian affairs committee. Soon a bill was introduced in congress opening to settlement a portion of the Sioux reservation. La Follette at once perceived there was something in it for the railroads and had it amended to conform to the usual practice of the committee. He was warned that this would never do, especially as the railroads in question gridironed his district. But he was unmoved by the hints. He was subsequently shifted to another committee. Thus began his breach with Sawyer. He was at the very portal of his career, yet he had the courage to quarrel with a man who for a score of years held sway over the political ambitions of men from the Mississippi to Lake Michigan. It was a serious breach and was never healed and every one said it meant the political deathknell of the little orator. Recent history has proved otherwise.

That presentiments are not always reliable is demonstrated by the recent experience of Dominic I. Murphy. He was commissioner of pensions under President Cleveland and for the past year has been secretary of the canal commission. Recently he was ordered to Panama. The order hit him like a death sentence, as he felt convinced that he would never return to Washington alive if once he went to the isthmus. He became so depressed over the idea that on a dozen occasions he contemplated resigning. However, he decided to go, and called on the president to say goodby.

DOMINIC I. MURPHY.

"This is really goodby and not au revoir," he said, "for I have a conviction that I shall not return."

President Roosevelt was alarmed at the morbid fear of Murphy and asked him if he knew of a vacancy in any other position.

"Only one, and I wouldn't ask for that," returned Murphy. "Consul Tourgee of Bordeaux died today, but it would be indecent to file a claim on that vacancy."

He went out and ordered a couple of cases of drinking water sent to Panama, bought some clothes and prepared for the inevitable. Three hours later he returned to his home and found a telephone message from the president informing him of his appointment as United States consul to Bordeaux.

MRS. WHITELAW REID.

Wife of American Ambassador to England and Her London Home.

The wife of the new ambassador to England, Whitelaw Reid, will have a fine home, with many historic associations while her husband is representing this country at the court of St. James. Through the influence of King Edward himself Mr. Reid has secured as his London residence the famous Dorchester House, which is owned by his majesty's equerry, Captain Holford. The latter is a bachelor and does not have much use for so large a residence, but, being very rich, does not need the rental of the place and rarely leases it. He has done so this time at the suggestion of the king, who wished the American ambassador to have a residence suitable for entertaining on a large scale, and Dorchester House is regarded as the finest place in London for this purpose. It is in the Italian style and has twenty-four bedrooms and boudoirs, twelve sitting rooms and six reception rooms.

MRS. WHITELAW REID.

Mrs. Reid has been accustomed to elegant surroundings from girlhood up. She was Miss Elizabeth Mills, daughter of the multimillionaire, D. O. Mills, and met Mr. Reid at her father's California home when a debutante of eighteen. He was then an eligible bachelor of forty and head of the New York Tribune. They were married four years later, in 1881. She is a woman of fine education and brilliant qualities.

Whooping Cough in Jamaica.

Mr. J. Riley Bennett, a chemist of Brown's Town, Jamaica, West India Islands, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It has proved itself to be the best remedy for whooping cough, which is prevalent on this end of the globe. It has never failed to relieve in any case where I have recommended it, and grateful mothers, after using it, are daily thanking me for advising them." This remedy is for sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

The Property Man's Troubles.

The company was playing "Romeo and Juliet" the other day, and in the balcony scene a cannon went off. The property man was sent for, who explained that it was a cannon which should have gone off in the performance of "Henry V." two days before. That property man was spoken to more in sorrow than in anger.—From an Address by F. R. Benson in London.

The laxative effect of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets is so agreeable and so natural that you do not realize it is the effect of a medicine. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

The Religious Vocation.

The religious vocation isn't necessarily the outcome of long mental processes. It may either steal upon one subtly or overwhelm one at a single onslaught.—From "The Bishop's Niece," by George H. Picard.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

NICK LONGWORTH.

Clever Ohio Congressman Who May Wed President's Daughter.

The visit of Miss Alice Roosevelt to Cincinnati has again set tongues to gossiping about her possible feelings toward Congressman Nick Longworth, son of her hostess. The gallant representative from Ohio has been her escort on numerous occasions, is handsome, manly, rich and clever. The visit to the Longworth home is to be followed by a trip to the Philippines in Secretary Taft's congressional party, of which Mr. Longworth will be a member. Miss Roosevelt's Philippine trip is a gift from her father in honor of her twenty-first birthday. She had the choice of visiting Whitelaw Reid at the London embassy and being presented by him at court or going with the Taft party. While the fact that Mr. Longworth was to go on the excursion to the orient may have had nothing to do with her decision to join it, friends of the two surmise that it did.

CONGRESSMAN NICHOLAS LONGWORTH.

"I want to say for myself," he once remarked, "that I was never accused of being a society man until I went to Washington. The charge was never made against me in Cincinnati. Even now I do not deserve it. As far as pink teas and such are concerned, I never went to a tea or an afternoon function in my life. I have never quit a congressional session to attend a tea. I confess to having 'played hookey' to attend the races at Bennings, but, then, the Kentucky congressmen can give me cards and spades at that game."

Mr. Longworth is thirty-six years old, five feet ten inches tall, rather bald and a "good fellow." He is a graduate of Harvard and belonged to the same club there of which the president was a member. He and Mr. Roosevelt have long been close friends.

May Weddings.

May weddings are supposed by many persons to be unlucky. It is a heritage from the ancient Romans. A May bride, says Ovid, is short lived, his explanation being that the month included the celebration of the Lemuria in honor of the dead. Apart from any evil omen, such a time of mourning would interfere with the bathing and toilet arrangements that were proper preliminaries to weddings. Plutarch suggests that, as April was the month of Venus and June that of Juno, to select May was to slight those nuptial goddesses and that June, as the month of the young (juniores), was preferable to May, the month of the old (majores). Ovid's "Mense malas maio nubere vulgus ait" (there is a popular saying that wicked women wed in May) was inscribed on the gate of Holyrood when Mary, queen of Scots, married Bothwell in May, 1567. What followed strengthened Scottish belief in May's unluckiness.

Sprained Ankle, Stiff Neck, Lame Shoulder.

These are three common ailments for which Chamberlain's Pain Balm is especially valuable. If promptly applied it will save you time, money and suffering when troubled with any one of these ailments. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Childhood Woes.

Cuban Diarrhoea.

U. S. soldiers who served in Cuba during the Spanish war know what this disease is and that ordinary remedies have little more effect than so much water. Cuban diarrhoea is almost as severe and dangerous as a mild attack of cholera. There is one remedy, however, that can always be depended upon as will be seen by the following certificate from Mrs. Minnie Jacobs of Houston, Texas: "I hereby certify that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy cured my husband of a severe attack of Cuban diarrhoea, which he brought home from Cuba. We had several doctors but they did him no good. One bottle of this remedy cured him, as our neighbors will testify. I thank God for so valuable a medicine." For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

KING OSCAR II.

His Unique Position For Many Years as Ruler of Two States.

History contains few parallels to the case of Oscar II., king of Sweden and until a few days since of Norway. For thirty-three years he ruled over these two countries, which in 1814 were united under the government of one monarch, but otherwise remained separate and sovereign states, with different parliaments, armies and navies. The union gave rise to many sources of friction, especially in the matter of foreign affairs and the consular service. The people of Norway are dependent largely on maritime industries, and they have for some time desired a separate consular service from that of Sweden. King Oscar's opposition to this plan resulted in the action taken by the Norwegian storthing on June 7, declaring that he was no longer king of Norway and that the union of that country with Sweden under his rulership was dissolved. King Oscar has been a popular ruler both with the Swedes and the Norwegians and has repeatedly exerted his tact and statesmanship to preserve the union between the states when a break was threatened in the past.

KING OSCAR II. OF SWEDEN.

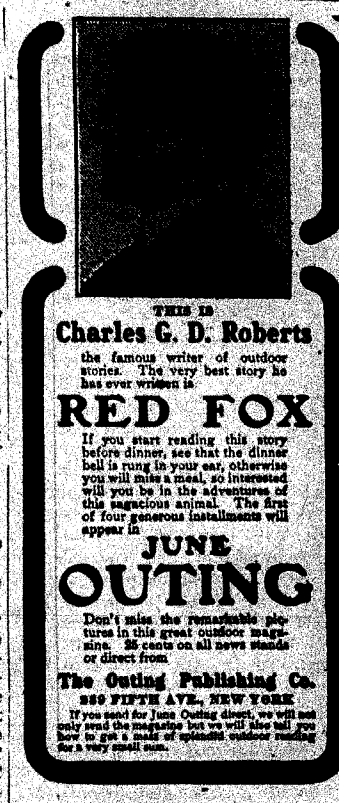
King Oscar is seventy-six years old and is much respected abroad as well as at home for his accomplishments in literature, history, statesmanship and jurisprudence. He has often been called on to act as an arbitrator of international disputes. He is a grandson of Napoleon's famous marshal, Jules Bernadotte, who became king of Norway and Sweden in 1818 under the act of union of 1814.

To Recover Her Child.

"Can you help me to recover my child?" asked the poor woman.



"Is your child lost?"

"Oh, no. His clothes are worn out."

Ran the Pole Out of Town.

A lecturer recently told of a Russian he saw some years ago in Manchuria whose methods of achieving results were not according to the usual code. The Russian had a well in his front yard which he concluded to fill up. He began digging a hole by the side of the well, throwing the dirt from the new excavation into the well.

"In the course of time," said the speaker, "the old well was filled, but there was a hole alongside as big as the first. The Russian went farther away and dug another hole to fill the second. He continued this process of digging one hole to fill the other until he literally ran the hole out of town."

Certain Recollections.

Editor Times: Your Michigan correspondents interest me, not so much by their accuracy as by their suggestions. While my knowledge of Fulton affairs does not go back quite so far as theirs, I do have a sort of notion of happenings since the early Winter of 1860, '61. Naturally everything pertaining to Falley Seminary interests, for it was in Dec. '60, that I began my first term in that most excellent institution under the unrivaled direction of John P. Griffin, A. M. Mr. Smith is quite in error as to the size of the school, while in the care of Mr. Griffin I am the fortunate possessor of the catalogues of the Seminary which once belonged to the Principal and the largest number of different pupils for any one year, not to mention a single term was 589, that for the year, 1865,6; indeed an average prepared by Principal Griffin for the thirteen years of his headship shows that the equated number was 442. When the pig incident occurred, the number of students for the year was 396. However, these are unimportant items. I was very much interested in his reference to the imprisonment, etc., of the pig in that, my first Winter term in the school. I doubt very much whether any one, except the participants, ever knew who stole the porcine victim and locked him up in the vacant room. I have in my possession a copy of Clark's Grammar, then the text book in that subject as taught by Prof. Asa Boothby, and the last two blank pages are filled with an offhand sketch of what the artist, Lloyd A. Loomis, called a tragedy in four acts, representing the pig slumbering in the vacant room, the one adjoining that in which my cousin, Merwin S. Roe and myself were rooming. Number two depicted the pig wandering about the halls; the third presented the irate Principal at the room window, pig in hands, the fourth and final showed the victim quiescent on the snow below the window. Nothing in my collection of schoolboy mementoes is more highly prized than these random efforts of the lad who gave his life in behalf of his country, a member of the 110th N. Y. Infantry.

The pig story in brief was this. Certain young men, moved by the spirit of mischief, having chloroformed or otherwise drugged a half grown occupant of a sty on a neighboring street, clandestinely inserted him into what, I think, was number 42, on the second corridor. At any rate it was the second room on the East side, south of the recitation room, and almost directly opposite Prof. Boothby's room. The animal, reposing on the bed designed for bipeds enjoyed his snooze till he came to his senses or instinct, when he tumbled off the bed and began to indicate his true piggish nature. Says my cousin, "Do you know that there is a pig in the next room?" "No indeed," is my reply. "Well you go and listen and tell me what you think." Investigation on my part convinced me that he was right and that the room had a quadrupedal occupant. It was during the next recitation period, when I was away from my room, that some one opened the door and the hungry, frightened animal started on his wanderings, fetching up shortly in the room where the Principal was conducting his class. The most kind hearted man in the world, he was so amazed and excited by the situation that chasing the pig out, he pursued him to the open room where there were many indications of the unclean occupancy. Without the forethought which usually characterized the teacher, he used the shortest way possible to get the intruder to the ground. Of course the affair made a deal of talk and some blamed Mr. Griffin, but the majority thought the provocation was great and he was to be commiserated more than censured. A small sum of money placated the owner of the chief performer in the tragedy and the latter attained regular porcine dimensions before the autumnal killing. We boys had our suspicions as to the names of the wicked students; but no disclosures were ever made.

ALFORD S. ROE.

Worcester, Mass., June 16, 1905.

AN ACTIVE REPRESENTATIVE

HON. T. D. LEWIS.

The Hon. T. D. Lewis has made an excellent record in the Legislature, and the electors of his district, Republicans and Democrats, are equally proud of a representative who is alert in their interest and who was able to accomplish so much during the recent session which was "freighted" with Legislative business. It is not surprising that he is so popular in his district. The American people have a keen appreciation of a man of action, and always seek to honor such. That is why Mr. Lewis will receive a unanimous renomination and will be triumphantly re-elected. The following is a summary:

Oswego armory appropriation bill. A law.

Amending the poor law relative to the relief of soldiers. Passed both Houses.

Guy R. Burleigh claim bill. Passed both Houses.

Amending the insurance law relative to Lloyds associations. A law.

Providing for increasing Oswego highway fund. In committee's hands.

Authorizing Oswego to procure lands for hospital. A law.

Relative to funds for the Department of Public Works in Oswego.

Providing for the improvement of the breed of horses. Assembly Committee.

Oswego Department of Works bills. Senate Committee.

Amending insurance law relative to expense of management. A law.

MARRIED.

On Wednesday, at the home of the brides parents in Verona, occured the marriage of Miss Susan M. Joslyn and Mr. Lester Ormond Todd of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Todd are visiting Albany and New York City and after July 1, they will be "at home" to their friends in West Broadway. Mr. Todd is in the employ of the Fort Stanwix Canning Company.

The marriage of Miss Lola Janet Searles of this city to Prof. Frederick William Revels of Syracuse, was consumated in State Street M. E. Church on Thursday evening of last week, and was one of the most brilliant social events of several seasons. Over four hundred invitations to the ceremony had been issued, and it would seem that very few regrets were received.

The sacred edifice had been elaborately decorated for the occasion with palms and roses, and the vows were taken before the altar—palm-embanked—the green leafiness of which was unbroken except by an immense basket of pink roses.

The ribbons were stretched down the aisles promptly at 7:30 o'clock, and at the same hour the bridal march from Lohengrin sounded from the organ, Prof. Arthur V. Eltinge of Syracuse, presiding. The bridesmaids entered from the front of the church and proceeded down the side aisle to the altar; they then met and moved up the main aisle to the church entry, where the bride, her maid of honor and the ushers awaited them. The bridal procession was formed and moved toward the altar in stately manner. The groom and the groomsman, Prof. Carl T. Hawley of Newhulford, Pa., entered the church from the north side, and at the same time the officiating clergyman, the Rev. S. D. Robinson, pastor of State Street Church, and the Rev. Dr. F. D. Leete, pastor of the University Avenue M. E. Church, Syracuse, came from the study at the right of the altar and met the groom and groomsman and there awaited the approach of the bride and maids.

First came the ushers—Prof. Howard Frederick of Boston, Dr. Hermen C. Cooper, Dr. Edwin H. Shepherd, Dr Burton Doust, and Messrs. T. Walker Gaggin and G. Frank Tyrrell of Syracuse. Following them, the bridesmaids, the Misses Lola Lowther, Mary L. Cook, Mary H. Nichols of Syracuse; Flora L. Forsyth of Fulton, Mabelle L. Luther of Olean and Maud Millington of Herkimer, in gowns of white organdie, strewn with pink roses and girdles of pink taffeta. They each wore handsome brooches, the gift of the bride, and carried clusters of bridesmaid roses. The maid of honor, Miss Edna Mitchell, of Hornellsville, was gowned in white lace over pink silk and she carried a shower boquet of pink roses and maidenhair fern. The flower girl was little Miss Margaret Walldorf of Olean, in white mull and pink sash and ribbons, and she scattered roses as she preceeded the bride, leaning upon the arm of Mr. E. R. Redhead, who gave her away.

The bride was very beautiful in her simple but exquisite gown of white messaline over silk, en traine, with waist garnature of duchesse lace. She wore a tulle veil and carried a shower boquet of brides roses and orange blossoms. Her only ornament was a chain and diamond-studded locket, the gift of the groom.

The service which united the young couple was simple but impressive, and each guest in the audience realized the earnestness and sincerity of the bridal pair as they took their marriage vows.

The wedding march from Mendelssohn was played by Prof. Eltinge as the procession left the church.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Redhead in Buffalo street, the guests being received by Mr. and Mrs. Redhead, Prof. and Mrs. Revels and the maids. The home had been beautifully decorated with ferns, palms, cut flowers and asparagus vine, green and white predominating in the dining room. There were guests present from Utica, Olean, Syracuse, Herkimer, Hornellsville and Oneida, a special train being provided at 11 o'clock for their convenience.

A five course wedding supper was served and Kapp's Orchestra furnished music.

Prof. and Mrs. Revels left on the 9:25 train for a bridal trip and as Mrs. Revels descended the stairs, enroute for the train, she dropped her boquet, Miss Mabelle Luther of Olean, securing it. After an extended trip they will return to Fulton for the Summer while their house is in process of construction in Ostrom Avenue, Syracuse, where they will be "at home" after October 1.

The wedding gifts were the rarest ever seen in Fulton. They embraced mementoes from many countries, forming a truly magnificent aggregate and telling in an unmistakable manner of the regard and esteem in which Prof. and Mrs. Revels are held by their multitude of friends.

The exhilarating trip over the majestic Lake Ontario and the beautiful St. Lawrence River, is incomparable. The Arundell connects with the Lackawanna Railroad, and all baggage is checked through to destination. Meals are served with all the luxury and comfort of a first-class hotel.

Slumber Song.

Tom Lawson's Debut as Orator

Famous Exponent of Frenzied Literature About Frenzied Finance to Speak In Kansas on "The Crimes of the System."

KANSAS is a state in which the Standard Oil company does not enjoy much popularity. For that reason it is expected Thomas W. Lawson will get a warm reception when he delivers an address in Ottawa on July 8 on "The Crimes of the System." This is to be Mr. Lawson's debut as a public speaker on "frenzied finance." His magazine articles and newspaper pronunciamentos on this subject have made his name a household word from Maine to California, from the copper mines of the Amalgamated in Montana to the copper mines of Colonel Bill Greene in Mexico, but his forthcoming appearance on the lecture platform is his first in that role. He does not claim to be an orator. Indeed, in his acceptance of Governor Hoch's invitation to address the citizens of Kansas as a Chautauqua assembly speaker Mr. Lawson begged that his audience might be warned not to expect from him any eloquence. "I have never delivered a public address," he said, "and nothing could induce me to place myself in the position I here agree to but my sense of duty to my country and to a section of its people who have had the honesty and the desperate courage to throw their fortunes and their lives in the pathway of the most brutally ruthless band of brigands that ever plundered or desolated the homes of a free people."

It is not supposed that the Bostonian goes upon the lecture platform with any idea of making money, for the opportunities in this direction bear no comparison to what he has already enjoyed in the field of "high finance." Mr. Lawson has always made money with comparative ease and spent it with corresponding freedom. He went into a bank at twelve, and at seventeen he had cleaned up $17,000 on his own account.

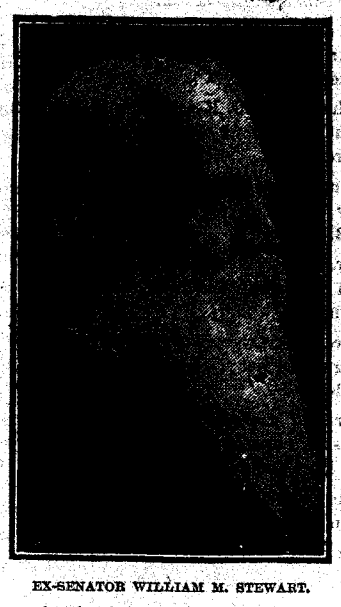
Many persons have speculated on his motives in going into his present campaign against John D. Rockefeller, H. H. Rogers and other representatives of Standard Oil who form what Mr. Lawson denominates "the system." By this phrase he means the coterie of Standard Oil financiers and their methods of operation under various names and through different corporations. It has been averred that Mr. Lawson's campaign was undertaken for his own exploitation and aggrandizement. On the other hand, the author of the "Frenzied Finance" articles has declared:



"I'm a million dollars poorer than I was a year ago, and I'm glad of it."

The versatility of Mr. Lawson, together with his picturesque and vigorous way of expressing himself, has caused the public to take exceptional interest in his character. He is not only a financier, but a yachtsman, an art connoisseur, a gentleman farmer, with scores of blooded horses, fancy cattle and dogs of fine pedigree. His love of outdoor life and of manly sport has kept him young, so that at forty-eight, though his hair is streaked with gray, he has the vigor of youth, is of fine physique, handsome of feature and erect of form. People differ about Mr. Lawson's character and the accuracy of his statements about the operations of Standard Oil financiers, but they agree in admitting his fearlessness, while his neighbors in Massachusetts testify to the ideal character of his domestic relations and his devotion to wife and family. Mrs. Lawson, who was Miss Jeannie A. Goodwillie, is a woman of many social graces. The Lawsons have three homes—a town house in Boston in the fashionable Back Bay district, a suburban home in Winchester, Mr. Lawson's legal residence, and an extensive country estate in Egypt, on the shore of Massachusetts bay. Mr. Lawson's two grown daughters, Gladys and Marion, recently joined the exclusive Vincent club in Boston. It was Miss Gladys who christened the famous yacht Independence, which her father built to defend the America's cup. He has two younger daughters and a son.

STEWART OF NEVADA.

Though an Old Man, He Is Starting Out Again as a Lawyer.

Former Senator William M. Stewart of Nevada was once one of the very rich men of the senate. On March 4 he retired from that body, having been first elected to it forty-one years ago. At seventy-eight he is a comparatively poor man and returned to Nevada to take up once more the practice of law, and, though he is almost an octogenarian, he is full of faith that before he dies he will build up another fortune. Mr. Stewart served in the upper house from 1865 to 1875 and from 1887 to 1905. The veteran statesman was a student at Yale in 1849, when the California gold fever broke out. He caught the fever and threw down his books to go westward and take up a pick. He found some gold in this way, but his fortune came to him chiefly through his practice as a lawyer and his interest in the famous Comstock lode. He lost his money in real estate speculation, depreciation of mining property and in a model dairy which was so model that the milk cost more than could be obtained for it.

The former free silver champion used to be fond of relating how he won the first case he tried after his election as prosecuting attorney in a California mining district. His opponent chanced to be the man who had run against him for the office, an experienced lawyer, who, before the case had gone far, raised a point that was too much for an attorney just out of college. To gain time Stewart badgered his opponent into calling him a liar, then he landed a blow between his eyes and "put him to sleep." Court was hastily adjourned, and Stewart was sent to jail. He sent for his law books and improved the time by reading up on the point in question with the result that when the trial was resumed he was master of the subject. The court sustained his argument, and from that day no one dared question his ability as a lawyer.

The Mantelpiece Bottle Experiment.

You find yourself on a picnic perhaps without a corkscrew and with a lot of bottles, all of them with corks in them. Hardly anybody knows what to do. The solution of the difficulty is, however, it seems, perfectly simple: "Place the bottle, cork downward, upon the edge of an ordinary mantelpiece, steadying it, of course, with the hand. Then with a slight impulse turn it so that it falls upon the ground on its base. Pick it up, and you will find that the cork has started. It is sometimes necessary to repeat the operation before the cork can be withdrawn with the fingers. A first experiment with a full bottle of water tightly corked is advisable. A fall direct from that height will have no desirable result."

The present writer can testify to the efficacy of this "minor art." He had, it is true, to arrange his picnic in an ordinary room so as to have the mantelpiece handy. But there was no difficulty after turning the bottle on its base, "with a slight impulse," in extracting the cork from the ruins. There was no need to repeat the operation.—London Spectator.

KIDNEY DISEASE CURED

A Typical Letter to Dr. David Kennedy's Son About Dr. Kennedy's NEW Medicine, Cal-cura Solvent.

Gilbert F. Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., makes public the following letter from one of the most prominent men in Utica, N.Y., but who does not wish his name used publicly:

My Dear Sir: I received a sample bottle of Dr. Kennedy's new medicine, Cal-cura Solvent, a few months ago. I was greatly pleased with it, and decided to try a large bottle. I therefore purchased three bottles of Mr. Sheehan, and I am pleased to inform you that I have been greatly benefited by it and consider myself cured. If my kidney trouble ever asserts itself again (and I am sure it will not) I will not hesitate to continue the use of this grand medicine. I wish you would send some samples to the parties on the enclosed list. All are suffering from kidney trouble. Yours very truly, Resting the Heart.

"Rest your heart now and then during the day," said an instructor in gymnastics.

"But the heart can't be rested," a pupil objected. "It works incessantly from birth to death."

"It rests the heart to lie down," said the instructor. "Every night's sleep of nine hours saves the heart the lifting of 32,000 ounces of blood. Considerable rest there, eh?

"When we lie down, you see, the heart's action becomes slower—slower by ten strokes a minute. Thus in an hour 600 strokes are saved and in nine hours 5,400 strokes. Each stroke pumps six ounces of blood, and therefore in nine hours the heart is saved the labor of pumping 32,400 ounces.

"The heart often requires a rest."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Quality vs. Quantity.

Hard muscles and strong body do not depend on the quantity of food you eat, but on its perfect digestion and assimilation. When you take Kodol Dyspepsia Cure your system gets all the nourishment out of all the food you eat. It digests what you eat regardless of the condition of the stomach and conveys the nutrient properties to the blood and tissues. This builds up and strengthens the entire system. Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia, belching, sour stomach, weak heart, etc. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for what is sometimes called America's national disease—Dyspepsia—is destined to eventually work a wonderful and lasting benefit to sufferers from this distressing and mind harassing condition Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

The Term "Crony."

Every one uses the term "crony" in the sense of "chum" or "pal," and the phrase "old cronies" has become specially familiar, but it is doubtful whether the original word bore any reference to friendship. The new English dictionary puts down its origin to academic slang and quotes the immortal Pepys for the earliest instances of its use. Quite recently, however, an old letter of a still earlier date has come to light, in which a scholar is described as "content to destroy his body with night labors and everlasting study to overtake his chronyes and contemporaries." From this it would seem clear that the word was a bit of university jargon, used to denote students of the same date and coined from the Greek word that appears in the terms "chronology," "chronometer," "chronograph," that are connected with time.

Bob Moore, LaFayette, Ind., says: "No use talking, DeWitt's Little Early Risers do their work. All other pills I have used gripe and make me sick. DeWitt's Little Early Risers brought the long sought relief. They are perfect." Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Sheridan's Trap.

Any interruption while he was making a speech always caused Richard Brinsley Sheridan considerable annoyance. On one occasion the dramatist showed his displeasure of a fellow member of the house of commons who kept crying out "Hear, hear" every few minutes. During a certain debate Sheridan took occasion to describe a political contemporary who wished to play rogue, but had only sense enough to act fool. "Where," exclaimed he, with great emphasis—"where shall we find a more foolish knave or a more knavish fool than he?"

"Hear, hear," was shouted by the troublesome member.

Sheridan turned and, thanking the honorable member for the prompt information, sat down amid a general roar of laughter.

The Dead in the Sea.

An inquisitive Frenchman has thought it worth while to ask what becomes of the bodies after death of the numberless fish and other living creatures that fill the sea. Of course they all die, sooner or later, and yet it is an occurrence so rare as to be practically unknown for anybody who lives beside or on the ocean to come across the "remains" of even a single victim of the fate that awaits all things mortal. In the profounder depths putrefaction cannot take place, so if the dead fish once reaches those calm, chill abysses he would be preserved until the end of time. Probably, however, no such peaceful repose awaits more than an infinitesimally small proportion of the finny folk, and no great accumulation of lifeless bodies exists at the bottom of the sea. The living eat the dead before they can make the long, slow journey downward. As a matter of fact, extremely few fish, and perhaps none, ever meet what is known as a "natural death." Almost always they are slain and devoured and so put definitely out of the way.

Just What Everyone Should do.

Mr. J. T. Barber of Irwinville, Ga., always keeps a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy at hand ready for instant use. Attacks of colic, cholera morbus and diarrhoea come on so suddenly that there is no time to hunt a doctor or go to the store for medicine. Mr. Barber says: "I have tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy which is one of the best medicines I ever saw. I keep a bottle of it in my room as I have had several attacks of colic and it has proved to be the best medicine I ever used." Sold by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Health and Money.

There is this difference between those two temporal blessings, health and money: Money is the most envied, but the least enjoyed; health is the most enjoyed, but the least envied, and this superiority of the latter is still more obvious when we reflect that the poorest man would not part with health for money, but the richest man would gladly part with all his money for health.

Found a Cure for Dyspepsia.

Mrs. S. Lindsay, of Fort William, Ontario, Canada, who has suffered quite a number of years from dyspepsia and great pains in the stomach, was advised by her druggists to take Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. She did so and says, „I find that they have done me a great deal of good. I have never had any suffering since I began using them." If troubled with dyspepsia or indigestion why not take these Tablets, get well and stay well? For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

First Recorded Yacht Race.

A race across the Atlantic ocean would have seemed a wild romance to King Charles II. when he took a leading part in the first recorded yacht race. "I sailed this morning," says Evelyn on Oct. 1, 1661, "with his majesty in one of his yachts, or pleasure boats, vessels not known among us till the Dutch East India company presented that curious piece to the king, being very excellent sailing vessels. It was on a wager between his other new pleasure boat, built frigate-like, and one of the Duke of York's; the wager, £100; the race from Greenwich to Gravesend and back. The king lost it going, the wind being contrary, but saved stakes in returning. There were divers noble persons and lords on board, his majesty sometimes steering himself." "Yacht," a word new to England in 1660, is Dutch, from "jagten," to hunt, to speed, connected with our "go."—London Chronicle.

The Last American King.

Maximilian and his followers were shut up in Queratero Many powerful influences were at work to save him. Several also did his best. But he made little or no effort to escape. If he had failed as an emperor he could at least face disaster with the courage and the dignity of a right princely nature. Betrayed by the infamous Lopez, tried before a court martial of boys and ordered to be shot, he spent his last days in the discharge of all the obligations of friendship and courtesy. A false report of the death of Carlotta being brought to him in prison he said simply, "One less tie to bind me to the world!" Led forth to his execution and told to stand between two of his generals who were likewise condemned, he surrendered the place of honor to General Miramon in recognition of his courage. The rattle of the muskets marked perhaps the end of all monarchy in the new world. But the bitterest critic of democracy could scarcely desire a gentler figure than Maximilian's to stand before the eyes of Americans as the last representative of aristocracy and of kingship on this continent.—William Garrott in Atlantic.

Just Meandering.

A city girl writes, "It is a fond dream of mine to become a farmer's wife and meander with him down life's pathway."

Ah, yes, that is a nice thing! But when your husband meanders off and leaves you without wood and you have to meander up and down the lane pulling splinters off the fence to cook dinner, and when you meander along in the wet grass in search of the cows till your shoes are the color of rawhide and your stockings soaked, and when you meander out across twenty acres of plowed ground with a club to drive the hogs out of the cornfield and tear your dress on the barb wire fence, when you meander back home to the house, find that the billy goat has butted the stuffin' out of your child and find the old hen, with forty chickens, in the parlor, you'll put your hands on your hips and realize that meandering is not what it is cracked up to be.—Osborne (Kan.) Formic acid has been used for a long time by the Matabele natives in Africa as a cure for malaria and ague. It is taken by them in the form of spiders. How Great Wars Are Called Off

Statesmen the World Over Endeavoring to End the Russo-Japanese Conflict — "Putting It Up to Teddy"—Some Past Indemnities.

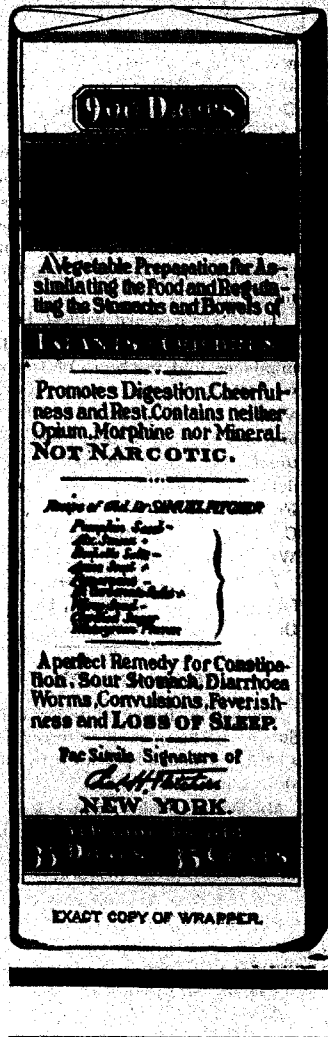
A POPULAR poet says that when anything is to be arbitrated nowadays it is becoming the fashion "to take it to Washington and put it up to Teddy." The Russo-Japanese war is the latest thing to be "put up to Teddy," and now that a start has been made for peace between the czar and mikado interest centers in the principal figures in the negotiations and the precedents that they will have for bringing about terms upon which hostilities may be terminated. The circumstances of this case made President Roosevelt the logical leader of a movement for peace. Great Britain could not take the lead on account of its alliance with Japan. France has been considered in the light of an ally of Russia.

COUNT LAMSDORFF.

Much responsibility is thrown upon the Japanese minister to the United States in this juncture of affairs. Kogoro Takahira, who holds this post, resembles Rudyard Kipling, is very businesslike and democratic and is fond of hunting and outdoor life. He is about fifty years of age and comes of samurai stock, was educated at the best colleges in Tokyo and entered the Japanese foreign office when twenty-six years of age. He was a member of the Japanese legation to the United

AMBASSADOR GEORGE VON LENGERKE MEYER.

States from 1879 to 1883, and has represented the mikado at several European capitals.



The Russian ambassador to the United States, Count Arthur Cassini, is the dean of the diplomatic corps and has a reputation as a most adroit diplomat. His family is of Italian origin, but has been Russian for a century and a half and derives its title from the Russian government. The count is sixty-eight years of age and entered the diplomatic service of Russia at eighteen. He has held many diplomatic posts and previous to coming to the United States was Russian minister at Peking.

It was through the American ambassador at St. Petersburg, George von Lengerke Meyer, that the good offices of President Roosevelt were extended to the Russian emperor. Mr. Meyer was recently the representative of the United States in Italy and was promoted to the Russian embassy shortly after Mr. Roosevelt's inauguration last March. He was born in Boston, in 1858, is a Harvard graduate and was for some years in the Massachusetts legislature. He is very rich and has spent much more than his salary in keeping up the dignity of the United States at foreign courts. Count Lamsdorff, Russia's minister of foreign affairs, is one of the shrewdest diplomats in Europe.

It is expected that one of the most important questions to figure in negotiations for peace will be that of the indemnity to be paid by Russia to Japan. The Franco-Prussian war in 1870-71 lasted nine months, and to secure peace France was compelled to pay an indemnity of $1,000,000,000 to the victorious Germans. This is the largest amount ever demanded as a war indemnity. The United States set a unique precedent at the close of the war with Spain. Although Spain was beaten and sued for peace, this country asked no indemnity and, on the contrary, paid Spain $20,000,000 in consideration of the cession of Porto Rico, Guam and the Philippines. Japan received $185,000,000 as indemnity from China at the close of the war with that nation; but it was of only nine months' duration, and the loss of Japan in money and men was small in comparison with the present conflict.

Early Morning Mail.

Train No. 335 on the R., W. & O. division, scheduled to reach Fulton from Syracuse at 5.33 a. m, began running on Monday morning, and the mail is now delivered at the business houses by the hour of opening. This change of time is of incalulable benefit to our business community and one greatly appreciated. Postmaster Youmans informs the Times that the articles appearing in out-of-town papers to the effect that the early train is a "closed pouch" train, thus shutting out registered mail, is absolutely false The train is a R. P. O. (railroad post-office) train, and a rule of the postal department is that all registered matter must be sent via such trains. Train No. 335 is in charge of a mail clerk and carries registered mail. Train No. 336 from Oswego is also a R. P. O. train and carries registered matter. Postmaster Youmans states further that the railroad company is responsible for the early train; that he asked that mail be sent to Fulton via the train, and that he is pleased to know that it is carried out to the post office patrons at the earliest possible moment after its arrival.

A Country Scene In Tibet.

Here is a description of a country scene in Tibet taken from Colonel L. A. Waddell's book, "Lassa and Its Mysteries:" "From every hamlet the cottagers had swarmed out into their fields and were busily plowing and sowing in the glorious sunshine, forming pleasing bits of bright color. The men were plowing with oxen gaudily bedecked with plumes of wool dyed glowing scarlet and blue, with long throat tassels of dyed yaks' tails and harness of jingling bells, while close behind the plowers came the gayly dressed women as the sowers, scattering broadcast the seed from their baskets. Most of them, men and women, were humming snatches of song in their light heartedness. Among the tall poplar trees imbedding the homesteads, neatly picked out with red ocher and whitewash, and among the pollarded willow bushes fringing the irrigation canals, flitted rosefinches, fieldfares, hoopoos, pert tits, cinnamon sparrows, shy doves, warblers and thrushes, all blithely nest building."

HAMILTON—LEWIS.

Miss Edith Hamilton will Be United in Marriage This Evening to Mr. Victor Case Lewis.

This Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock in Zion Episcopal church, the marriage of Miss Edith Hamilton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Hamilton, and Mr. Victor Case Lewis, son of Hon. and Mrs. T. D. Lewis, will be solemnized.

The church has been converted into a veritable rose garden and looks most attractive in its decoration of palms and pink roses, the altar being concealed behind a bank of floral beauty. Mrs. Torney will play soft music as the guests are assembling, and as the bridal party enters the edifice she will play the bridal march from Lohengrin. The bridal party will enter from the First street entrance, the ushers, the Messrs. Walter Jewett, William Forsythe, David VanBuren, Ward Eastman, I. C. Gary and T. R. Tetley, leading. Next, the six bridesmaids, the Misses Irene Ballantyne and Adeline Ballou of Boston, Mass., and Marguerite Case, Clara Piper, Manette Webb and Jane Waugh of this city, gowned all in pink, to carry out the rose wedding idea. Their dresses are of pink silk mull over pink taffeta and they will wear pink mull hats and carry huge boquets of bridesmaids roses.

The maid of honor will be Miss Sara Lewis, sister of the groom, who will be gowned in white point de sprit over taffeta, and she will wear a picture hat of white lace, with ostrich plumes and pink roses for trimmings. She will carry pink carnations.

Little Miss Zulma Allen, a neice of the bride, will act as flower girl and she will wear white mull, and will scatter pink roses as she perceeds the bride down the aisle.

The bride will enter leaning on the arm of her father. Her gown is an elaborate combination of white crepe de chine over white taffeta, en train, with trimming of Duchesse lace. She will wear a tulle veil and orange blossoms and will carry a shower boquet of bride's roses. Her only ornament will be a diamond and pearl brooch, the gift of the groom.

As the bridal party approaches the altar, the groom, his best man, Dr. Murney Lewis of New York City, and the officiating clergyman, the Rev. A. H. Grant, will enter from the sacristy and await their coming The beautiful ring service will be used in the linking of the two young lives, starting out under most auspicious circumstances

As the bride and groom leave the church, Mendelssohn's wedding march will be played by Mrs. Torney.

A reception will follow the ceremony at No. 172 S. Third street. The guests will be received in the home which has been lavishly decorated in pink and white flowers, by Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton, Hon. and Mrs. T. D. Lewis, the bride and groom, the maid of honor and the bridesmaids. Webb's orchestra will furnish music during the reception hours.

A large tent has been erected upon the spacious lawn and in it the wedding supper will be served. The grass has been carpeted and the tent has been elaborately embellished with pink ribbons, flowers, candy sweet peas, hearts, etc. The bridal party will sit at a round table which will be placed in the center of the tent. The young couple will leave on the evening train for an indefinite sojourn in the Adirondacks. The bride will wear a going away gown of green Panama cloth with hat to match.

The young couple are exceedingly popular with all classes in this city where Mr. Lewis has resided all his life. Miss Hamilton came to Fulton from Boston about a year ago, and in that time she has gathered around her a large circle of friends, all of whom are bestowing earnest good wishes upon them. They have been literally showered with magnificent gifts by their friends, among which are a chest of silver from Dr. and Mrs. C. R. Lee; a cut glass punch bowl with silver mounted reflector from Mr. Lewis's co-workers in the resident State engineers office, and a Dutch picture in massive brass frame from the Young Ladies' Cooking Club.

The happy couple will be "at home" to their many friends on September 6—13, at No. 133 S. First Street, where they will reside

Enright—Carroll.

This Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Church of the Immaculate Conception will occur the marriage of Miss Mae Enright of Oswego and Mr. Frank Carroll, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. James Carroll of the West side. The bride will wear a gown of white silk mull over silk, with lace trimmings and she will carry white roses. She will be attended by Miss Mary Cavanaugh and the groomsman will be Mr. Fred Carroll. After the ceremony a wedding supper will be served to the immediate relatives at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Donovan in West First street and later the young couple will leave for Bennington, Vt., on their bridal trip. They will occupy the upper flat in the VanSanford house in West First street, upon their return to this city.

MARRIED.

Thursday at two o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David E. Morse, No. 13 Jackson street, Miss Carrie Belle Morse and George Victor Green were united in the holy bonds of wedlock by the Rev. I. D. VanValkenburgh of the First Methodist church. The ceremony was performed between two huge bouquets of peonies, behind which were banked, in profusion, stately palms and ferns, arranged by Florist Hatcher. The wedding march from "Lohengrin" was played by Miss Bertha Metcalf, of Groton, N. Y., a neice of the bridegroom. The bride was attired in a beautiful traveling gown of taffeta blue silk. She was unattended. After the ceremony had been performed the bride and bridegroom were besieged with congratulations. Light refreshments were served. Gifts of cut glass, silverware and furniture—numerous, valuable and beautiful—were showered upon the bride; the employes of the Adler store presented a mahogany table, and the firm of Adler & Son's a check for a substantial sum of money. The bridegroom's gift to the bride was a pearl pendant. On the 3:35 east bound train on the Central the newly wedded couple left that afternoon for visits to Boston and Worcester, Mass. On their return home they will stop at Poughkeepsie to witness the inter-collegiate regatta. They will start housekeeping at once upon their return, and will reside at No. 10 Stewart street.

Those who were present from out of town were: Miss Mary McCowatt, Ravenswood, Ill.; Mrs. Walter L. Morse, Chicago; Miss Margaret Green, Fulton, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Green and daughter, Leslie, Syracuse; Miss Bertha Metcalf, of Groton, N. Y.

The bride is one of the popular and attractive young ladies of the city, and the bridegroom has become possessed of a host of friends, he being the well known window trimmer for the firm of Adler & Son. It is the desire of all the friends of each that their cup of happiness may be ever filled to the brim.—Amsterdam Recorder—Democrat.

[Mr. Green is a son of the late Samuel Green, and has a multitude of friends in this city who will join the Times in hearty congratulations and best wishes for a happy and prosperous wedded life.]

Pathfinder Field Day.

Field Day on the island on Friday was attended by the largest crowd of the season. It had been decided to vote upon changing Field Day from Friday to Wednesday afternoon, but the vote, which stood 31 for Friday to 12 for Wednesday, decided the day for the present, at least.

"ORIGIN OF OUR FLAG."

Miss Lillian Bunn Awarded Prize By Local Chapter, D. A. R., for Best Essay.

Every nation has its flag. From the mast-head of every ship and over most public buildings floats this national ensign. The flag is not only the sign of a nation's sovereignty, but it stands for the principles and aims of the nation; and a people's attitude toward the flag indicates their attitude toward the nation which it represents.

While our thirteen colonies were subject to great Britain, they worked and fought under her flag; but when they rebelled against her dominion a different banner became necessary. There were many and various flags among the colonies, but none that could be used to represent a union of all. In 1775, Congress sent a committee, headed by Benjamin Franklin, to consult Washington in regard to the needed flag. These colonies were fighting to maintain a principle, and, as yet, had no idea of independence from Great Britain. A flag that united the British emblem with some distinctive feature of its own could best indicate their aims and their relations to the mother country. Such was the flag chosen by this committee. So, in order to understand the origin and development of our national flag, we must look briefly at the history of the British emblem.

The original flag of England was a red perpendicular cross, the cross of St. George, on a white ground. The flag of Scotland was the white diagonal cross of St. Andrews on a blue ground. Each county retained its individual flag until 1707, when Great Britain adopted a "union" flag for the Empire. This ensign was mainly red, but in the upper left corner was what was known as the Union Jack, which consisted of a union of the crosses of St. George and St. Andrews on a blue field. This was the standard of Great Britain at the time of our separation from that country.

In the flag adopted by Franklin and his committee, the union of crosses was retained in the upper corner but the red field of the British flag was replaced by thirteen stripes, alternately red and white, typefying the thirteen colonies. This was called the flag of the United Colonies of America. It has been claimed that the idea of stripes had its origin in the coat of arms of the Washington family. But stripes had been used in other flags and though we like to think that our national flag bears such a relation to the family of "The Father of his Country" it is uncertain that this influenced the committee to decide in favor of stripes.

This flag was raised January 2, 1776, over the camp of the Continental forces at Cambridge. There is reason to believe that Paul Jones was the first man to float a similar flag from a man-of-war, and soon after the Declaration of Independence, "The Reprisal," commanded by Capt. Wickes, carried this flag into the harbors of the Old World.

But this was not a true American flag. It was only a modification of the British standard. After the Declaration of Independence the United States sought a flag that would bear no direct relation to the Union Jack. In 1777, the American Congress, in session in Independence Hall in Philadelphia, adopted the following: "Resolved, That the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation." Thus the Union Jack was discarded and our flag became distinctly American.

Today, one of the interesting features of the historic city of Philadelphia is the Betsy Ross museum at 239 Arch street. This was the homestead of Elizabeth Ross, a widow living in the city in Revolutionary days. For several years, Mrs. Ross had been employed in making government flags, and to her General Washington carried the plan of the new American ensign. In the back room of her house General Washington, Robert Morris and Colonel Ross discussed with her the details of the flag, and decided that the thirteen stars should be placed in a circle to indicate that the union was without end. The five-pointed star was adopted because it could be most easily cut. After this plan the skillful fingers of Betsy Ross fashioned the first flag authorized by Congress for the American nation.

The first flag of stars and stripes ever raised in victory was hoisted over Fort Stanwix above five British standards captured at Oriskany. It was a rude affair, hastily constructed out of a white shirt, an old blue coat and some red flannel. But it told the tired soldiers of the glad news of the victory at Oriskany, August 6, 1777.

In the development of our flag the nation has never departed from the idea of stars and stripes, but the number of each has been changed. When Kentucky and Vermont were admitted to the Union, Congress ordered that, after May 1, 1795, the number of stars and the number of stripes should each be increased to fifteen. It is interesting to note that this flag of fifteen stars and fifteen stripes was the one used in the War of 1812. And this was the "Star-Spangled Banner" that floated from the bombarded Fort McHenry, telling to the anxious American prisoners on board the British vessels that the fort had not fallen, and inspiring one of them, Francis S. Key, to write that immortal poem which stirs the heart of every American.

But it soon became evident that the number of stripes could not be increased to represent the rapidly-growing union. So, in 1818, when we had twenty States, Congress passed a law that the stripes be reduced to thirteen to represent the original thirteen States, but the Union should be represented by twenty stars, to be increased as new States were added. Star after star has peeped forth in the blue, telling the story of our nation's growth, until now the field is radiant with a constellation of forty-five stars.

Our flag then is little more than a century and a quarter old. But what a history has it seen! It cheered the despairing patriots at Valley Forge; it was with them at Brandywine and Germantown; it led them to victory at Stony Point; it celebrated the surrenders at Saratoga and Yorktown; it waved in victory over the defeated "Mistress of the seas;" blood-stained and shattered, it came through the terrible four years of civil strife to wave over a united North and South and, later, to rescue from oppression its weaker neighbors. Though it is in war that we are most apt to glorify the flag, yet it has attained its greatest and noblest triumphs through successive years of quiet prosperity and progress, while it has waved peacefully over a people, who, in a little more than a century have grown to rank with the first nations of the globe.

"There is the national flag! * * * It has been called a 'floating piece of poetry;' and yet, I know not if it have any intrinsic beauty beyond other ensigns. Its highest beauty is in what it symbolizes. It is because it represents all, that all gaze at it with delight and reverence. It is a piece of bunting, lifted in the air; but it speaks sublimely, and every part has a voice. Its stripes of alternate red and white proclaim the original union of thirteen States to maintain the Declaration of Independence. Its stars, white on a blue field, proclaim that union of States constituting our national constellation, which receives a new star with every new State. The two, together, signify union, past and present. The very colors have a language which was officially recognized by our fathers. White is for purity, red for valor, blue for justice; and all together—bunting, stripes, stars and colors, blazing in the sky, make the flag of our country; to be cherished by all our hearts, to be upheld by all our hands."

Won His Point.

Joseph Jefferson used to tell an interesting story of how his father and company were rescued from a distressing predicament in Springfield, Ill. Arriving there, they used the last of their funds in building a small theater. There was a religious revival in the town, the leaders of which not only denounced the players, but persuaded the town council to impose a heavy license upon the "unholy calling." All the actors were in despair when they were visited by a young lawyer, who offered in the interest of fair play to have the license fee reduced. He appeared before the council and in an eloquent speech filled with logic and pathos and interspersed with anecdotes which raised roars of laughter won his point. The lawyer was Abraham Lincoln.

Why He Was Well Shaken.

Nursing of the sick in rural Scotland is primitive. The Dundee Advertiser relates that a physician left for a patient a bottle of physic whereon were the words "Before taken to be well shaken." On paying his next call the doctor found that the poor fellow had been taken in hand by a stalwart son and at intervals vigorously shaken from head to foot before the next "teaspoonfuls" were administered. "Don't ee see, sir," explained the young fellow on being remonstrated with, "if father ge hap' fro' sleepin' hisself away an' go on drinkin' physic he can't never die."

Something Wrong.

The bishop of Worcester, on alighting from a train at Paddington, asked a porter to see after his luggage.

"How many articles are there, sir?" asked the porter.

"Thirty-nine," replied the bishop abstractedly.

The man came back and said he could find only two.—London Sporting Times.

In a recent article on Americans an English writer gives the following as a characteristic American after dinner story, its subject being a politician in bathing: "All at once a shark, a man eater, was coming the other way and swam up squarely in front of him. They eyed each other for a moment, and then the shark—blushed and sped away."

Great Things Yet to Be.

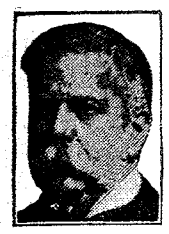
The world is only beginning. We have done nothing, said nothing, sung nothing. The history of the past is the history of one empire at a time. Now several empires must compete together—among them, that miracle of conquest and greater miracle of slow becoming, set dispersedly about the world, but linked together, grasped and held by the embracing sea, our own ocean state, "imperial Britain, mighty and aware." The world will yet know greater men than Caesar and Napoleon, deeper passion and wider humanity than Shakespeare's, a music still more elemental than Wagner's, a sadder soul than Schopenhauer's, a more triumphant intellect than Nietzsche's, beauty more enthralling than Helen's.—John Davidson in London Outlook.

Eton and Harrow.

One of the Eton and Harrow school cricket matches recalls an amusing incident. Eton had a monotonous series of wins for some years, and one day the Harrow captain received the following:

Oh, ye boys of Harrow school,
Of cricket ye have no knowledge;
It is not cricket, but the fool,
You play against Eton college.

The Harrow school poet was hunted out and commanded to send a fitting reply. This clever response made him famous:



If, as you say, we play the fool,
No wonder we were beaten,
For at that game no other school
Could e'er compete with Eton.

Docility In Dogs.

Will people who talk about dogs ever learn to differentiate between intelligence and docility? The word "intelligent" is used almost universally in talking and writing, when people really mean docility—i. e., the readiness of the animal to accept instruction. Now, as in human beings, docility is likely to be an evidence of second rate intelligence, and the degree of intelligence is likely to appear when the animal is doing things on his own hook. It makes no great difference, but to the man who tries to think accurately the constant parade of an obedient animal as one of exceptional mental ability is painful.—Joseph A. Graham in Outing.

GEORGE WESTINGHOUSE.

THERE are few men of such versatility as George Westinghouse, one of the three trustees who were chosen to vote the Equitable Life stock recently controlled by James H. Hyde. It has been said that he is a man with a hundred thousand horsepower inside of him, so marvelous is his energy. He is engineer, inventor, manufacturer and financier. He has an army of about 25,000 men in his employ. He not only invents things himself, but he superintends invention by others. He takes technical students from the colleges every year and sets them at work in his factories. Those who show inventive capacity he puts at work on the details of problems he wishes solved. The first great invention of Mr. Westinghouse was the air brake. He had a hard time getting it into use. He took it to Commodore Vanderbilt, and it is related the bluff railroad magnate dismissed him with the remark that he had not time to listen to a fool who expected to stop a train with air. At last he got a chance to try the invention on one train on a small country line. It so happened that the air brake had not been in use fifteen minutes before a bad accident was avoided through its aid.

Mr. Westinghouse, says World's Work, was playing whist with some friends one evening. After one of the deals he did not pick his cards up, but kept drawing on a piece of paper before him. The others watched him curiously, remarked that they were ready to proceed and then waited and waited, unable to understand why he should pay no attention to them. Suddenly, with a flash of triumph in his eye and exultation in his voice, he cried out: "Brown, I've got that natural gas meter fixed! There it is. It cannot fail to work successfully." And, picking up his cards, he asked, "Whose turn is it to play?"

Jack London, author of "The Call of the Wild," is an ardent Socialist and recently joined with John Graham Phelps Stokes, the settlement worker, and others in issuing an appeal to college students to make a study of Socialist principles. London has just bought a fine place on the Pacific coast, and it is rumored he will soon marry a western belle who is also literary. He is now at work on a serial for the Harpers. On his last visit to New York London was introduced in a cafe to a musician.

JACK LONDON.

"I, too, am a musician, in a small way," London said. "My musical talent was once the means of saving my life."

"How was that?" the musician asked.

"There was a great flood in our town in my boyhood," replied London. "When the water struck our house my father got on a bed and floated with the stream till he was rescued."

"And you?" said the musician.

"Well," said London, "I accompanied him on the piano."

Not long ago Lieutenant Ulysses S. Grant was detailed for duty at the White House, and as he is over six feet tall, handsome and of soldierly bearing, he at once attracted attention. One night when the Marine band was rending the air with ragtime melody a stranger pointed to the young officer and asked an usher who he was. Three times the usher roared the name into the stranger's ear, the blasts from the band outdoing him every time. Then as the usher raised his voice to its superlative pitch the music suddenly ceased and left him shouting, "Lieutenant U. S. Grant No. 3."

Justice Morgan J. O'Brien, another of the trustees who will vote the Hyde stock in the Equitable society, was named but a few days ago as presiding justice of the appellate division of the New York state supreme court in the first department. He succeeds in this position the late Justice Van Brunt. Judge O'Brien is a jurist whose record is so high that in 1901, at the expiration of a fourteen-year term, he was reelected to the supreme court without opposition, his name being on Democratic, Republican, Citizens' Union and other tickets. He was born in New York in 1852, educated in the public schools, St. John's college, Fordham, and the Columbia law school, was admitted to the bar in 1874 and in the Hayes and Tilden campaign of 1876 was prominent as a Democratic speaker. He was corporation counsel of New York in 1886 and in 1887 was first elected to the bench of the supreme court of the state. He married a sister of the noted politician and capitalist John D Crimmins.

JUDGE O'BRIEN.

Colonel J. M. Guffey, the Pittsburg oil operator who discovered the Neodesha oil fields in Kansas, tells a story of two Americans who were discussing the ingenuousness of Irish wit while visiting Ireland. One of the gentlemen approached an Irishman walking along the road and inquired of him, "If the devil came along here, who would he take first, you or me?" The prompt reply was: "He would take me. He is sure of you at any time."

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge is usually in evidence at the commencement season and takes much interest in his own alma mater, Harvard. He graduated from that institution in 1871, and just twenty-four years later his son George Cabot Lodge, took his bachelor's degree from Harvard also. The son has literary talents, like his father, and is a contributor to leading magazines.

SENATOR LODGE.

The senator is noted for his wit. He often visits a lunch room in Washington which both houses of congress are wont to patronize. On one occasion, finding his usual seat occupied, he chose one at another table, where, as it happened, a new man had been installed as waiter.

"Bring me a piece of Washington pie and a glass of milk," said the senator, giving his usual order.

In a few minutes the darky returned, bearing a piece of chocolate pie, whereupon the senator laughingly said, "I want George Washington, not Booker."

The negotiations for peace between Russia and Japan initiated by President Roosevelt threw important duties upon the shoulders of Sir Charles Hardinge, British ambassador to St. Petersburg. The English government was sounded by Mr. Roosevelt before he offered his services in bringing Japan and Russia to an understanding, and it devolved on the representative of King Edward at the court of the czar to keep himself in close touch with all parties to the negotiations. It is only a short time since Sir Charles had a difficult and delicate matter on his hands in connection with the firing on British fishermen by the Russian Baltic fleet. It then became his duty to present to Count Lamsdorff, Russian minister for foreign affairs, the British note demanding redress for the unprovoked action of the fleet. Sir Charles is a youthful looking man of forty-six, and before his appointment as ambassador to St. Petersburg was assistant undersecretary of state for foreign affairs. He has been twenty-four years in the diplomatic service and was at one time charge d'affaires at Washington. His wife, who was the Hon. Winifred Sturt, is a daughter of the late Lord Alington. She is a beautiful woman and was a favorite with Queen Victoria. She is a close friend of both the czarina and dowager empress, and plays the violin with remarkable skill. It is said her costly Stradivarius has contributed much toward maintaining harmony between the courts of St Petersburg and St. James.

SIR CHARLES HARDINGE.

Secretary Leslie M. Shaw, who is getting into training for the campaign of 1908 and hopes to win the support of the conservative, or stand pat, element in his party for the presidential nomination, is noted for his shrewdness. He is never at a loss for an apt reply or a story to the point. He has a homely way that makes him a favorite with the common people. A short time ago the secretary of the treasury extended the glad hand to a caller whose face he recognized, but whose name had slipped his mind for a moment. The secretary was not abashed, nor did he hesitate. He sized up his man as one of the kind he could dare to be familiar with, and when he took his hand he held on to it and led him over to the window. He began with one of his homely tales of "a man back in Iowa" who had forgotten the name of a caller and in a moment had his visitor convulsed and giving his name and errand in the most jovial mood imaginable, entirely forgetful of the fact that his personality at their previous meeting had not impressed the secretary sufficiently for him to be remembered. Then the secretary began to tell of the tricks of the politician—with whom he never admits kinship or interest. He said he was often reminded of the habit of Governor Holcomb of Indiana, who used to ask every man he met, "What time is it?" and, when told, would pull out his own handsome imported Swiss $500 timepiece and proceed to set it in accordance with the information. For years he did this, and the subtle flattery of accepting without question the accuracy of the individual timepieces which nine men out of every ten pride themselves on possessing, was quite sufficient to give him wide popularity in his state.

world which were baked before the beginning of the Christian era. One of them was unearthed at Pompeii and is about 2,000 years old. It is circular in form and still bears on one of its sections the name of the baker. The other loaf is of triangular shape and is supposed to have been made over 4,000 years ago, or about 2500 B. C. It was found among the debris of the royal temple at Dei-el-Bahri on the Nile and was exhibited in London before the Society of Arts. The loaves go to show that baking was a fine art even in those faraway days. It remains for the archaeologists to discover whether the bakers of those times kneaded their dough and cut crackers, biscuits and cookies by machinery and whether there were flour trusts and bakers' unions then.

Mr. J. Riley Bennett, a chemist of Brown's Town, Jamaica, West India Islands, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The Gift of Gardens.

God Almighty first planted a garden. And, indeed, it is the purest of human pleasures; it is the greatest refreshment to the spirits of man, without which buildings and palaces are but gross handiwork, and a man shall ever see that when ages grow to civility and elegancy men come to build stately sooner than to garden finely, as if gardening were the greater perfection. I do hold it, in the royal order of gardens there ought to be gardens for all the months in the year, in which, severally, things of beauty may be then in season.—Lord Bacon.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

CAPE COD NOVELIST.

Joseph C. Lincoln, Creator of "Cap'n Eri," an Old Salt's Son.

It was a roundabout way by which Joseph C. Lincoln, author of "Partners of the Tide," just published, got into fiction writing. After completing his education in the schools of Boston Mr. Lincoln entered a banking house, intending to rise to eminence in the world of finance. But he found it hard to develop any enthusiasm over keeping books and footing up long columns of figures, and, having some natural talent for drawing, he determined to study art. He entered the class of a well known illustrator and for some time made pictures and enjoyed himself. It was not work to pursue this vocation, but money was slow in coming. In company with another student he rented a small studio in Boston, where he made a great many drawings and sold one now and then. It was a trip into Bohemia which he counts one of the pleasantest experiences of his life. In order to help pay studio rent Lincoln occasionally wrote a verse or humorous sketch and illustrated it and sent it to a publisher. Finding that these contributions were more marketable than the drawings alone, he began to give them more serious attention. Then he was offered the position of associate editor of the Bulletin, the official publication of the League of American Wheelmen, and his humorous contributions to this journal were widely quoted and brought him to the attention of magazine editors.

Two years ago Mr. Lincoln determined to write a novel, and the resolution took form in "Cap'n Eri," which immediately won friends and has passed through many editions. His success led him to devote himself with greater zeal to a second book. "Partners of the Tide" shows the same love for the salt water that the author evinced in "Cap'n Eri." He comes naturally by this trait, for he was born in 1870 in Brewster, Mass., a typical Cape Cod town, the home of many retired sea captains, and his father was a ship captain, who died at sea the same year that saw the birth of the author of "Cap'n Eri." His mother's ancestors followed the sea, so that all of the author's early associations had to do with that element.

They were giving a reception to the battle scarred hero.

Cuban Diarrhoea.

U. S. soldiers who served in Cuba during the Spanish war know what this disease is and that ordinary remedies have little more effect than so much water. Cuban diarrhoea is almost as severe and dangerous as a mild attack of cholera. There is one remedy, however, that can always be depended upon as will be seen by the following certificate from Mrs. Minnie Jacobs of Houston, Texas: "I hereby certify that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy cured my husband of a severe attack of Cuban diarrhoea, which he brought home from Cuba. We had several doctors but they did him no good. One bottle of this remedy cured him, as our neighbors will testify. I thank God for so valuable a medicine." For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

The Old Man Cactus.

Nature indulges in an occasional joke. There is found growing in the desert region of North America a species of cactus known to botanists as Pilocereus senilis, or the "old man cactus." There is in this plant a wonderful resemblance to a human head covered with gray hairs. The plant is slow of growth, and small specimens are more frequent than large ones. The plant is covered with long white hairs, which completely hide the body or stem of the plant. These hairs are frequently gathered into locks, adding to the resemblance of the frowsy head of an old man. Plants known to be twenty-five years old are but a few inches in height, yet specimens are found which are twenty-five feet tall and a foot in diameter, representing, it is believed, the growth of several hundred years. In these gigantic specimens of "old man cactus" the term "old" is quite the most appropriate part of the title.

His Seidlitz Powder Cartridge.

How a man's life was saved by a common seidlitz powder is described by a German physician, Dr. Franck, who was called to treat a man who had swallowed a large piece of tough meat which stuck in his gullet. As it was impossible to dislodge the meat by natural means and as the patient's condition was critical, the doctor tried the efficacy of the gas which is generated when the constituents of a seidlitz powder are mixed. He directed the man to swallow the two halves of one of the powders separately, and the resulting pneumatic pressure, aided by the man, who shut his mouth and closed the nasal passages, was sufficient to drive the piece of meat out of the gullet into the stomach.

Making Wives Happy.

"It seems to me that the way to make a woman happy is to give her all your sympathy and affection," says Dr. Edward Brooks in Rochester Herald. "As for overlooking any faults, a man ought not to see any faults in his wife. If it does happen that there are a few very patent ones—and I suppose there are some women who are not exactly angels—a man ought not to see them any more than he sees the spots on the sun when it is shining brilliantly in the heavens, and he ought to remember that no matter what disillusions he may experience after marriage it was he himself who undertook the responsibility of taking to himself a young woman that he promised to love and honor."

Hidden Treasure In England.

In England when hidden treasure is found the law requires the coroner to hold an inquest over it. Formerly it was a coroner's duty to hold an inquest in case of a burglary. A statute of Edward I. decrees that "when coroners are commanded by the king's bailiffs or by the honest men of the county they shall go to the places where any be slain or suddenly dead or wounded or where houses are broken or where treasure is said to be found and shall forthwith command four of the next towns, or five, or six, to appear before him in such a place."

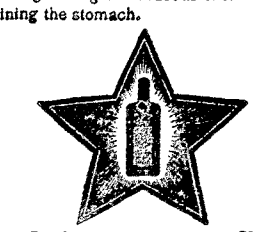
In Search of a Lodging.



There is a story of a home loving farmer who started for the west and came home "the second night." This was a question of sentiment. But another man, quoted by the Philadelphia Ledger, had a more practical reason for seeking cover. He had been hired by a close fisted farmer, who believed in burning the candle at both ends. The first morning the new man was called at 3 o'clock. About fifteen minutes later he came downstairs with his bag in his hand.

"Ain't you goin' to work?" asked the farmer in surprise.

"No," was the disgusted answer. "I'm goin' to hunt up some place to stay all night."

He would fill the office he aspires to with credit to the taxpayers and electors. Mr. Hilton of Orwell, who is Mr. Tooley's opponent, is conducting a clean and vigorous campaign. Both candidates stand square on everything, according to the gospel rule, without a shadow of turning.

DAUGATERS AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

Portion of the Historical Report of Kayendatsyana Chapter Given at Annual Meeting.

An event of more than passing interest in the history of Fulton took place January 28, 1904, at the home of Mrs. James Vincent on Rochester street where a few of the patriotic ladies of the city assembled for the purpose of organizing a Chapter of Daughters of the American Revolution, Mrs. Vincent having been made Regent some time previous by the State Regent, Mrs. W. S. Little of Rochester. That most charming lady being present on this occasion, an informal reception was held, giving the ladies an opportunity to meet their State Regent, Mrs. Vincent, Chapter Regent, extended to Mrs. Little a welcome to Fulton, to the homes of the Daughters, and especially to this occasion. Mrs. Little called the meeting to order, stating the purpose of her visit here was to organize a Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, the object of said organization being:

1. To perpetuate the memory of the spirit of the men and women who achieved American Independence by the acquisition and protection of historic spots, and the erection of monuments, by the encouragement of historical research in relation to the revolution and the publication of its results; by the preservation of documents and relics and the records of individual service of Revolutionary soldiers and patriots, and by the promotion of the celebration of all patriotic anniversaries.

2. To carry out the injunction of Washington in his farewell address to the American people: "To promote as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge, thus developing an enlightened public opinion and affording to young and old such advantages as shall develop in them the largest capacity for performing the duties of American citizens.

3. To cherish, maintain and extend the institutions of American freedom; to foster true patriotism and love of country, and to aid in securing to mankind all the blessings of liberty; and to teach the same to those additions to our country's population, of subjects of despotic nations, so imbued with hatred of government, lest in time be substituted license for liberty, anarchy for law and order, and thus compass the fall of the mightiest Republic the world has known.

Mrs. Vincent presented the sixteen Daughters who were already accepted members of the National organization, all of whom were present except Mrs. Sinclair of Lysander. The Regent, by virtue of her office, was empowered to appoint officers for the first year, which she did as follows: Mrs George C. Webb, First Vice-Regent; Mrs T. D Lewis, Second Vice-Regent; Mrs. G. G Chauncey, Recording Secretary; Miss H.S Osborne, Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. C. J. Bacon, Registrar; Miss Alice Senenck, Historian; Miss Elizabeth J. Osgood, Treasurer; Mrs. John Harvie, Chaplain.

After appointing the various committees the Chapter was declared organized by Mrs. Little, who gave a very interesting address. Mrs. Nellis M. Rich extended greetings from Odondaga Chapter, also presented their appeal that all Real Daughters be pensioned. The first vote of the new Chapter was an endorsement of the appeal which was presented at the Thirteenth Continental Congress in Washington, April 1904.

It was the desire of the Chapter to adopt a name that had some historical significance in connection with our own locality, and KAY—EN—DAT—SY—ON—A was proposed by Mrs C. J. Bacon and later approved by the National Board at Washington. The relation between this name and Fulton is that at Fort Stanwix in 1784 the Onondaga Indians ceded their lands, with certain reservations, to the state of New York. This treaty, which is the foundation of the title of lands of a large part of Oswego County, including Fulton, was signed by Governor Clinton, the state Commissioners, the Chiefs of the Bear, Deer, Elk, Wolf, Turtle and Beaver clans of the Onondagas; also by two chief governesses, or principal women, of the tribe, and by Kayendatsyona, chief Governess of the Senecas.

At the first monthly meeting it was moved and carried that the "American Monthly Magazine" and "Spirit of '76" should be kept on file in the city library at the expense of the Chapter. In March it was decided to give two prizes in the High School, one for the best standing in American History, the other for the best essay on some patriotic subject given by the Chapter In April a committee was appointed to purchase a colonial clock to be presented to the city hospital by the Chapter. A committee was also named to locate Revolutionary soldiers' graves and make preparations for Memorial Day.

The May meeting was devoted largely to the report by our Regent of the Thirteenth Continental Congress, it being especially interesting on account of the laying of the corner stone of Memorial Continental Hall. This monument of the Daughters of the American Revolution, which is a tribute of gratitude to the builders and defenders of our great Republic, the expense of which will be about one half million dollars, is the only building of its kind in the world built by women. It is American women who build it; American genius planned it; American material that rears it to the sky and it pays tribute to pioneer American womanhood in the same degree that it pays tribute to pioneer American manhood. Here, for the first time in the history of the nation, are the names of private, sailor, general, and admiral, fro a Washington and Perry to the drummer boy and the powder monkey, entered in the same roll of honor and their services recorded and published

The first memorial service ever held in Fulton for Revolutionary soldiers was observed in Kayendatsyona Chapter, D. A. R., May 31, 1904. The notices printed in the city papers, asking for information regarding the resting place of Revolutionary heroes, met with but few responses, but by diligent search it was found that

Mid mouldering root of tangled weed,
In many a country churchyard lie,
The men whose unrecorded deeds,
Have stamped our nation's destiny.

In this case not all were so fortunate as to have been sepulched in a churchyard, only about one half of those on our roll having been cared for or marked by anything more substantial than wood, now long since decayed. The resting place of some was where now turns the noisy wheels of our large manufactories, or in our busy streets; others lie where the sod has been turned many times by the thrifty husbandman. Of the latter number we find the name of one who, as the first member of Assembly from this district helped to frame the laws of this, the Empire state, and one who, having a brilliant military record, showing faithful service from January, 1777, to April, 1783, receiving several commissions, was a personal friend of Governor Clinton, and was also the first Judge of Oswego county. Is it not time someone made an effort to rescue these honored names from oblivion?

We praise the present stock and men,
But have we ever thought to praise
The strong, still, humble lives that ran
The deep-cut channels of those days?
Beneath the tottering slabs of slate,
Whose tribute moss and mold efface,
Sleeps the calm dust that made us great,
The true substratum of our race."

Flags and flowers were placed on those graves that could be designated. The names of the thirteen heroes were printed on white cloth, mounted on wire hoops, and these wreathed in garlands of evergreen, were placed on an arch made for the occasion This, with flowers and Betsy Ross flags, made a very impressive appearance. The exercises which were held in Mount Adnah were opened by the Regent, who made appropriate remarks. After singing the national anthem prayers were offered by Rev. W. L. Sawtelle, followed by an excellent address by the Rev. James Vincent Flowers were then placed on the graves of Aaron Fish and Joseph H. Perrigo, the only Revolutionary soldiers buried in Mount Adnah known at the time. This was probably the first time either flag or flower had ever been placed upon these graves in recognition of the heroes who lie therein. Those who were present will not soon forget the impressive services or the picture of the patriotic group, all under umbrellas, some standing on rubber blankets, not unmindful of much greater inconveniences suffered by these, our benefactors.

Public Library Subscriptions.

The balance of the subscriptions for the Carnegie library site and furnishings are now due and should be paid at once to Treasurer Arvin Rice, who has the list of subscribers. It will greatly lighten the labor of the trustees if all who have subscribed will kindly hand the amount to Mr. Rice. It will also save the expense of a collector.

The trustees expect to let a contract in a few days for the stacks and furnishings of the Library and need the money that they may purchase to the best possible advantage. Work on the Library building is progressing favorably and Fall will see it ready for occupancy.

It is hoped there will be a prompt response to this appeal.

False Alarm of Fire.

The fire department was called out about 10 o'clock on Saturday evening by a false alarm from box No. 59. The indicator registered box No. 29, but when the department reached Taylor Bros. Knife Works, they found the box had not been disturbed. Chief Waugh went to box 59 and found the alarm had been sent in from there. An alarm from box 32 was sent in on Monday but no fire could be located. The alarm system seems to be in a very defective condition, requiring considerable overhauling. It is to be hoped that the miscreant who sends in the false alarms may soon be apprehended by the police as it is expensive work for the city.

Property Owners, Attention.

Cheif of Police Ross requests all property owners, especially of unoccupied buildings, to exercise especial precautions on Monday and Tuesday next, July 3-4, to guard against fire. The Police will use extreme vigilance but the cooperation of each individual is requested, that our city may not be visited by conflagrations.

Green Cocoanut Milk.

A dweller in the tropics says: "For a delicious early morning drink I recommend you to try the milk from the green cocoanut. Cut off the top of the nut with a sharp knife, pour the contents into a glass, and you have a drink fit for a king. The cocoanut must be cold. When in Singapore I was a bit seedy and consulted a doctor. Part of his prescription was cocoanut milk first thing in the morning. I took to it most kindly and often wish now that I had a chance of repeating that portion of the cure. Where the cabbage palm grows one has a good vegetable at hand—the heart of the head of the tree. In removing this the palm is killed. This growth is not bad eating raw, as I found when out hunting once. We fed on the palm and wild honey."

Milk Producers Association.

On Thursday about 200 members of the Milk Producers Association met to discuss a proposition received from a New York Company to take a portion of the Nestle Food Co.'s plant and to sign contracts with the farmers for their milk supply. The Board of Directors of the Association has appointed a committee to confer with the Company and, if disirable, to enter into a contract with them.

Miss Marjorie Bailey of Rome is the guest of Mrs. A. Wettengel, who tendered her a yachting party on Saturday evening.

The Misses Elsie, Jennie and Hazel Guile and Ethel Patterson and Mr Charles R. Bennett left on Tuesday noon for Madison where they attended the Lee-Clifford nuptials on Tuesday evening. The party was chaperoned by Mrs. Frank Rumsey.

The Times is indebted to Mr. Lehman Babcock for some exceedingly delicious strawberries. It is not exaggeration to say that anything grown on the Babcock property is of a superfor grade, as nothing less would satisfy the genial owner.

Messrs. Harvey McMurchy, George S. Lewis and C. W. Hobbie have gone to Indianapolis, Ind., to participate in the American Handicap shoot to take place in that city, as delegates from the Hunter Gun Club.

A pasteurizing plant will be established in Pulaski by October 1, and it is expected that the farmers will receive a good price for their milk. When in operation the company will employ about twenty hands at the factory. Milk stations will be established along the railroad from Oswego to Pulaski.

Mr. and Mrs. James P. Carroll on Wednesday evening gave a variety shower at their home in West Second street for Miss Mae Enright whose marriage to their son, Mr. Francis Carroll will occur this Wednesday. There were about 200 guests present and the gifts were numerous and beautiful. Supper was served.

The Fort Stanwix Canning Company is doing up strawberries. The number of hands employed is increasing all the time and the factory is a busy place, night and day. Under contract with the Fort Stanwix Company is the following acreage: Peas, 325 acres; corn, 1500 acres; beets, 50 acres and about 12 acres of strawberries. The Company has a large cultivated acreage of their own surrounding the factory just west of the D. L. & W., station.

The Misses Helen Parmiter, Mayne Bread, Jessie Bradley and Mary Draper of this city and Bessie Gere of Oswego, left on Thursday for a ten weeks European trip. They sailed from Montreal, on Saturday on the Dominion line Steamer, Kensington for Liverpool. Their itinery will include England, Scotland, Belgium, France, Switzerland and Italy. The party will sail from Naples in time to reach Boston on Sunday, Sept. 17, to resume duty in their various schools.

Some Hired Men With Big Salaries

They Get More Money Than President Roosevelt — Noted Railroad Presidents and Life Insurance Officials Who Are Well Paid.

PAUL MORTON.

THE salaries paid to their head men by the big corporations of this country make the salary paid to the chief executive of the American republic look small. There are several hundred men in the United States who draw larger salaries than President Rdosevelt. Some of them have large incomes from other sources in addition to their stipulated salaries from corporations. Besides these are the men whose incomes from their business or investments mount into the hundreds of thousands or even millions. John D. Rockefeller, president of the Standard Oil company, receives a salary of $25,000, but his total income is said to be more than a hundred times that sum. The corporations which pay the largest salaries to head officials are the leading railroads, the leading life insurance companies, the big trusts, the transportation syndicates and the biggest of the banks.

The income of corporation lawyers varies a great deal from year to year. The largest single fee ever paid a lawyer for conducting a single case is believed to have been received by William Nelson Cromwell for his work in connection with the Panama canal. He is said to have been paid a fee of $2,000,000 for his work in that connection. James B. Dill is said to have received a fee of $1,000,000 for settling the suit between Andrew Carnegie and H. C. Frick. W. D. Guthrie is understood to have received $1,000,000 for breaking the will of the late Henry Bradley Plant. These are believed to be the largest single fees ever paid to lawyers in this country.

society come to the neat sum of $260,000 a year. James W. Alexander has drawn $100,000 as president and James H. Hyde the same sum as vice president, while Gage E. Tarbell's envelopes called for $60,000. The reorganization of the affairs of the company recently brought about has placed Paul Morton, who has resigned as secretary of the navy, at the head of a committee in virtual control of the society, and it is supposed that he will eventually become its president and succeed to a salary of $100,000. As head of the navy department and member of Mr. Roosevelt's cabinet he drew but $8,000 a year.

James Hazen Hyde, in addition to drawing $100,000 as vice president of the Equitable, has drawn $26,000 a year from two other companies in which he has held office, and his opponents in the society have alleged that he made considerable money also out of syndicates organized for investment of the Equitable surplus. Mr. Hyde is a bachelor of twenty-nine and son of the founder of the Equitable, the late Henry B. Hyde. He is a coaching enthusiast, an officer of the French Legion of Honor, an ardent admirer of French literature, a director in over forty corporations and a member of some twenty clubs.

Richard A. McCurdy, president of the Mutual Life Insurance company, draws a salary of $100,000 per annum. He is seventy years old, but is still a hard worker and usually is at his desk from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. He is a Harvard graduate and at one time practiced law with Lucius Robinson, who was afterward governor of New York. He became attorney of the Mutual Life in 1885 and rose to control of its affairs.

John A. McCall, president of the New York Life Insurance company, receives a salary of $75,000 and puts in long hours at his desk. He was born in 1849 and from early life has been in some way connected with the insurance business. He is a director in many corporations and has a splendid country seat at Long Branch.

Leonor Fresnel Loree, who recently retired as president of the Rock Island railroad, got a salary in that position of $75,000 a year. He was born in 1858 and educated at Rutgers college and began his railroad career in 1877 as a member of the engineering corps of the Pennsylvania road.

Stuyvesant Fish gets $60,000 as president of the Illinois Central. He is a son of the late Hamilton Fish, secretary of state under President Grant, was born in 1851 and educated at Columbia university. His wife is a leader in the Four Hundred. The family have several homes, one of them a villa at Newport and another a New York residence which reproduces the famous Doges palace of Venice.

James J. Hill receives a salary of $75,000 as president of the Great Northern railroad. He was born in a log cabin in Canada in 1837 and has been a great factor in the development of the northwest.

Charles S. Mellen, president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford road, receives $50,000. He is the railroad man whose common sense words on the subject of capital and labor were quoted by President Roosevelt in a message to congress. He is fifty years old and began his railroad career at eighteen in a humble clerkship.

JAMES W. ALEXANDER. ($100,000)

The Sloping Floor.

The architects of a new building recently completed and which extended from one street through to another found a difference of thirty inches in the street levels of the two thoroughfares. Steps at either end of the building were regarded unfavorably, and so it was decided to build the first floor on an incline. At first sight this slope was not noticeable, but the clerks discovered it in the most unthought of way. Several of them were comparing notes on the all absorbing question of socks one day, and one of them remarked: "I can't seem to get socks any more that wear well. Mine have holes in with one day's use."

"That's odd," said another salesman. "So do mine, and they never used to."

Others echoed the experiences, and finally the solution was offered by the department superintendent, who said this was due to the man walking on an incline so much. "Your socks are all right," he said, "but they won't stand the wear incident to traveling up and down hill all day."—New York Mail.

Jefferson's Prayer and Poultice.

Joseph Jefferson was suddenly taken ill once while visiting at the home of a friend. The wife of the friend whose hospitality he had enjoyed became alarmed over his condition and, being of a religious turn of mind, wished to instill in the mind of the actor her belief in the necessity for spiritual contemplation. A call to his room for the purpose of applying a poultice gave her the much desired opportunity.

"Mr. Jefferson," she said, nervously shifting the poultice from one hand to the other, "for your sake, for the sake of your friends, your family, I—I would like to pray for you."

The actor listened attentively, and his answer came slowly. "Yes, madam," he said, "you may—for my sake, for your sake, for everybody's sake—but for heaven's sake put on that poultice!"—Boston Herald.

KIDNEY DISEASE CURED

A Typical Letter to Dr. David Kennedy's Son About Dr. Kennedy's NEW Medicine, Cal-cura Solvent.

Gilbert F. Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., makes public the following letter from one of the most prominent men in Utica, N.Y., but who does not wish his name used publicly:

My Dear Sir: I received a sample bottle of Dr. Kennedy's new medicine, Cal-cura Solvent, a few months ago. I was greatly pleased with it, and decided to try a large bottle. I therefore purchased three bottles of Mr. Sheehan, and I am pleased to inform you that I have been greatly benefited by it and consider myself cured. If my kidney trouble ever asserts itself again (and I am sure it will not) I will not hesitate to continue the use of this grand medicine. I wish you would send some samples to the parties on the enclosed list. All are suffering from kidney trouble. Yours very truly,

Bankers Like Mohammedans.

A swarthy man drew $500 out of the saving fund, and the cashier said on his departure:

"If all our depositors were like that gentleman our concern would soon become rich. Murad Ali is an Indian, a native of Calcutta, and his religion forbids him to take interest on money. He has had a savings account with us for twelve years. His interest altogether has amounted to $700. But he has never accepted a cent of it. It has all flown back into our coffers again.

"All Mohammedans are like Murad Ali. They won't take interest on their money; hence India, I think, must be a grand country for the banking business, and how glad our bankers would be if Mohammedanism were to spread a little!"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Quality vs. Quantity.

Hard muscles and strong body do not depend on the quantity of food you eat, but on its perfect digestion and assimilation. When you take Kodol Dyspepsia Cure your system gets all the nourishment out of all the food you eat. It digests what you eat regardless of the condition of the stomach and conveys the nutrient properties to the blood and tissues. This builds up and strengthens the entire system. Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia, belching, sour stomach, weak heart, etc. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for what is sometimes called America's national disease—Dyspepsia—is destined to eventually work a wonderful and lasting benefit to sufferers from this distressing and mind harassing condition Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

A Wonderful Voice.

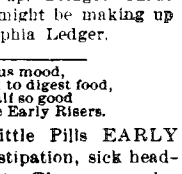
Lablache had the most magnificent bass voice ever known to the lyric stage. It had a compass of two octaves, from E flat below to E flat above the bass staff. He was a man of prodigious size and strength, and his voice was proportioned to his physical dimensions. Nothing was able to overcome or drown it, and through the tones of the largest chorus it boomed out as lustily as though alone. More than once he broke a window pane by the strength of the vibrations caused by his monstrous voice.

Short.

Mrs. Housekeep—You're always up so early, Bridget, there's lots of your work you might get done before any of the family gets up. Bridget—Thrue for ye, ma'am. I might be making up the beds.—Philadelphia Ledger.

If in kind of bilious mood,
You wish an aid to digest food,
No other pill is half so good
As DeWitt's Little Early Risers.

The famous Little Pills EARLY RISERS cure constipation, sick headache, biliousness, etc. They never gripe or sicken, but impart early rising energy. Good for either children or adults. Bob Moore, LaFayette, Ind., says: "No use talking, DeWitt's Little Early Risers do their work. All other pills I have used gripe and make me sick. DeWitt's Little Early Risers brought the long sought relief. They are perfect." Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.



Tipstaves.

Tipstaves, otherwise known as "old Charlies," "Bow street runners" and "Tom tits," were formerly used in England by officers of the law, or police in private clothes, to show their authority. They were generally carried up the sleeve or in a pocket conveniently at hand, and the officer would draw his tipstaff and touch the person to be arrested on the shoulder and say, "I arrest you in the name of the king," just as now a policeman produces his warrant. They were generally made of wood, mounted with brass or silver and tipped with a brass, ivory or carved wooden crown, whence the name tipstaff was derived. They varied in size from five to nine inches in length. The men who carried them were also called "Bow street runners." The last survivor died in 1894 at the age of eighty-five.

A Skin Game.

"Things are not always what they seem," said an officer of one of the big leather companies the other day at a gathering of leather men. "Once upon a time there were six good little goats in a field. They died young, like all good little goats with good skins, and the fellow who was responsible for their death shipped those skins to a tannery. When they came out the skin of one little goat was an elephant's hide, that of the second little goat was a monkey skin, that of the third was a sealskin, the fourth a sea lion, the fifth a green frog skin and the skin of the sixth came out a beautiful walrus hide."—New York Times.

Enterprise.

An English paper contains the following enterprising advertisement:

JAMES ——,
OYSTER MERCHANT.
Two dozen best oysters can be obtained for 2s. 6d.
Should death be proved to have occurred through eating same, a decent funeral guaranteed.

Just What Everyone Should do.

Mr. J. T. Barber of Irwinville, Ga., always keeps a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy at hand ready for instant use. Attacks of colic, cholera morbus and diarrhoea come on so suddenly that there is no time to hunt a doctor or go to the store for medicine. Mr. Barber says: "I have tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy which is one of the best medicines I ever saw. I keep a bottle of it in my room as I have had several attacks of colic and it has proved to be the best medicine I ever used." Sold by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Glamour of the Footlights.

Mary Anderson Navarro talked also a good deal about the stage and told me that no one who had not lived behind the scenes could have any idea how utterly, hopelessly wearisome it was to live in a world where all things from the sun and the moon downward were shams.—Grant Duff's "Notes From a Diary."

Beginning of the Trouble.

"Yes," said Breezem, who happened to be in a reminiscent mood, "during my younger days I sowed the wind, but later"—

"Well, what happened later?" queried Mrs. Breezem.

"I married you," continued the alleged head of the matrimonial combine—Chicago News.

Found a Cure for Dyspepsia.

Mrs. S. Lindsay, of Fort William, Ontario, Canada, who has suffered quite a number of years from dyspepsia and great pains in the stomach, was advised by her druggists to take Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. She did so and says, „I find that they have done me a great deal of good. I have never had any suffering since I began using them." If troubled with dyspepsia or indigestion why not take these Tablets, get well and stay well? For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Meals in the Dark Ages.

Few references can be found as to the manner in which a meal was served and eaten during the dark ages. As near as we can learn, the soup was put in a big bowl with ears, called a "porringer." There was seldom a spoon for each person. Those who had spoons dipped them into the porringer, and the liquid was carried directly to each mouth. Those who were without spoons drank their soup from the porringer, holding it by one of the ears, or else borrowed a spoon of their neighbor. The meats were placed in a large vessel in the center of the table. Each person present at the meal picked out with his fingers such bits as he desired. One or two knives answered for half a dozen guests. Those who were without knives borrowed from those who had them. As a rule, the guests at table used their own knives. There is no evidence that napkins were supplied to guests at this period. At any rate, no mention is made of them.

Italian Brigands.

A German gentleman was one evening riding along the public highway near Imola when his horse threw him and bolted. He picked himself up and lighted a match to see what time it was, but found that his watch had stopped. Just at that moment two bicyclists hove in sight, and he went forward, making signs for them to stop, but the men pedaled furiously of sight. About two months after the gentleman was reading an account of travel in Italy when he came across the following passage:

"One evening we had an adventure with a brigand. We were bicycling near Imola, when an individual in a long dusty cloak suddenly sprang from the ground and with a small lighted torch, which he flourished with furious gestures, demanded our watches. We with great agility, but by the skin of our teeth, avoided the ill intentioned fellow and, shouting that we had no watches, made off as fast as we could. Whether followed or not we did not wait to see."—Rome Letter to Pall Mall Gazette.

Man's Vest.

Man has one purely rudimentary garment. The coat and trousers yield to the ravages of toil and time, but the vest ever preserves its pristine freshness. The history of a man's clothes can be written from the old vests stored away in his wardrobe. The coat he wore at graduation and his wedding trousers become but myths, but he can always show you the vests he wore upon those august occasions. The tailor who invents a style of dress that will omit the vest has fortune and fame in store for him.

His Audience Warmed Up.

Hi Tragerdy—Hamm made his debut as a star last night, and I hear his audience was very cold. Lowe Comerdy—Yes; they were at first. Hi Tragerdy—Ah! Only at first? Lowe Comerdy—Yes; then they remembered they had paid to get in, and they got hot.—Catholic Standard and Times.

Yes, It is Quite True

Browning and an Umbrella.

A correspondent writes to the London Chronicle that he once came upon Robert Browning in Piccadilly in lively dispute with a stranger who had carried his closed umbrella over his shoulder or under his arm, with the end sticking out. Browning, walking behind, struck down the dangerous point with an energetic stick. "I always do it," said the poet with just indignation and in no measured tones. The man protested aloud, but Browning explained to the gathering crowd and justified himself fully. No one seemed to know how illustrious was the brawler.

Making Matters Worse.

The English papers tell a quaint story of Lord Leighton, the painter. Two women were looking at his picture of "Helen of Troy." "It is a horrid picture," one remarked to the painter. "I'm sorry, but it's mine," said Sir Frederick, as he then was. "Oh," said the woman, "you don't mean to say you've bought it?" "No; I painted it," was the reply. "Oh," declared the women, "you must not mind what we say. We are only saying what everybody else says."

Thomas F. Ryan, Napoleon of Finance

Career of the New Head of the Equitable Life—A Man of Deeds, Not Words—Born Poor, Is Now a Multimillionaire.

THAT the name of Thomas Fortune Ryan is one to conjure with was amply proved in connection with the recent settlement of the much discussed Equitable Life Assurance society controversy. The outcome showed that a new Napoleon of finance had arisen and that the power of Thomas F. Ryan among money kings was greater than even the best posted men of Wall street had believed. His purchase of the Hyde interest in the Equitable stock gave him a powerful voice in the affairs of that big institution. That he is worth $50,000,000 is generally admitted, but the bald statement of such a fact affords no adequate idea of his potency in the world of business, for his genius for organization and his influence in a large number of leading corporations give him a power that some men who may be his equals in wealth do not possess.

Mr. Ryan is a man of deeds rather than words, and it is his policy as well as his nature to avoid publicity. His career is a typical one. He is descended from Scotch-Irish ancestors who came to this country before the Revolution. Mr. Ryan was born fifty-three years ago on a farm in Virginia. His mother died when he was five, and he went to live with his grandmother at the old homestead. The family had been impoverished by the civil war, and young Ryan as a boy of fifteen sought to straighten out the entanglements of the estate, but the task was too much for the future wizard of finance. He got his first business training as a clerk in a Baltimore dry goods house. Two years after entering its employ the proprietor decided to establish a bank in New York and thought so well of Ryan that he gave him a position in it. This was a fortunate move, for it put him in touch with the great financial interests of the country and awakened his ambition to attain power in Wall street affairs. Two years later he became a member of a brokerage firm and about the same time married Miss Ida M. Barry of Baltimore, daughter of his former employer. The first big transaction in which he figured was the formation of the Richmond Terminal company, by which the southern railroad lines were brought into close working arrangements. His genius for organization and consolidation of capital began to attract notice when in 1886 he associated himself with the late William C. Whitney and brought about the consolidation of numerous small traction lines in New York city into one system, known as the Metropolitan Street Railway company. After that achievement he gradually extended his operations until he brought gas and electric lighting companies in New York under his control as well as traction lines. He crossed the Hudson river into New Jersey and, with his associates and allies, accomplished the consolidation of the street railway lines of Jersey City and vicinity under the name of the Consolidated Traction company. Public service corporations in Staten Island, N. Y., and along the New Jersey coast also fell under his sway. He was the promoter and builder of the Union elevated road of Chicago and developed the present system of electric railways and lighting plants in Milwaukee. Consolidation has been his watchword, and his operations have touched various branches of industry and finance. He brought together and organized interests representing assets of $1,000,000,000 behind the Bank of Commerce of New York, is the vice president of the Morton Trust company and organizer and financial master of the Consolidated Tobacco company. He is a director and important stockholder in several western railway lines.

In personal appearance Mr. Ryan is tall, broad shouldered and good looking, has courtly manners and an engaging smile. William C. Whitney used to describe him as "the most adroit, suave and noiseless man" he ever met. One of his diversions is raising Holstein cattle, and he has kennels containing some of the finest dogs in the world. Mr. Ryan was a leading figure at the last Democratic national convention, and it was due in part to his influence that his friend, Henry Gassaway Davis of West Virginia, was nominated for vice president.

MAJOR GENERAL GILLESPIE.

Services of the Gallant Officer Who Has Gone on Retired List.

Major General George L. Gillespie, who went on the retired list of the army on June 15, has seen forty-eight years of service in behalf of his country. At the time of his retirement he was assistant chief of staff, and he enjoys a reputation as "an officer and a gentleman," which is the goal of a military man's ambition. Major General Gillespie was born in Kingston, Tenn., in 1841 and graduated from West Point in 1862. He lost no time in getting into active service in the Union army. He went to the front with a commission as second lieutenant of engineers and was in charge of a company at the battle of Antietam. After that battle he was busy building and guarding pontoon bridges, building military roads, making reconnoissances in front of the enemy and conducting siege operations. He was twice brevetted for gallantry and received the congressional medal of honor for bravery on the field of action at Cold Harbor.

After the civil war General Gillespie went to New Orleans with General Sheridan as his chief engineer and took a prominent part in the civil and military work of reconstruction of the gulf states and also in the restoration of the republic of Mexico at the time of the Maximilian episode. Since that early period of his career his name has been identified with some of the most important engineering improvements carried out by the federal government. In 1892 he completed the project for the improvement of the lower bay in New York harbor from the Narrows to the sea and in 1894 finished the construction of the first gun lift battery and the first mortar battery designed in this country. He served in the Spanish war, was a member of the court of inquiry which considered the charges as to the furnishing of unfit rations to the troops, and in 1900 was a member of the board of officers which visited Porto Rico to set apart from the late crown lands those needed for military and naval purposes by the United States.

Ball Lightning.

"Ball lightning," says a professor of meteorology, "is the most mysterious form of lightning. It sometimes behaves like a small animal with the most evil nature. Its shape is not always spherical, though generally so. Sometimes it is oval, sometimes it has a flame like a shell. It often looks like an orange and moves so slowly that one can follow it for several minutes.

"Once at Marseilles it entered a house like a ball of fire the size of a plate, struck the feet of a girl who was kneeling, terrified, rebounded to the ceiling, struck her feet again, then the ceiling. After bounding thus three or four times with perfect regularity it finally went through the keyhole.

"One day at Secondigny two boys, one aged twelve and the other fifteen, were playing in the street when they saw a ball like an orange rolling toward them. One touched it with his foot. It exploded, killing him instantly. His comrade was thrown down, but was not hurt."—Chicago Tribune.

The Brotherhood of Mercy.

The "Compagnia della Misericordia" (Brotherhood of Mercy) of Florence includes men of all ranks, who attend by day or night in cases of accident, to carry the wounded to the hospital, or the dead to their burial, to nurse the sick in their homes or to assist at fires, receiving no money or food in any house they visit. The great bell of the tower tolls to call the brothers on duty at the time, and even the grand duke has been seen to withdraw from table and silently respond to the summons. They repair quickly to their chapel by Santa Maria Novella, where their black glazed cotton robes are kept in locked and numbered drawers. "Black stoled, black hooded, like a dream," you may meet the procession at night, masked and of unknown identities, passing along by torchlight with a strange, wild chant, bearing the bier.

Class Night and Commencement.

The class night exercises by the class of 1905, F. H. S., on Wednesday evening, were of a clever and interesting nature, showing both "wit and wisdom." The program (published in last week's Times) was carried out in its entirety. The comedy, "The Doctor," was skilfully presented, the amateur participants impersonating the characters like professionals, receiving many compliments and congratulations over the portrayal.

On Thursday evening the commencement exercises were held and proved a delight to all who attended. The address of Prof Oren Root of Hamilton College on "The making of a nation" was one of the most classical and masterly efforts ever heard in Fulton, and he held the close attention of his audience throughout. Miss Kate Gilbert, as salutatorian and Miss Ida Jewett, as valedictorian, gracefully accepted the class honors.

Regent, Mrs. George C. Webb, in behalf of Kayendatsyona Chapter, D. A. R., presented to Miss Lillian Bunn prize offered by the chapter for the best essay on "The origin of our flag." The essay was so meritorious that we publish it in this issue. Mrs. Webb also presented to Miss Grace Lynch a prize for the best standing in American history during the school year.

Mr. Richard Carr, in behalf of the Board of Education, presented gold and silver medals to the successful prize speaking contestants. The presentation of diplomas was made by Prof. Fairgrieve, and the class yell of '05 was then given in a hearty manner.

The class ball, which was given in Church's Hall at the conclusion of the exercises on Thursday evening, was an exceedingly pleasant event, about seventy-five couple attending.

Choral Society Plans.

The Fulton Choral Society held an important business meeting on Thursday evening of last week, for the purpose of getting its plans in shape for an increased membership and a longer season's work next year. The executive committee reported that the main musical work for a study is to be Mendelssohn's well-known oratorio, "St. Paul", which will be taken up in October and studied throughout the year, and will be prduced the last of next April or the first of May. In addition to this, a concert is proposed for the first week in January, which will consist of a program of miscellaneous works, similar to the concert which the society gave last month.

On recommendation of the committee the society unanimously voted to engage Prof. Grove L. Marsh as the musical director for the next season. Few conductors could have accomplished better work with a new organization than Prof. Marsh has, and his re-engagement makes it certain that the musical direction of the society will be of the best.

The society voted to have honorary members, whose fees will be five dollars per year, and the society will welcome the aid that can be given in this manner by those who are interested in the musical advancement of Fulton. A committee was appointed to secure new members, and any who wish to come into the society either as active or as honorary members, are requested to give their names to this committee, which consists of Richard Carr, chairman; Rev. W. G. Bassett, Mr. Henry Pollard, Miss Leila Church and Mr. Paul Greenwood.

WITH HIS CLASSMATES

President at 25th Anniversary of Graduation.

PRESENT AS A PRIVATE CITIZEN

Is Guest of Bishop Lawrence During His Stay In Cambridge — Visits House of George C. Lee, Father of His First Wife—Rode Through Rain In Unhooded Carriage.

Cambridge, Mass., June 28.—Joining with his former college mates in celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the graduation of their class from Harvard, President Roosevelt returned to his alma mater, not as the chief magistrate of the nation, but at his request, as a private citizen and a loyal Harvard alumnus. Nevertheless the students, alumni and the citizens of Cambridge united in giving him a hearty greeting.

The president's day was a busy one. Arriving in Boston at 6:45 a. m. he was driven to the Cambridge residence of Right Rev. William Lawrence, Episcopal bishop of Massachusetts, where he is being entertained during his sojourn here. Breakfast was served at the bishop's home and among those present were the president's little son Kermit, who came from Groton school, where he is a student, and President Charles W. Eliot of Harvard university.

During the forenoon, President Roosevelt visited the rooms of the Alpha Delta Phi society, the Harvard Stadium and the Chestnut Hill residence of George C. Lee, the father of the president's first wife.

The president was then driven to the Oakley Country club, in Watertown, where the class of '80 held an informal reunion and luncheon was served. A photograph of the class was taken and also a photograph of the members of the class who belonged to the same dining club as the president when they were students.

Returning from the Oakley Country club, the president was driven to the rooms of the Porcelain club, an organization of Harvard students, where he stayed about half an hour. He then returned to Bishop Lawrence's home, where he put on evening clothes and was driven to the Hotel Somerset, in Boston, for the banquet of the class of 1880. It was late in the evening when the party returned to Cambridge.

As the president's carriage was driven out of Bishop Lawrence's yard in the forenoon the rain poured in torrents and several heavy claps of thunder were heard. The president insisted that the hood of the carriage be lowered in order that the people who had gathered to see him might not be disappointed, and though the rain fell heavily the president rode through it apparently not in the least discomforted.

At various points along the streets through which the presidential party passed during the day people cheered him as he rode by. For all their greetings he had a bow and a smile.

The president was accompanied on his drive by a secret service officer and a squad of mounted policemen. After visiting the Stadium the police escort was dismissed temporarily and the president's carriage was unattended from the Stadium to the Chestnut Hill and from thence to the Oakley Country club. President Roosevelt will remain here until 2 a. m. Thursday.

MUST WEAR PRISON STRIPES.

Ballot Box Stuffers Sent to San Quentin Prison.

San Francisco, June 28.—Judge Lawler has sentenced Joseph Rebstock, the convicted ballot box stuffer, to San Quentin prison for three years. The Schmitz administration pull secured petitions for leniency from grand and trial jurors, but the judge disregarded them, declaring that Rebstock had committed the offense with felonious intent.

Rebstock's friends made a desperate effort to induce the judge to send him to the county jail, where he would not wear a striped suit.

Charles Wyman, sentenced to five years in prison for ballot box stuffing, went to San Quentin while his case is on appeal. The sentence of Rebstock marks the third of the corrupt gang which stuffed ballot boxes at the last election in the interest of Mayor Schmitz and Boss Ruef.

Large Mortgages Filed.

Binghamton, N. Y., June 28.—There is a rush here to get in mortgages before July 1 so as to avoid the mortgage tax law. Three mortgages have been filed in the last 24 hours, the largest of which is for $25,000,000 and is given by the United States Message company of Albany to the Knickerbocker Trust company of New York. A mortgage for $15,000,000 was given by the General Transmission company of Buffalo to the Buffalo Loan, Trust and Safe Deposit company.

Asked to Cancel Racing Contract.

Indianapolis, June 28. — Governor Hanley has asked the state board of agriculture to cancel its contract with the Indianapolis Racing association and stop the race meeting which began Monday at the state fair grounds. The governor says that pool selling has annulled the contract. President Niblack of the state board of agriculture issued a call for a meeting of the board at the state house.

DISORDER IN ODESSA.

Collisions With Military In Which Volleys Were Fired by Troops.

St. Petersburg, June 28.—The wave of disorder rolling over Russia has appeared at Odessa, where a general strike accompanied by bloodshed and disorders, has broken out. There were several collisions between the military and the strikers Monday night and yesterday, in two of which volleys were fired by the troops.

In the encounter yesterday several attacks were made on individual policemen. Four hundred armed workmen barricaded a suburb and repulsed the attack of the Cossacks. Reinforcements were sent to the suburb, but the result of their attack on the strikers is not yet known.

A telegram to the Official Agency gives the number of killed and those who died of their wounds at Lodz on Friday as 164. It adds that others were killed Saturday and Sunday and that the complete number of victims cannot be stated definitely. Other accounts give a total estimate of 500 dead at Lodz.

Rumor of Kuropatkin's Death.

St. Petersburg, June 28.—A rumor spread throughout the city last night that General Kuropatkin had been killed. This rumor was connected sometimes with a report that 70,000 Russians had been cut off by General Nogi's army and that Kuropatkin had been taken prisoner.

Nothing confirmatory of these rumors has been received either by the general staff or in press dispatches.

The members of the general staff say that no reports of special importance have been received.

Japanese Steadily Advance.

St. Petersburg, June 27.—A report received from General Linevitch indicates that the Japanese advance continues steadily and that the Russian van posts under pressure are retiring fighting.

SECRETARY HAY'S CONDITION.

He Has Improved Noticeably Since Sunday Night.

Newbury, N. H., June 28.—The condition of Secretary of State John Hay continued favorable after a comfortable day. Dr. Fred L. Murphy of Boston, who came here on a special train Sunday, but who returned home Monday, came back yesterday and remained at the secretary's home last night. Dr. Scudder of Boston, who also arrived on Sunday, went to Boston yesterday, but he will return here today. The physicians decline to discuss the case, but Dr. Scudder said just before his departure that the secretary had passed a pleasant and comfortable day.

The cold, wet weather has proved a slight drawback, but nothwithstanding the dampness, Mr. Hay's condition has improved noticeably since Sunday night.

Mrs. Hay felt greatly encouraged and sent a telegram to Payne Whitney, her son-in-law, instructing him and Mrs. Whitney to sail for Europe as they intended.

Ohio Democratic Convention.

Columbus, O., June 28. — Trains brought delegations from all parts of Ohio to the state Democratic convention, the first business session of which is set for this afternoon. There are only two contests, one for governor and one for supreme judge. The chief candidates for governor are John C. Welty of Canton, John M. Pattison of Clermont county, Judge B. F. McCann of Dayton, Judge S. M. Hunter of Newark, Judge H. D. Heck of Cincinnati and L. T. Neal of Cuthbothe. In the resolutions to be presented, one or two national questions, anti-trust and anti-railroad rebates, may be mentioned, but the state issues will receive most attention.

Resignation of Enginer Wallace.

Washington, June 28. — The announcement of the resignation of John F. Wallace as chief engineer of the Panama canal commission was not altogether unexpected in view of his request some time ago to be allowed to come to this country to discuss affairs with Secretary Taft. Members of the commission did not hesitate to say that his resignation would greatly embarrass the commission in its work and might necessitate the postponement of the meeting of the full commission in September. President Shonts of the commission told his colleagues at their last meeting that he knew absolutely nothing about the reported intentions of Mr. Wallace.

Cashier Held on Bond.

Buffalo, June 28.—Fred R. Green, cashier of the closed Fredonia National bank and director of the state bank of Forestville, was held in $10,000 bonds for the United States grand jury on charge of making a false entry in the books of the Fredonia National bank. It is alleged he made the report to the government showing that there was a balance of $19,700 on deposit in the state bank of Forestville when the Fredonia National bank really owed the Forestville bank $15,000.

Yardmaster Fatally Injured.

Lima, O., June 28.—Pennsylvania train No. 2, the limited eastbound from Chicago to New York, ran into a switch engine with a number of cars in the local yards of that company here at 10:30 o'clock last night. Night Yardmaster Kendrick had a leg cut off and he is believed to be fatally injured. The passenger train did not leave the track and no passengers were hurt, although they were all badly shaken up.

NORWAY'S SECESSION.

Fiery Speeches In Debate In Swedish Rikstag.

PEACEFUL SOLUTION DOUBTFUL

Government Bill Looking to Settlement Referred to Extraordinary Committees In Both Houses—Premier Spoke For Separation With Guarantee For Peninsula's Safety.

Stockholm, June 28.—Both houses of the riksdag elected extraordinary committees to which were referred the government bill looking to a settlement with Norway.

The debates on the bill brought out fiery speeches in which the action of the Norwegian storthing was condemned and the Swedish cabinet severely criticized.

The tenor of the speeches in both houses leaves the impression that the majority of the speakers were of the opinion that a peaceful solution of the difficulty was extremely improbable.

Pastor Waldenstrom, speaking in the house, said the union with Norway amounted to nothing. He said that in Norwegian schools in recent years the children had been taught to hate Sweden and continued:

"I am against war, but it may have to come as a last resort. The government's proposition opens up the probability of war. Its weakness lies in the fact that Norway having broken the union is liable to break treaties."

Baron Kennedy, speaking in the senate, said: "If the king's message expressed his opinion, he has lost two crowns instead of one."

Minister of Justice Berger in the house defended the cabinet and said that Sweden did not wish to force Norway unwillingly into a union. Such action would mean a succession of rebellions which Sweden would have to suppress.

Premier Ramstedt, in the senate said: "After June 7 Sweden had two alternatives—one that of force, and the other to reluctantly accept dissolution. Nobody openly advocates force but some persons advocate a procedure which would ultimately lead to war. The object of war would be to compel Norway to retrace its action, but anger must not blind us to our own interests and our interests are against forcing Norway into any kind of a union.

"A conquered Norway, while of no advantage, would forever be a source of danger. Add to this the horrors of war and their enfeebling results. All argue against the employment of force. If not force, then it is best to assist in the dissolution of the union without harsher conditions than the future safety of the peninsula demands."

ARRESTS AT DELMAR TRACK.

Sheriff Herpel States He Will Stop the Betting Entirely.

St. Louis, June 28.—In view of the fact that following the arrests at Delmar race track, all operations in the betting ring suspended, word comes from Jefferson City that Governor Folk will not call out an armed force to assist in enforcing the anti-betting law Sheriff Herpel stated that he would not only make arrests every day, but would "stop the betting entirely until the courts have passed upon the cases now before them."

Charles Cella, Max Gumperts, Minton Parker and Frank L. Williams under arrest on charge of violating the anti-betting law, were arraigned in the court of Justice Stobie at Wellston. They waived preliminary hearing and were bound over to the grand jury in the sum of $1,000 each.

The case of George Ehrlich was continued until July 11.

MISS GRIFFITH IN PERIL.

Pittsburg Girl Almost Drowned In Chautauqua Lake.

Jamestown, N. Y., June 28. — Miss Elizabeth Griffith of Pittsburg, who is stopping at the Holmes cotage, Point Chautauqua, narrowly escaped drowning Sunday. She was rowing in company with her brother. When a short distance from the steamer dock Miss Griffith and her brother attempted to change seats when the boat capsized.

When Miss Griffith came to the surface she seized the overturned boat but the choppy lage continually washed the waves over her head. When Benjamin Cone and Richard Mueller rescued her she was unconscious and with difficulty she was resuscitated. Mr. Griffith reached the shore in safety.

Exaggerated Story of Indian Massacre

Nogales, Ariz., June 28.—The stories sent out from this place regarding the attack by Yaqui Indians upon the Buenos Ayres ranch in Sonora last Thursday in which over 20 Yaquis and several settlers and their families were said to have been slain are the grossest exaggerations. The only foundation for the reports was a fight occurring at the ranch in which two Indians were killed and Luis Caranza was wounded. There was no attempt at a massacre and no troops were sent out as reported.

The Landlord's Prayer.

In a prayer book of the time of King Edward VI. of England appears the following prayer for landlords: "The earth is thine, O Lord, and all that is contained therein, notwithstanding thou hast given possession of it to the children of men to pass over the time of their short pilgrimage in this vale of misery. We heartily pray thee to send thy holy spirit into the hearts of those that possess the grounds, pastures and dwelling places of the earth, that they, remembering themselves to be thy tenants, may not rack nor stretch out the rents of their houses and lands nor yet take unreasonable fines and incomes after the manner of covetous worldlings, but so let them out to others that the inhabitants thereof may both be able to pay the rents and also honestly to live and nourish their families and relieve the poor. Give them grace also to consider that they are but strangers and pilgrims in this world."

Standing Room Only.

Mark Twain in his lecturing days reached a small eastern town one afternoon and went before dinner to a barber's to be shaved.

"You are a stranger in the town, sir?" the barber asked.

"Yes, I'm a stranger here," was the reply.

"We're having a good lecture here tonight, sir," said the barber. "A Mark Twain lecture. Are you going to it?"

"Yes, I think I will," said Mr. Clemens.

"Have you got your ticket yet?" the barber asked.

"No, not yet," said the other.

"Then, sir, you'll have to stand."

"Dear me!", Mr. Clemens exclaimed. "It seems as if I always do have to stand when I hear that man Twain lecture."

The Fulton Times.

Established 1868. FULTON, OSWEGO COUNTY, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, JULY 5, 1905. Vol. 38. No. 8.

TRUTH ABOUT POSTMASTERSHIP

Last January, when it became known that there would probably be a vacancy in the office of postmaster in this city—the present incumbent having served two terms—the editor of the Times was asked by the men who stand at the head of Fulton's financial and manufacturing interests—who are the largest taxpayers and patrons of the postoffice—to become a candidate for that responsible position, assuring him of their hearty co-operation and support in his effort. The position is one to which any man might reasonably aspire, and the editor of the Times decided to act on the suggestion of these disinterested friends.

The project was laid before the Republican leaders in the county by several reputable business men of Fulton who desired to enlist the services of not only the county, but State officials.

During the past week strenuous efforts have been made by a few to inject the postoffice matter into the ward primaries for the purpose of concealing the real issue from the electors. The farce reached a climax at the Republican primary in the Fourth ward on Thursday evening, when Surrogate S. B. Mead objected to Mr. Thomas Hunter going as a delegate to the district convention for the reason that he believed Mr. Hunter was favorable to the editor of the Times for the postmastership.

Mr. Thomas Hunter's Republicanism has never been questioned. He is always in the forefront for his party's interest, yet never seeks political preferment; he is president of the Hunter Arms Company, of the Battle Island Paper Company, of the First National Bank, etc., yet he was to be denied the privilege of going as a delegate from his ward because he was suspected of having a preference for any one for postmaster—because he choose to be guided by his own intelligence and judgment in arriving at a decision, rather than by Mr. Mead's. So Mr. Mead objected.

Think of it, Republicans! Such a punishment for such a crime (?)

A ballot was taken and the electors decided by a majority of about two to one that Mr. Hunter should go as a delegate instead of Frederick G. Spencer, who was Mr. Mead's choice. This was a signal victory for Assemblyman Lewis and American manhood.

The statement has been adroitly circulated with malicious intent—it was also referred to in the caucus—that Judge Stowell had promised the postoffice to W. E. Hughes. That is a lie, absolute and unqualified. Neither Judge Stowell nor any other man has made such a promise. It is true that the leading Republicans of Fulton have asked Judge Stowell to use his influence with the county and State officials in the matter. Was there anything wrong in that?

But an astonishing revelation has been made since the caucus on Thursday evening, viz.: that the postoffice has been promised by one man to at least four different candidates in the city, while a score or more have been promised the deputyship. This should be pleasing information for those who are interested.

Camera Club.

The Camera Club was organized July 29, 1904, with a charter membership of eight. Its object was for study and mutual benefit. A yearly fee of 50 cents and a camera not smaller than 3¼x3¼ inches are the only requisites for membership. This season, so far, the club has enjoyed two outings, and a third was planned at High Banks for Tuesday, had the weather permitted. These trips are made primarily for the securing of photographs of the many magnificent scenes in which this vicinity abounds. Over eighty views were secured at the outing to Eckett's grove last week, and at twilight Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Boardman served supper to the members on board the launch Wenona.

The club membership now consists of thirty-three active, interested people, who, with the views they will take, will do much to show to the world how truly beautiful is Fulton and her surroundings.

The present members are:

DIED.

Undertaker E. P. Cole was called to Syracuse on Friday morning to take charge of the remains of James Hartigan, aged 39, who died in St. Joseph's Hospital, Syracuse, from the effects of an operation which was performed two months ago. The funeral was held on Sunday at the Catholic Church, and interment was made in St. Mary's.

In Geneva on Thursday occurred the death of Pearl Goodelle, as the result of an operation for appendicitis. The deceased was known in this city, where she had visited her aunts, Mrs. F. C. Ives and Mrs. J. M. Hewitt. She was also a sister of Mr. Harry Goodelle. Mr. and Mrs. Ives attended the funeral, which was held on Saturday.

Dennis, Jr., the eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Proulx, died from diphtheria at their home, Battle Island, on Sunday. The burial was made in St. Mary's on Monday.

Edward F. Gleason, aged 60, died on Monday at his home in West Fourth street. The funeral will be held from the late home on Thursday at 2 30 p.m.

Lizzie B. Kelley, aged 38. died in St. Joseph's hospital, Syracuse, on Monday, from exhaustion following an operation. The remains were brought to the home of her mother, corner Pine and West Second streets, from where the funeral will be held on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, the Rev. Nelson Reynolds officiating. The deceased is survived by her mother, Mrs. Jane Kelly, and three brothers, James of Albany, Dan and Henry of this city.

MAY PURCHASE TANNERY.

Experienced Operators and Investors Desirous of Securing Fulton Plant.

The New York Hide & Leather Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Massachusetts, is negotiating for the purchase of the tannery property on Hannibal street, and are endeavoring to organize a company with a capital of $100,000 to operate the plant. If this plan goes through, the tannery will be operated to its fullest capacity and employment will be given to forty or fifty men. The gentlemen who are back of the enterprise have had wide experience in the manufacture of leather and claim that there is a great demand for the quality of leather that would be manufactured here, and that the prices would be profitable. The parties who are fathering the project expect to sell some of the stock of the new company to Fulton residents.

As soon as the matter takes definite form a special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce will be called to hear and take under consideration any plan that may be proposed.

It would certainly be a great addition to Fulton's business interests if the tannery were operated to its fullest capacity, as the new company proposes.

REPUBLICAN PRIMARIES

Contests for Control of Organization in the Several City Wards--How the Battle Was Fought and the Result.

It has been known to those who have been watching the trend of events political in this city for the past few weeks that a supreme effort would be made at the primaries by a faction of the Republican party to secure absolute control of the organization.

Promises were made to the susceptible and threats were freely indulged in to the more timorous to get them in line for the new regime.

Immediately preceding the primaries in the Fifth and Sixth wards, money was used freely to secure the active cooperation of the indifferent, the boast being made that a sufficient number of voters had been secured in the Fifth and Sixth wards by the opposition to make the "play" perfectly safe. The First ward was already in the hands of the opposition. The Second ward succeeded in maintaining its organization. There was a slight flutter in the Third ward, but a compromise was effected and the colors were lowered.

In the Fourth ward the personality of Mr. Lewis won the day. According to the program outlined he was to be denied the ordinary courtesy of even naming his own delegates to the District Convention, and an additional indignity was offered when he was asked to tacitly consent to Frederick G. Spencer's name being placed on the delegation—he of the alleged "pure judiciary league," who conducted a campaign of vile personal abuse last Fall against his uncle, Judge Stowell. The issues were presented to the electors by Mr. Lewis, who did not mince matters, but recited every incident which led up to the conspiracy, and he won the fight.

The storm broke with all its fury in the Fifth ward, where nearly 200 men were ranged in battle array, and after one of the warmest contests in the history of the city, the opposition won by a majority of fifteen on the chairmanship and delegations.

Fulton is now equally divided between the contending factions, but a vigorous campaign will follow, when the truth will be revealed, and it is sincerely believed that there is sufficient intelligence and stamina in the Republicans of our city to stand up for square dealing and fair treatment.

Delegates were elected in the several wards as follows:

FIELD DAY.

Baraca and Philathea Classes of Baptist Church Enjoy an Outing.

The Baraca and Philathea classes of the Baptist Sunday school held an outing and field day at Baraca park about two miles south of this city last Saturday, the principal feature of the afternoon being a seven inning base ball game in which the side captained by Reuben Parks defeated Captain William Sylvester's team by a score of 11 to 10. Parks and Sylvester were the opposing twirlers.

A large plot of ground, including a good sized grove, has been leased by the Baracas from Elmer Taylor and will be fitted up as a picnic ground. A base ball field, tennis and croquet grounds, as well as a rifle range and trap are to be constructed, while the grove is to be thinned out and rustic benches built for the accomodation of those who do not indulge in the sports.

The Baracas, Philatheas and members of the Baptist congregation, with their friends, enjoyed an outing at the park yesterday, the trip being made in carryalls and on Boardman's yacht, "Wenona." The Baptist Sunday school has accepted the invitation of the Baracas to hold the annual picnic at Baraca park, and the date for the same has been fixed for July 12.

Curiosities About Wood.

The strongest wood which grows within the limits of the United States is that known as nutmeg hickory, which flourishes on the lower Arkansas river. The most elastic is tamarack, the black or shellbark standing not far below. The wood with the least elasticity and lowest specific gravity is the Ficus aurea. The wood of the highest specific gravity is the blue wood of Texas and Mexico. The heaviest of the foreign woods are the pomegranate and the lignum vitae, and the lightest is cork. Four hundred and thirteen different species of trees grow in the various sections of the country, and of this number sixteen, when perfectly seasoned, will sink in water. These woods of high specific gravity grow mostly in the arid regions of New Mexico, Arizona and Nevada.

No Reason For Two Trips.

Patrick's wife was "ailing," and Patrick put on his Sunday best and walked four miles to the doctor's house to tell him about her.

"Now," said the doctor, when he had heard all Patrick had to say and had prepared some medicine, "here is something for your wife. I've written the directions on the bottle and I want her to try it faithfully for a fortnight. Then, if it doesn't relieve her, come to me again and I will give you another prescription."

"Now, doother, see here," said Patrick, standing straight and looking grimly at the physician. "If you have your doubts o' this curin' Mary, as it's ividen you have by the way you spake, why don't you give me first what you're goin' to give me last?"

Torpedo Boats.

Torpedo boats do not ram the vessels against which they operate; they simply discharge self propelling torpedoes which, if they strike the vessel, explode and sink or otherwise damage it. Then, if not sunk by the enemy's fire, the torpedo boat runs away and after taking on more torpedoes is ready for service again. Torpedo boats are built very light and of enormous speed. They cannot resist gun fire and are easily sunk if hit even by comparatively light shot; therefore they operate to best advantage in the night, so that the threatened fleet has to be very wide awake with its searchlights and its light guns.

An Odd Simile.

A Scotch minister who used similes that would bring home to the rough characters around him the truths he sought to impress was once denouncing the ingratitude of man for all the benefits conferred on him by Providence.

"My friends," he said, "look at the hens when they drink. There's not ane o' them but lifts its heid in thankfulness even for the water that is sae common. Oh, that we were a' hens!"

Not Too Much For Our Good.

"The Delight of Mankind."

Titus, the Roman emperor, was entitled "the delight of mankind." Titus' beneficence was unbounded, and it so happened that during his brief reign there was the most urgent need of its exercise. In the first year occurred the great eruption of Vesuvius, overwhelming Herculaneum and Pompeii and ruining numerous other towns and villages. The next year a fire broke out in Rome, which raged three days, causing great destruction, and in the tracks of these calamities followed a dreadful pestilence. Titus dealt out gifts with lavish hand to the houseless and ruined sufferers. He even despoiled the palaces of their valuable ornaments to obtain money for distribution and schemed and planned to furnish occupation for them. He was now the idol of his subjects, the "love and delight of the human race," but, unfortunately for that part of the human race over which he ruled, in the commencement of the third year of his reign he became suddenly ill and died at his patrimonial villa in the Sabine country.

Noted Dead In Trinity Churchyard.

Alexander Hamilton is buried in Trinity churchyard, at the head of Wall street, New York, and the grave is marked by a conspicuous white marble monument near the Rector street station of the elevated road. His wife, who lived until 1854, fifty years after his death in the duel with Burr, is buried beside him. Albert Gallatin, who succeeded Hamilton as secretary of the treasury, lies only a few feet away, and near by is also the grave of Robert Fulton, inventor of the steamboat. Another famous occupant of Trinity churchyard, whose monument is near the Broadway gate, is Captain James Lawrence of the United States navy, commander of the frigate Chesapeake, who fell in battle with the British ship Shannon June 1, 1813, in the thirty-second year of his age. As he fell upon the deck he cried to his subordinates, "Don't give up the ship!"

A Losing Dream.

"I made a nice idiot of myself the other morning," said the commuter, who is paying teller in a savings bank. "My wife was afraid I'd miss my train, and she got me by the shoulder and shook me, telling me that it was time to get up. I got about half awake, and, somehow, I thought I was at my window in the bank with a long line of women awaiting their turn. The one at the window was handing me a check, and, from force of habit, I said:

"'How much money do you want?'

"You know, most women who present checks wan' to draw some and deposit the rest. Well, what do you think the wife did? Quick as a flash came her answer to my 'dopy' question:

"'Five dollars will do.'

"She got it, but I hope I won't dream any more."—New York Post.

An Eccentric Painter.

William Willard, well known as the painter of Massachusetts' governors, was very eccentric in his ways. His special aversion was the attempted purchase of his many old relics of furniture by people of wealth. A New York woman visiting in the vicinity of Sturbridge, hearing that the old artist possessed a beautiful colonial mirror and a rare clock, tried to buy them. Mr. Willard seemed to readily agree to the sale, but when asked when it would be convenient to have them packed replied, "Not until after the funeral." "Whose funeral?" asked the visitor. "Mine," replied Mr. Willard, with a chuckle.

An Early Railroad.

An old inventory of the Mohawk and Hudson railroad, now a part of the New York Central and Hudson River railroad, dated Jan. 1, 1833, gives the following as the total rolling stock of the road at that time: Three locomotives (the John Bull, the De Witt Clinton and the Experiment), three carriages, accommodating twelve passengers each; nine, accommodating nine each; two, accommodating six each, and three, accommodating eighteen each, a total capacity of 183.—Four Track News.

The Change of a Letter.

"Business men should be careful," writes a correspondent of a London newspaper, "to read their typewritten correspondence before committing it to the post. I have received a typewritten letter from a gentleman of German extraction who informs me that he is a 'wholesale tobacconist and cigar imposter.'"

Diplomacy.

"What did papa say?"

"He showed me the door."

"And what did you say?"

"I said it was certainly a very handsome door, but not what I had come to talk about. That made him laugh, and a minute later you were mine."

London's Intensity.

London is the most intense of all cities. New York is noisier; there is more rattle in Paris; in London alone you have that subdued roar, that indescribable murmur which suggests an irresistible volume of life that is deep as well as strong.—Christian.

Under the Chandelier.

When the thermometer goes above that maximum there is no school, whether the month be April, May or September. The children in the insufferable heat are free to bathe in tinkling brooks, to picnic in cool groves or to boat on the wind swept lakes. The Swiss recognize that we can impose no greater suffering on little children than to confine them for long hours at a stretch in an intolerably hot schoolroom. They know that children cannot under such conditions learn a thing; hence the school directors are wise enough by making these heat holidays to save the teachers and the children much misery and much wasted time."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

English Fish Laws.

Fish, because of its tendency rapidly to decompose, holds a peculiar position among foods. In England it is the subject of a special act of parliament. So long ago as 1698 men knew the evil consequences resulting from eating mackerel of uncertain post mortem age, so they passed an act providing that except during the hours of divine service this fish could be sold on Sunday. That act has never been repealed.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy—The Best in Existence.

T. M. Wood, manager of the White County News, Beebe Ark., is a representative southern business man, who does not hesitate in expressing his good opinion of a well known remedy. He says, "It gives me pleasure to recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, having used it myself and in my family with the best results. In fact I believe it to be the best remedy of the kind in existence." Sold by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. For sale by H. C. Names of Note In the News

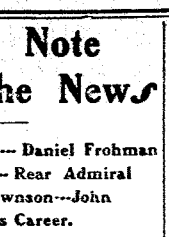
A Joke by the Pope — Daniel Frohman on Playwriting — Rear Admiral Willard H. Brownson—John M. Carson's Career.

POPE PIUS X.

It is not often that the supreme pontiff of the Roman Catholic church indulges in a joke, but Pope Pius X., born Sarto, is very genial and kind hearted, and when he noted during a recent audience given to Herr Schneider, bishop of Paderborn, that the bishop, who had just been introduced, was very nervous, he made a facetious remark that at once put the German prelate at ease.

"Mousignore," said the pope, with a laugh, "we are brothers. Don't you understand?"



The bishop evidently did not, so the pope continued:

"We both belong to the tailor family, Schneider, as well as Sarto."

Schneider is the German for tailor and Sarto is the Italian.

Daniel Frohman, one of New York's leading theatrical managers, recently delivered some remarks about playwriting. "To succeed," said Mr. Frohman, "a play must have snap. Literary men, when they write plays, forget this fact. They create dramas of literary but of no dramatic worth. Snap is everything.

"A literary man asked me the other day to tell him what snap was. I described a play to him—a one act play—that was full of snap.

DANIEL FROHMAN.

"This play opens," I explained, "in a drawing room, with a man and woman seated side by side on a sofa embracing each other passionately.

"Into the drawing room stalks a man with a grip and an umbrella — of course, the husband, unexpectedly returned.

"The husband no sooner sees the couple on the sofa than he whips out a revolver and kills them both—her first, him afterward.

"Then he puts off his glasses, and, looking about him, suddenly gives a great start.

"'Good heavens!' he exclaims. 'I'm on the wrong floor!'"

Senator H. C. Hansbrough of North Dakota has long been the owner of a newspaper. Of late years other duties have prevented his giving it much attention, and he has depended on divers itinerant journalists, says Harper's Weekly.

"I've had some good men in the place, too," the senator once observed to a friend; "men capable of holding an important place on a city daily. Then I have had some who did not altogether make good. I remember one in particular, a man named Linkwood. Linkwood was never satisfied with simplicity. He would refer to an 'equine horse' and in the case of a tramp killed in a railroad accident said that the 'unfortunate man sustained a fracture of the spiral column.' Another of his pet expressions was 'tripping the light bombastic toe.'"

SENATOR HANSBROUGH.

"You probably didn't keep him long," suggested the friend.

"Oh, I didn't mind these so much, but when the daughter of a leading citizen was married and he spoke of the bridal procession 'proceeding down the aisle to the entrancing strains of Mendel & Son's wedding march' I decided that we had reached the parting of the ways."

Brigadier General Frank D. Baldwin, who was recently ordered to Chicago to take command of the department of the lakes, is noted as the only man on the army lists who wears two congressional medals of honor. He won the first in the civil war and the second in fighting Indians, and his achievements in the Philippines caused talk of his being awarded another medal, but the authorities at Washing concluded that two such medals were enough for any man. It was at Peach Tree creek in 1864, when he was a captain of volunteers, that he won his first medal. He led his company in the recapture of the regiment's colors after a hand to hand fight with a much larger command. The second medal was won when he was serving with General Miles in Wyoming in 1878. The Indians were on a rocky hill with steep sides that were covered with ice. It appeared to be impossible to take the place by assault. Baldwin asked permission to make the attempt. "It's death," said Miles, "but you may try."

BRIG. GEN. FRANK D. BALDWIN.

Baldwin placed himself at the head of an assaulting party and went up the hillside in the face of a fearful downward fire. The men could not use their weapons. They could simply cling tooth and nail, and toil upward, with their gallant leader urging them on. The casualties were heavy, but the line moved forward, the summit was gained, and the Indians fled.

Major John M. Carson, who was recently appointed commissioner of manufactures, a new position in the federal department of commerce and labor, is dean of the correspondents' corps at Washington. He has been twice president of the famous Gridiron club, and his friends have numbered the most eminent men in public life during the last thirty years. Born in 1838, he worked as a young man in the newspaper business in Philadelphia, served three years in the civil war and came out a captain. He became a Washington correspondent in 1873, and for thirty-two years he has held a high place in his profession. Major Carson is an authority on most matters of government, but particularly upon finance and tariff. He is also well informed about army affairs, and nearly every president has sought his advice in making promotions of men in the army to be general officers. A competent writer, a speaker who can instruct and entertain, he is one of the most accomplished men among the Washington correspondents.

JOHN M. CARSON.

President Harrison wanted to make Major Carson assistant secretary of war, and President McKinley asked him to be his private secretary, but he declined office on both occasions.

Lew Fields, the comedian, and Julius Steger were standing on the corner of Broadway and Forty-second street, New York, the other day when a stranger accosted them.

"Do these cars stop at the Battery?" he asked.

"If they don't," replied Mr. Fields, "you'll get an awful ducking."

Willard H. Brownson, who for some years was superintendent of the Annapolis Naval academy and has just been made a rear admiral, was the naval officer who fired the shot in the harbor of Rio Janeiro which was heard around the world. It was in the Mello naval insurrection in Brazil in 1894. The insurgent naval force was trying to establish a blockade and threatened to fire on American warships if they insisted on giving to the American coffee ships safe escort to their docks. Brownson was then in command of the Detroit, and he fired a six pounder at the leading Brazilian ship and cleared for action. But no more shots were necessary. The blockade collapsed.

REAR ADMIRAL W. H. BROWNSON.

When a guest of Sir Thomas Lipton some time since the admiral told of another shot he once fired. He said:

"While in command of the gunboat Petrel, about twelve years ago, then lying off Greytown, a monster shark came every day and lay on our quarter. Just how big he was I won't undertake to say, but there was a thirty foot whaleboat at the gangway one day, and when the shark's head was at the prow of that boat he could twist his tail all around the stern. I tried a number of shots at him with a rifle without any visible effect, so one morning I trained a one pounder on the spot where he usually placed his head and told an orderly to notify me when he appeared. I had forgotten all about the matter and was at lunch below deck with some guests when the orderly entered. Raising his right hand in the customary naval salute, he announced with the utmost gravity and as if announcing the arrival of some one of importance:

"'The shark's alongside, sir.'

"When the laugh that followed the rather startling announcement had subsided we all went on deck and found the monster with his head in the range of the gun. I fired. There was a tremendous splashing and a good deal of blood spilled, but the shark disappeared. I never saw him afterward."

His excellency A. J. Nelidoff, who has been designated by the czar as chief plenipotentiary for Russia in the peace negotiations with Japan, now pending, is the Russian ambassador to France. He is a typical Russian in appearance and has enjoyed an unusually successful career as a diplomat. He has represented Russia in Italy, and in 1897 was the Russian ambassador to Turkey. Difficult duties fell to him in this capacity, as the European powers were then urging upon the sultan certain reforms in the administration of his kingdom affecting the status of foreigners. M. Nelidoff was charged with acting as spokesman of the powers in the dealings with the sultan and acquitted himself in a way which reflected credit upon himself and advanced the interests of Russia. He was promoted not long afterward to the French ambassadorship, and the important and often delicate duties that have fallen to him in this connection have been discharged with much ability and discrimination.

M. NELIDOFF.

HELEN F. MEARS.

Gifted Sculptor Who Executed the Statue of Frances Willard.

Helen Farnsworth Mears, sculptor of the Frances Willard statue in the capitol at Washington, received a commission for an important work in sculpture before she had ever taken a single lesson in modeling. Her artistic genius manifested itself very early in childhood. When scarcely more than a baby, she took to making clay figures, which were the wonder of the people living near her father's farm in the vicinity of Oshkosh, Wis.

Before she was nine she modeled a head of Apollo, which was exhibited at the county fair, and when she entered the Normal college at Oshkosh she took drawing lessons, but the art instruction she could obtain there was not extensive. She worked on in her own way, modeling at home. When the artists of Wisconsin were invited to compete for the execution of a piece of sculpture representing the "Genius of Wisconsin" for the Badger State building at the Chicago exposition she entered the contest and won the commission. Before executing it she proceeded to Chicago and took lessons in modeling for six weeks at the Art institute. Her "Genius of Wisconsin," a woman upon a rock with her arm around the neck of an eagle, won a prize of $500 offered by the Woman's club of Milwaukee. With the money this work brought her she started for New York and studied under St. Gaudens, afterward journeying to Paris and studying in the studios of Julien and other sculptors of that center of art.

HELEN FARNSWORTH MEARS.

She is a sister of Miss Mary F. Mears, the well known fiction writer, and the two young women lived together for a time in Italy, studying along their respective lines of work. For some years she has had a studio in New York. Her statue of Miss Willard, which was unveiled in February last, is regarded as a remarkably fine portrayal of the woman whom the state of Illinois deemed worthy of place in the gallery of national heroes, patriots, statesmen and reformers at Washington.

RULER OF MOROCCO.

Mulai Abdul Aziz and His Queer Ways.

France and Germany have been at odds recently over the question of whether the former country should be permitted to exercise a predominant influence in Morocco. The ruler of that kingdom, Mulai Abdul Aziz, needs European assistance to maintain order in his realm and make commerce safe, but the jealousies of the different powers render it difficult for any arrangement to be agreed upon providing for this. Between the plots of his court, the marauding expeditions of bandit chiefs and the schemes of a rival to the throne his shereefian majesty is kept busy.

Nevertheless he does not permit cares of state to interfere with his amusements. He can play a good game of billiards, and in handling an automobile he is almost as venturesome as the young king of Spain. He can do remarkable tricks in riding a bicycle and has about 200 machines in his palaces for his personal use. Grand pianos he buys in wholesale lots, and one of his especial pets is a Missouri mule. Abdul Aziz is twenty-six years old and for a sultan is accounted a progressive ruler.

Child Not Expected to Live from One Hour to Another, but Cured by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Ruth, the little daughter of E. N. Dewey of Agnewville, Va., was seriously ill of cholera infantum last summer. "We gave her up and did not expect her to live from one hour to another," he says, "I happened to think of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and got a bottle of it from the store. In five hours I saw a change for the better. We kept on giving it, and before she had taken the half of one small bottle she was well." This remedy is for sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

KOTARO DATO.

Young Japanese Who Is Studying Art In St. Louis.

Kotaro Dato is a young Japanese who is studying art at the School of Fine Arts in St. Louis. He is considered an artist of much promise and has adopted occidental methods in drawing and painting. Although he has been a student at the art school in St. Louis but a year and a half, he has already won several prizes. In view of the popularity of Japanese productions in America, he expects to remain in this country. Speaking of the difference between American and Japanese ideas of art, Mr. Dato, who is a little fellow four feet six inches in height, says:

"In my country we do much different from America—that is, you have long lines of pictures hanging on the wall for many years; we change according to the season and don't have butterflies and lily ponds on the walls when the snow is on the ground or snow pictures when it's hot."

KOTARO DATO.

An Unmarried Widow.

It would appear that the standard of happiness of at least one African widow in Manhattan had reached high water mark, judging by this advertisement published a few days ago:

Widow, colored, age 34, with high school training, vocalist, excellent cook, desires a husband same age or younger; awful extremely fair, clean, sober, moral and never been married. Address WIDOW.

The following personal, printed in a metropolitan newspaper the other day, deserves a class by itself:

A European gentleman wishes to meet an American who is the typical daughter of all that is most admirable in our age; one gifted with the bold frankness of understanding, the enthusiasm of expectancy, the merry cheerfulness of superiority, the psychical and physical alertness of those of tomorrow; the worldly independence of this optimist must be duplicated; view, matrimony.

Knives For Brides.

The custom of giving knives to brides was formerly a common practice, when it was fashionable for women to wear knives sheathed and suspended from their girdles. A wedding offered an opportunity of presenting something novel or ornamental in the cutlery line, and frequent reference to such presents occurs in the plays of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. In the "Witch of Edmonton," 1648, for instance, the bride is described as wearing "the new pair of Sheffield knives, fitted to one sheath." A list of trinkets usually worn by ladies about 1569 includes girdles, knives, purses and pin cases. In Dekker's "Match Me In London," 1631, the bride says to her jealous husband:

"See, at my girdle hang my wedding knives;
With these dispatch me."

His Musical Ear.

It isn't always best to brag about your gifts. Out on one of the boulevards lives a man who lays claims to a musical ear and plays a little on the piano. Frequently he has criticised his wife for what he called her inability to carry a tune.

"Your ear, if you had a musical one as I have, would show you how to carry a tune," he would say. One day he complained that her piano was out of tune and asked his wife to telephone for a tuner. She decided to test his "musical ear," so that night when he came home from his business she said:

"Will, please try the piano and see if the tuner has done it any good. I haven't any ear and cannot tell, but you can."

The man sat down at the instrument and played a simple tune. "It's all right now," he said. "That fellow did a good job."

His wife summoned up her courage. "Will," she said. "The tuner didn't come today. He's coming tomorrow morning."—Kansas City Times.

Dead Men's Bones.

Alexander the Great, seeing Diogenes looking attentively at a parcel of human bones, asked the philosopher what he was looking for. "That which I cannot find," was the reply, "the difference between your father's bones and those of his slaves."

Trained.

"Don't you think her husband is naturally a gentle, patient man?"

"Sometimes I think he is and sometimes I think she's got him scared."—Houston Post.

Slap an extinguisher upon your irony if you are unhappily blessed with a vein of it.—Lamb.

At the Wrong Time.

"You say your playing created a great deal of talk?" said the friend.

"Yes," answered the pianist, "but unfortunately it was mostly during my performance."

Fishing For Salmon.

Salmon fishing differs so much from trout fishing that it has been said an absolute beginner at fly fishing will learn to take salmo salar more readily than will a trout fisherman who tries the nobler fish after years of practice with the smaller one. This I doubt, but I know that a very different style of fishing is needed. There is really no such thing as "striking" in salmon fishing, and if you keep a tight line and raise your rod as soon as you feel the "pluck" of the fish you will be doing your whole duty, and it will be up to the fish to do the rest. There is no occasion for the swift strike by which one hooks a shy trout inclined to rise a trifle short. The salmon is such a weighty fellow that when he turns to go down after taking the fly his momentum drives the hook above the barb with very little assistance on the part of the angler, provided the line be fairly taut.—Charles A. Bramble in Recreation.

Lost His Decoy.

A western man was describing a banquet that he had once attended in New York.

"I found this banquet interesting," he said, "and I was one of the last to leave. In the cloakroom, as I was putting on my hat and coat, I couldn't help noticing the woebegone look on the attendant's face. The poor fellow appeared worried and sad, and every little while he sighed and muttered to himself.

"'You seem disconsolate, friend,' I said.

"'I am disconsolate, sir,' said the attendant.

"'What is the trouble, sir,' said I. 'Haven't the guests tipped you well tonight?'

"The attendant answered in an excited voice:

"'It's not only, sir, that they haven't tipped me, but they've taken the quarter that I put in the tray for a decoy.'"

How Inventions Are Made.

The great majority of practical inventions are made by a group of men of whom the public never hears. These men are members of one of the most complicated and highly organized of the modern professions. Every great manufacturing concern maintains, under one head or another, an "inventions department," employing men who are paid various salaries simply to develop inventions. They are supplied with every mechanical appliance to facilitate their work. The bills are paid by the company, and every invention they make is assigned to the company "in consideration of salary and one dollar." And it is these unknown men, grappling with the everyday, practical problems of great manufactories, who make most of the inventions of immediate commercial value.—World's Work.

Power of Fashion.

Though we can neither tell whence fashion comes, nor how, nor what it will do next, nor why it was yesterday one thing, today is something else and tomorrow will be different, nor why it always has been, is now and probably always will be obeyed, it moves steadily forward into that realm of common sense where beauty and utility blend in perfect harmony and ever keeps step with the progress of civilization and culture. No garment can please the man of refined and cultivated taste, however correct it may be in fit, however well it may be tailored or however excellent the materials may be of which it is made, unless it is fashionable, even though it violates no law of art and of itself is a thing of beauty, for without that indescribable something that only fashion can give it is like a flower without fragrance or a tune without music.—Sartorial Art Journal.

REPUBLICAN CITY PRIMARIES.

The Syracuse Herald last Sunday contained the following, under a Fulton date:

"The Republicans of Fulton are talking over the results of the caucuses held in this city on Thursday night. The ward organizations as they now stand are anti-Stowell by a large majority. A prominent anti-Stowell Republican expressed the feeling in these words: "The good Republicans of Fulton have become tired of the one man rule in the county of Oswego. We have thrown off the yoke of Judge Stowell and are determined to show him that his proper place is in his Democratic Oswego rather than attempting to dictate courses of action for such communities as Fulton, which with its 10,000 population has a normal Republican majority of 400. By the action in the caucuses in the Fourth and Fifth wards of this city Thursday night we proclaimed to Mr. Stowell our independence of his rule and our ability to name our own delegates to county and district conventions.

"Stowell's rule has of late years become oppressive to an unendurable degree, for at caucus time he has taken it up himself to dictate the membership of any and all delegations and the last straw was put upon the camel's back when he sent word to this city that he would name the next Postmaster of Fulton. The results of our caucuses are our defi and answer to him.

"The first ward never bowed allegiance to the Stowell banner, the Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth wards were Stowell's up to Thursday night, at which time a revolution occurred in the latter wards and, as a result, the Second, Third and Fifth wards were completely overturned in organization and solid anti-Stowell delegations to the district and county conventions were named. In the Fourth ward the majority of the two delegations favor the anti-Stowell element. In the latter ward on the night of the caucus a lively altercation occurred between Member of Assembly Thomas D. Lewis and Surrogate S. B. Mead, the former finally securing the naming of the district delegation while the latter named the county delegation, a signal loss to the Stowell ring.

"The Fifth ward was the storm center of the revolution. Two factions were solidly arrayed against each other, the Stowell organization headed by W. E. Hughes and Edward P. Cole and the anti-Stowellites headed by F. M. Cornell and Edward Quirk. Cornell proved himself a veritable war horse and rode roughshod, but smiling, over his foes Heading the county delegation of the anti-Stowell men, Cornell gained a signal victory over the supporters of W. E. Hughes. In the Sixth ward the Stowell organization won out, a solitary victory."

The foregoing is absolutely false to fact, with the exception that the First and Fifth wards are now in control of the opposition forces, and that the Fifth ward was the storm center.

The Times will analyze the statements as they appear, giving the absolute truth, notwithstanding the assertions of the men who have been made delirious by their scant majority.

The Second, Fourth and Sixth wards elected delegates who are in favor of majority rule.

Judge Stowell has never suggested a man for any delegation or office in the city of Fulton, nor did the Hon. T. D Lewis interfere in any ward outside of his own, where he was sustained by a rousing majority.

Judge Stowell has not "sent word to this city that he would name the next postmaster of Fulton." After he had been called upon by the leading Republicans and men representing the largest interests in Fulton in behalf of the candidacy of the editor of the Times for the postmastership, he agreed "to use his influence with other officials, as they requested." In doing so he was simply using his prerogative as an American citizen.

In the Fourth ward—the home ward of the Hon. T. D. Lewis and Surrogate Mead—there was a ripple when Frederick G. Spencer's name was mentioned as a district delegate, and he was defeated. Mr. Lewis' ticket won by a vote of 34 to 16. The "signal loss," it will be noted, was not sustained by Mr. Lewis' ticket.

In the Fifth ward contest the "anti-one-man-rule" forces were defeated by a majority of fifteen. The loyal Republicans on the Fifth ward district delegation—all G. A. R. men—had no part in the intrigue of the contest Their only ambition was to stand for the Hon. M. L. Wright for Supreme Court renomination and the Hon. T. D Lewis for the Assembly. One of them on Friday morning expressed earnest regret at the way matters had gone and stated emphatically that he was not in sympathy with the Quirk-Cornell combine.

F. M. Cornell "a veritable war-horse who rode rough-shod but smiling over his foes," according to the Herald article, needs no introduction to the Republicans of Oswego county. His endless perfidy to the party in this city is notorious. During the past seven years he has not been permitted to take even a minor part in the Republican caucus in his own ward.

Upon this occasion, when this superb opponent to "one-man rule" had "rode rough-shod but smiling over his foes," the trophy which he captured to lay at the feet of his lord and master, as the choice of the Fifth ward for its representative in county matters, was Edward Quirk.

Enjoyable Recital.

Saturday afternoon the parents and friends of Miss Lela Church's class in piano study gathered at her home in Sixth street, to attend a recital given at the close of the study year. The numbers on the program were rendered in a manner alike creditable to students and teacher. Disastrous Conflagration Threatened.

About 2 o'clock on Friday morning a fire broke out in the Dilts Machine foundry, presumably having caught from molds which had been placed against the wall while too hot, and for a time it seemed that the entire plant was doomed to destruction. As it is, the side walls and steel roof are so damaged as to require re-construction. The firemen lost no time in responding to the alarm, and so nobly did they work under the directorship of Chief Waugh, that the proprietors of the foundry, Messrs. Dilts and Bennett, wish to make a public acknowledgement through the Times, of their deep appreciation of the intelligent service rendered. They state that they were surprised at the proficient manner in which the fire was handled, apparently not a false move being made by any one, nor one unnecessary drop of water used. The building was insured.

New Cover for the Four-Track News.

The Four-Track News celebrates the inauguration of its ninth volume with a new and highly artistic cover, designed by Finn H. Frolich, who was the recipient of a silver medal from the Paris Exposition, and also a sculptor of several of the most effective pieces of statuary at the St. Louis Exposition.

The central idea of the design represents the Globe, indicating the field of the magazine, for no corner of the earth that is accesable to the traveler is outside the scope of its articles, or beyond the range of its influence. There are few civilized countries that have not been represented in its pages, and few which it does not regularly visit.

At the top of the Globe is the allegorical figure of Progress in her quadriga, her four spirited horses signifying advancement, her extended torch typifying education.

The stage coach, the steamship, the airship and the locomotive—bandmaids of transportation—are suggestive of its pleasures and and profits.

In the central panel each month will appear a different half-tone picture appropriate to the season.

The new cover gives a stronger individuality to the Four Track News, and is a decided advance in the exterior appearance, in keeping with the steady improvement which has marked each succeeding table of contents, resulting in the wholesome growth of the magazine from sixty four to upward of one hundred and sixty pages monthly.

DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

Portion of the Historical Report of Kayendatsyona Chapter Given at the Annual Meeting.

Monthly meetings have been held at the homes of the members during the year, one hour of each meeting being devoted to the study of American history, beginning at an early date. Year books containing program, by laws, names of members, officers, etc., were prepared by the book committee. A musical and dramatic entertainment was not only thoroughly enjoyed but proved a benefit to our treasury. A silver shower, to which each member invited a limited number, who were entertained by our Regent, was quite a brilliant affair and netted about $25.

In June an invitation was accepted from Ontario chapter to go to Mexico Point, where with Fort Oswego and Adams Chapters a pilgrimage was made to the grave of Silas Town, he being a spy in the war of the Revolution, and having given to the island on which he spent his last days and was buried, the name of Spy Island. On his grave our Regent placed a Betsy Ross flag of silk as a gift from our Chapter.

The anniversary of our Chapter organization was observed by a pleasant social gathering of the Daughters and a few of their friends. A unique entertainment was furnished which was quite amusing and constituted a severe test of our knowledge of American History. On February 22 a colonial tea was given in commemoration of the birth of the greatest benefactor of our nation, with the replenishing of our treasury as a secondary consideration. The Daughters appeared in costumes of "ye olden tyme", which proved very entertaining to the goodly number of guests who had assembled to partake of the excellent refreshments which were served from many choice pieces of old china and historic silver. A short literary and musical program added greatly to the enjoyment of the occasion.

Hardly had the pleasant memories of the event detailed in the foregoing paragraph passed from our minds when the first shadow fell upon us; when we learned that we must soon lose our ever faithful Regent, to whom we owe our existence as a Chapter. Her thoroughly patriotic spirit, her excellent executive ability, her tact, her enthusiasm and her perseverance have been an inspiration and an example that we have always appreciated but never more than when we knew she must leave us for other fields of usefulness. Just before she left town a banquet was given in her honor, several out of town guests being present. Our hostess, with well chosen words, presented Mrs. Vincent with a solid silver knife, fork and spoon, that she may be reminded three times each day of her loyal Daughters at Fulton.

At the Thirteenth Continental Congress our Chapter was represented by our Regent and by two visiting members. A delegate was also present at the State Convention of D. A. R. at Kingston-on-the-Hudson. Our Chapter gave ten dollars to the Memorial Continental Hall fund. Early in the year a petition was signed by the Revolutionary Soldiers' Committee asking Mount Adnah Cemetery Association for a lot on which to erect a monument to the memory of the heroes of 1776. This petition was granted by the Association but as no desirable lots are available at the present time, the Daughters have been assured that just as soon as new ground is laid out a very desirable plot, already chosen by our committee, will be given us. A Revolutionary Soldiers' Monument Fund has been already started.

The sleeping seed is planted now,
That 'mid the passing smiles and tears,
Our prayers may waken into life,
To blossom in the future years,
In memory of our noble sires,
Who's deeds the Pearl of Freedom wrought,
A stately granite monument,
A witness of the battles fought.

Once more the season of the year is at hand when loyal Americans lay aside all business for a day to pay respects to the memory of those brave men who have given their lives for this great nation not among the least of these being the heroes of 1776, whose sacrifices and deeds of valor are unparalelled in the annals of American history. Our Chapter decided to observe June 8 as a memorial day, that being the anniversary of the day the National society became a permanent organization by a charter from Congress of the United States. The service was similar in nature to that of last year, the names of soldiers having been increased from thirteen to twenty. These were arranged as on the previous year, the arch being placed on the elevated ground where we hope and expect our monument will some day stand. A brief biographical sketch of each brave warrior was given, the exercises at the arch closing with a portion of our ritualistic service, the company then repairing to the graves of those buried in Mount Adnah. While we recalled their heroic deeds, the Regent, Mrs. George C. Webb, tenderly laid the delicate flowers on the sod, beneath which rest the ashes of one who was at one time a body guard of General Washington; another whose crippled hand gave evidence of a bayonet wound inflicted by a Britisher at the battle of Saratoga, and another whose frozen and bleeding feet once stained the soil of what is now Fulton, while on an expedition to Oswego from Fort Stanwix by order of General Washington.

Thus passes into history the second memorial service, also the first sixteen months' work of Chapter New York State No. 77, Daughters of the American Revolution.

Respectfully submitted,

ALICE A. SCHENCK,
Historian.

This arrangement will prove exceedingly advantageous to the patrons of the office and will undoubtedly be appreciated.

Farewell Reception to Mr. Taft.

The members of the Volney Congregational church tendered their retiring pastor, Rev. C. J. Taft, a farewell reception in the church last Thursday evening. The affair was largely attended and would have been most enjoyable but for the thought of parting. A pleasing program was rendered in which words of appreciation of the labors of Mr. Taft were spoken by Mr. Eugene Hunn, representing the officials of the church, Mrs. J. H. Mace in behalf of the Ladies' Aid Society, and Mr. Henry Mace for the Sunday School. Mr. Taft responded to these in a happy vein. Miss Lena Babcock gave a pleasing reading, and Mr. Taft sang a solo. In further token of the esteem in which Mr. Taft was held he was presented with a silver water set, fruit dish and knife of handsome design. Mr. Hunn made the presentation speech. Upon accepting the gifts from his hand, Mr. Taft feelingly thanked the donors in a few well chosen words. The program was brought to a close by singing "Blest be the tie that binds." Following this, light refreshments were served Then came the goodbyes and adjournment

Mr. Taft leaves this week to take up his duties as pastor of the East Side Congregational church of Binghamton, N. Y. The best wishes of a host of friends will follow him to his new field.

"Mardi-Gras" March.

Japan's — A Naval Powe

She Will Soon Rank Fourth In Point of Sea Armament — Her Russian Trophies — Admiral Togo In His Cabin.

THE victory of the sea of Japan placed the nation ruled by the mikado in the front row of the countries that are known as naval powers. Japan in virtually annihilating the navy of Russia and making herself undisputed master of the waters that wash the eastern coast of Asia won a position alongside the United States, Germany, France and even England. American naval experts have already begun to advocate more strenuously than ever the increase in the naval strength of the United States, not because of any fear of war with Japan, with which we are on the best of terms, but because a stronger navy, as it is held, would furnish a better guarantee of the continuance of peace. Several additional battleships will be sent to Philippine waters.

Admiral Togo attacked Rojestvensky with but five battleships in his fleet, although the Russians had seven. Two of the latter—the Orel and the Nicolas I.—were captured and are to be added to Japan's fleet. Five Russian ships—the Retvizan, Pobieda, Poltava, Perosviet and Sevastopol—were taken with Port Arthur, and there is strong hope at Tokyo that most if not all can be rendered seaworthy once more. The battleship Cesarevitch is interned at Kaiochau, and it is supposed Japan expects to claim it in the peace negotiations.

Two of the largest battleships ever constructed are now building for Japan in England and will soon be completed. Should all the Russian vessels mentioned be added to her fleet she would have a force of fifteen battleships, three times as many as Togo commanded when he overthrew Rojestvensky. But, in addition to the battleships, Japan has added or expects to add many Russian cruisers and torpedo boats to her naval force. These include the cruiser Variag, which was sunk at Chemulpo, but has since been raised; the cruisers Bayan and Pallada, captured at Port Arthur, and several interned vessels. Of these three are at Manila — the Aurora, Oleg and Jemtchug—while the Lena is cooped up at San Francisco, the Diana at Saigon and the Askold at Shanghai. Transports and colliers and various minor craft are at other ports. Whether Japan will get all these as one outcome of the peace negotiations remains to be seen. In any event it is held that her naval strength will be much greater at the close of the war than at its beginning. It is predicted by some naval experts that Japan will soon rank fourth in point of sea armament.

ADMIRAL TOGO, FROM HIS LATEST PICTURE.

Naval experts agree that it was the preparedness and personnel of the Japanese navy which enabled it to meet and overwhelm with utter destruction a force of equal if not superior strength in point of armament. All concede that for the readiness of the Japanese to meet the Russians in the sea of Japan chief credit belongs to Admiral Togo, the quiet man who planned the action from his cabin in the flagship Mikasa. This cabin has sometimes been described as very plain and bare, but the English artist Seppings Wright has drawn a picture of it, in which appear a roll top desk and a luxurious looking swivel chair, a mirror and a mantel, on which are flowers and photographs, while in the center of the apartment stands a table, on which are seen two of the dwarf trees which the Japanese are expert in growing. These little trees are said to be hundreds of years old and were presented to the admiral by Count Okuma. In this cabin Togo keeps a shell which burst on board the Mikasa before Port Arthur and came near killing the Japanese commander. The fragments were collected and pieced together with cement.

John W. Oliver Is Active as an Editor at Fourscore and Ten.

A journalist still in active service who almost links the twentieth century with the eighteenth is John W. Oliver, veteran editor of the Yonkers (N. Y.) Statesman. Mr. Oliver recently celebrated his ninetieth birthday. He saw Thomas Jefferson and John Adams, and shook hands with Lafayette. He witnessed the driving of the first spike in the construction of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, the act having been performed by Charles Carroll, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Though his boyhood memories are associated with the men who were prominent in the eighteenth century and the Revolutionary period, he is busy today helping to solve through the press the problems incident to the complicated civilization of the twentieth century.

Mr. Oliver was born in Baltimore April 30, 1815. He learned the printing trade, and at twenty walked from Baltimore to New York, which he reached in an almost penniless condition, having only 6 cents in his pocket. But he at once found a position in a printing office, and in a month's time was foreman. Two years later he was running an office of his own. He applied steam machinery to job printing and helped to revolutionize the trade. In 1840 he organized the Washingtonian movement in New York, and in 1842 joined with a brother in organizing the Sons of Temperance. They also published a temperance paper. In 1872, when he was nearing the chloroforming age, according to Osler, he sold out his printing business, intending to retire, but the same day he made the sale he accepted a position as editor of the Yonkers Statesmen. In 1881 political influences resulted in his removal as editor, but within a month he had formed a company, which bought the paper, and he thus became its principal owner as well as editor. In 1883 he established the present daily edition of the Statesman. It had been published as a weekly for twenty-seven years previous to that time. In 1899, at eighty-four years of age, he married for the third time.

Mr. Oliver is at his desk in the Statesman office every day and usually does considerable of the editorial work of the paper. His home is three-quarters of a mile from the office, and he always walks back and forth for exercise.

Matchmaking In France.

A recent writer says of the commercial side of matchmaking in France: "In most French marriages money plays the important part. The first question asked by the young man is, 'How much?' As a rule, it is an easy matter to ascertain without applying directly to the papa, but even when no question of dowry is raised at the formal demand there is always a contract drawn up by a notary, which specifies the exact sum the girl receives."

The Syracuse Daily Post-Standard is certainly complete in every detail of its make-up, and to residents of R. F. D. routes and small villages where it has no agents costs only $3 per year, or $1.50 for six months.

DIZZINESS AND WEAK NERVES CURED.

Nothing Helped Until Dr. Kennedy's NEW Medicine, Cal-cura Solvent, Was Taken.

"I very much wish," writes Loretta J. Vail, of Hopewell Junction, N. Y., that I might be able in a few lines, without putting myself forward, to let the people understand how valuable Cal-cura Solvent, the new medicine discovered by Dr. David Kennedy, is in cases of indigestion and the like ailments, which are so common among us. I suffered from a severe variety of liver complaint, with dizziness, numbness, and an exceedingly weak and excitable state of the nerves. I employed the best treatment within my reach, yet nothing really helped until I began to use Cal-cura Solvent, and that did." All druggists, $1.00.

Japanese Painting.

The Japanese, with their natural, unsophisticated view of life, have ever sought in their art to mirror what a great painter and critic has termed "men's primordial predilections." Art, however, that seeks to embody pleasures founded on the unchanging properties of human nature must have a past as well as a future, must be able to look backward as well as forward. Not one's life labor, but that of many generations, is required. No people have better understood this than the Japanese. They have also clearly perceived that no art that is not true to the changeless element in man can endure, while, on the other hand, any subject, however trivial, can be made eternally attractive if only treated in accordance with aesthetic law.

Japanese painting delights us by its delicate fancy, its poetry, its freedom, its spirit, but what gives these qualities special and enduring charm, what makes the play of fancy never wearisome, the liberty never mere license, is that they find expression in and through a framework of design so finely conceived that in it we see reflected as in a mirror the fundamental principles which govern all true art.—W. M. Cabot in Atlantic.

The Useful Donkey.

In Syria, says a traveler, I saw a donkey put to an extraordinary use. One evening just before the dinner hour in our tent the Arab cook rushed hurriedly out of the door of the kitchen tent with a glass carafe in his hand. He went up to the row of donkeys, horses and packages tethered close by. Seizing the tail of the smallest of the donkeys, he hastily thrust it into the carafe, gave it two or three vigorous turns inside the bottle and then as quickly removed the unconcerned tail. Thus he had cleansed the water bottle for our dinner. It is in Syria also that the strange fashion exists of shaving the donkeys' coats in different ways, much as a lady of fashion shaves her French poodle. A choice breed of donkeys, known as "Bagdad mules," is much cherished in the neighborhood of Damascus. Their long, hairy coat, usually of pure white or pale gray, admits of fantastic clipping.

The pills that act as a tonic, and not as a drastic purge, are DeWitt's Little Early Risers. They cure Headache, Constipation, Biliousness, etc. Early Risers are small, easy to take and easy to act—a safe pill. Mack Hamilton hotel clerk at Valley City, N D, says "Two bottles of these Famous Little Pills cured me of chronic constipation." Good for either children or adults. W. H. Howell, Houston, Tex., says: "For years I have used Little Early Riser Pills in my family. No better pill can be used for constipation, sick headache, etc., than these famous pills." Scores of testimonials prove their worth. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Money Hotel Cashiers Dislike.

"It is a curious habit the great American public has of wanting the kind of money that hotel cashiers dislike and have the least of," said one of those useful functionaries. "Many are the times each day that I am called upon, by ladies especially, for fifty cent pieces. Quarters won't answer. They want half dollars, though why that particular coin I've never been able to understand. No cashier cares to keep halves on hand, but always maintains a good stock of quarters and dimes, for the reason of their greater convenience. Many of the guests also beg for two dollar notes despite the fact that of all forms of currency they are the most objectionable. We never take them voluntarily and pay them out as fast as they come in."—Washington Post.

Ely's Cream Balm

Gives Relief at Once.

It cleanses, soothes and heals the diseased membrane. It cures catarrh and drives away a cold in the head quickly.

It is absorbed. Heals and protects the membranes. Restores the senses of taste and smell. Full size 50c; trial size 10c, at druggists.

CATARRH

In a Gla— House.

"If there is one thing more than another that makes me wild," said a member of the Mutual Improvement club to a friend, "it is to have that Potter woman correct me when I just make a slip of the tongue. Did you hear her say in that supercilious way of hers, 'My dear, I'm sure you could not have meant that they had music "between each number"—you meant between every two numbers.' And every one near us heard what she said, the cat!"

"Oh, I shouldn't mind her," said the other woman easily. "If you want revenge just look at her with one of those short waisted, pudgy daughters on either side at the assembly and not a man on the horizon."

"M-m!" said the aggrieved one. "Yes, she does look funny; but, my dear, did you realize you said 'on either side' instead of 'on each side?' Of course if they were on either side they'd—well, they couldn't be, you see! I knew you wouldn't mind having me speak of it, for I've noticed you make that little error occasionally, and it's so easy to form a habit."

Shocked the Queen.

The queen of Denmark once paid a visit to the Danish colony of Iceland, where the good old bishop exerted himself to the utmost to show her everything that was worth seeing. The queen paid many compliments to her host, and having learned that he was a family man graciously inquired how many children he had. It happens that the Danish word for "children" is almost identical in sound with the Icelandic word for "sheep," so that the worthy bishop, whose knowledge of Danish was not so complete as it might have been, understood her majesty to ask how many sheep he owned and promptly answered:

"Two hundred."

"Two hundred children!" cried the queen, astounded. "How can you possibly maintain such a number?"

"Easily enough, please your majesty," replied the prelate, with a cheerful smile. "In the summer I turn them out u; on the hills to grass, and when winter comes I kill and eat them!"

Sennit.

In Polynesia and the Pacific islands generally the outer husk of the cocoa nut is braided into strands of uniform texture, known to the natives as sennit and used by them for a variety of purposes. The framework of their houses is held together by braided sennit, and the strakes of their boats are united by it. It is the staple from which string is made to bind the adze blade to its handle and to tie the different parts of their implements securely together. In short, whatever things are nailed or screwed or pegged or glued in other lands are tied together with sennit by the south sea islander.

A Chance For Science.

"Scientists have discovered that a caterpillar can eat 600 times its weight of food in a month."

"Say," replied the dyspeptic billionaire, "I wonder if the scientists have ever done any experimenting in the way of grafting caterpillars' stomachs on other things?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

A Remarkable Dwarf.

Perhaps the most remarkable dwarf on record was Sir Jeffrey Hudson, the little fellow whom Scott introduces in "Peveril of the Peak." He was born in Rutlandshire, England, in 1619.

When eight years of age he was presented by the Duke of Buckingham to Queen Henrietta in a cold pie. He afterward became attached to the court of Charles I. At one of the court masks the king's porter, a man of gigantic size, who used to torment the little dwarf, pulled from one pocket a loaf of bread and from the other Jeffrey, much to the surprise and amusement of the company present. Jeffrey was at this time only eighteen inches in height.

He remained at this stature until he was thirty years of age, after which a curious exception to the laws of growth took place, since Jeffrey rapidly grew to be three feet nine inches in height, whereas most men do not grow a quarter of an inch after the age of thirty. This dwarf had an enormous head and very large hands and feet; otherwise his proportions were symmetrical, and his face was considered handsome.—Youth's Companion.

Kodol Dyspepsia Cure affords quick and permanent relief from Indigestion and all other stomach troubles, builds up the system and so purifies that disease cannot attack and gain a foothold as when in a weakened condition. The constantly increasing use of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure by physicians of hospital and general practice of itself tells how this most wonderful modern discovery has proven to be the greatest digestant for the alleviation of a suffering humanity. Its many cures of both children and adults grows larger day by day. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Two Tales of Macready.

It is not always well to strut and fret one's little hour upon the stage too realistically. Macready, who threw himself into his acting heart and soul, used to tell funny stories about the effect of his easy, colloquial manner upon the players collected for his company in small provincial towns. Once in the play of "William Tell" he turned to one of these stupid rustics and put the question, "Do you shoot?" so naturally that the man was quite thrown off his guard, and, to his horror, replied, "A little, sir, but I've never had a go with one of them crossbows." Another time in "Virginius" he asked, "Do you wait for me to lead Virginia in, or will you do so?" only to be greeted unexpectedly by the actor who played Icilius with, "Why, really, sir, I don't care; just as you do it in London."

One Legged Dinner Party.

A certain gentleman, the possessor of a cork leg, living in one of the London suburbs annually gives a dinner to a dozen owners of a like substitute. In the center of the table are grouped four crutches, around which twine festoons of flowers; miniature legs in ivory compose the handles of the knives and forks, while the piece de resistance is invariably a magnificent turkey that has been deprived of a leg before being brought to table.

Good for Stomach Trouble and Constipation.

"Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets have done me a great deal of good," says C. Towns, of Rat Portage, Ontario, Canada. "Being a mild physic the after effects are not unpleasant, and I can recommend them to all who suffer from stomach disorder." For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Orange Trees.

An orange grove in full bearing is one of the most delightful sights the eye can witness. The trees are a beautiful shape if left as nature made them. The limbs come nearly to the ground, so close that an orange picker goes under the tree flat on his back and often cuts 100 oranges from the tree before he comes out. Oranges are never picked, but are cut off with shears having a spring between the handles. An orange that has no stem on it is considered a "cull" and is not packed by a first class packer.

A BUSY PROSECUTOR.

District Attorney Jerome, Who May Indict Equitable Officers.

District Attorney William Travers Jerome of New York, who has taken steps to determine whether officers of the Equitable Life Assurance society have made themselves amenable to criminal prosecution, is not afraid to tackle violators of the law whether in high places or low. His fights against keepers of gambling houses for the rich and wealthy corporations engaged in supplying race track news to pool rooms and his campaign against graft and vice in every form in New York have won him a reputation as a bold defender of the interests of the public as opposed to criminals or promoters of questionable schemes.

The criminal prosecutions of a great city like New York necessitate a vast amount of work for the lawyers engaged in them. The city of New York embraces several counties, and Mr. Jerome's jurisdiction is restricted to one, New York county, but even so he has to supervise the conduct of about 12,000 cases annually. Of course he cannot give all of these his personal attention and has a large army of assistants, but the system of the office is such that its head keeps conversant with what is going on, and his ideas dominate the policy of the department. The detectives, clerks, accountants, messengers and experts of various kinds in his employ may be counted by the score. Each of the thousands of cases passing through the office requires a certain amount of investigation, and Mr. Jerome's assistants make regular reports to him on such investigations, and he decides what is to be done.

District Attorney Jerome is a native of New York and forty-six years old, though he scarcely looks that age. His country home is at Lakeville, Conn., where a friend one day found him building a clock.

"I should think," said the friend, "that you would be afraid of the walking delegate coming along and ordering a strike."

"I have provided against that in my design," answered Jerome. "This is to be a nonstrikable clock."

RICHARD F. OUTCAULT.

Interesting Career of the Artist Who Created Buster Brown.

Richard Felton Outcault of Buster Brown and Yellow Kid fame is a native of Lancaster, O., and is forty-two years old. But the statement of these facts does not give much of a clew to his personality. He is quiet, thoughtful and dignified, and in appearance not the kind of man one would look for in the inventor of the popular Buster. It is more to the point to say that he is married and has two children who are as lively youngsters as ever grew. Speaking of where he gets his ideas for the Buster pictures, Mr. Outcault says:

RICHARD F. OUTCAULT.

"I get most of my ideas from my children—not all, of course, for you see my house is still standing. The adventures of Buster, by the way, are not upon the whole extravagant. My own children have done worse, and they're not bad children at that. I have no fear of ever running out of ideas. My chief difficulty is in adjusting my attitude toward them and their misbehavior. Imagine for yourself the difficulties of this parental position. Most parents do their best to keep their children good—I mean quiet and well behaved. See the temptation I have to do otherwise. Why, the success of my work depends upon their getting, constantly getting, into some new scrape. Shall I ruin my business or my children?

"My position is not only difficult; it's pathetic. I come down some mornings in a hurry to catch my train to find that my children have glued my gum shoes fast to the floor. What am I to do? Shall I spank them or pat them

Unhappy Dickens.

Dickens had to confess, after a severe trial of married life, that the skeleton in his domestic closet was becoming "a pretty big one." Then, in 1857, came the crisis.

"Poor Catherine and I are not made for each other," he wrote in a letter to Forster, "and there is no help for it. She is exactly what you know in the way of being amiable and complying, but we are strangely ill assorted for the bond that is between us. God knows she would have been a thousand times happier if she had married another kind of man, and her avoidance of this destiny would have been at least equally good for us both. The years have not made it easier to bear for either of us. There is plenty of fault on my side, I dare say, in the way of a thousand uncertainties, caprices and difficulties of disposition, but only one thing will alter all that, and that is the end which alters everything."

Where Silence Is Golden.

This story is illustrative of the absolute silence and loneliness of the typical Australian bush camp:

Two men were camping together, but rarely exchanged a word.

One morning one of the men remarked at breakfast, "Heard a cow bellow in the swamp just now."

Nothing further was said, and they went about their business for the rest of the day. Twenty-four hours later, once more at breakfast, the second man said:

"How d'you know it wasn't a bull?"

Again no comment. Again a pause of twenty-four hours. Next morning the first man began to pack up his "billy" and "swag."

"You going?" inquired the other.

"Yes."

"Why?"

"Because," said his friend, "there's too much argument in this camp."—Kansas City Star.

Seventeenth Century Wagons.

The introduction of stage wagons in England about the middle of the seventeenth century led to many abuses. In London they were known as "hell carts" on account of the hot time they gave the unfortunates inside. Their drivers were said to be "seldom sober, never civil and always late," and their size—copied by other vehicles—was such that when they broke down all traffic behind "was necessitated to stand stock still on most beastly deep, wet ways till it pleased them to jog on." During the reign of Charles II. parliament passed an act concerning the size of carts and wagons, with extremely heavy penalties for infringements, but when the act came to be applied it was discovered that the model prescribed by it was impracticable to such an extent that the judges gave directions not to enforce the act.

A Browning Enigma.

Elizabeth Barrett Browning has set quite a Homeric problem as to the place of her birth. The Encyclopaedia Britannica gives London, but the Dictionary of National Biography prefers Burn Hall, Durham, and there is an entry in the register of Kelloe church referring to "Elizabeth Barrett Moulton Barrett, daughter and first child of Edward Barrett Moulton Barrett of Coxhoe Hall." Browning himself, however, declared that his wife was born at Carlton Hall, Durham. Now, Carlton Hall is in Yorkshire. Finally the authorities are not agreed as to whether Mrs. Browning was born on March 4 or on March 6, but, of course, the outstanding fact is that she was born.—London Globe.

Not Perfect Without Mrs. Kingsley.

Even a brief holiday at the seaside was to Charles Kingsley too long an absence from his wife. "This place, 'tis perfect," he wrote on one occasion, "but it seems a dream and imperfect without you. Blessed be God for the rest, though I never before felt the loneliness of being without the beloved being whose every look and word and motion is the keynote of my life. People talk of love ending at the altar. Fools!"

The Limit to Their Credulity.

Kansas editors are skeptical. An exchange asked: "What do you think of an artist who painted cobwebs on a ceiling so naturally that the hired girl wore herself into an attack of nervous prostration trying to sweep them down?" Most of the editors say that there may have been such an artist, but there was never such a hired girl.—Kansas City Journal.

Jimmy—Better be careful an' not be too good or mebbe they won't give you nothin' but a Bible.—Philadelphia Press.

Out of Pocket, Though.

When General Lafayette attended Lamarque's funeral the crowd took the horses out of his carriage and drew him home themselves. "Were you not honored and pleased?" asked a friend. "Very much pleased," replied Lafayette, "but I never saw my horses again."

FATALITIES ON FOURTH

Spent Bullets Did Their Customary Deadly Work.

OVER 100 ARRESTS IN NEW YORK.

For Violation of City Ordinances Against Discharge of Firearms Five Deaths In New York—Seven Boys Frightfully Injured by Explosion of a Can of Powder.

New York, July 5.—Despite the efforts of very many small boys and even big fellows the Fourth of July was comparatively quiet. Fire crackers popped here and there, pyrotechnics wheeled and sizzled, and there was the usual number of casualties. In spite of all regulations and police precautions revolvers were fired into the air everywhere, the spent bullets doing their customary deadly work.

More than 100 boys and men were arrested for violation of the ordinance which forbids the discharge of firearms in the street and the carrying of concealed weapons.

Altogether five deaths were recorded in the city as a result of the day's celebration, and the number of accidents reaches into the hundreds. One child was killed by falling from a window while watching the celebration. Morris Gouhestein, an East Side tailor, was killed by a stray bullet, and numbers of others were seriously hurt. Several persons were hit while sitting at the windows or on verandas.

Perhaps the most serious accident of the day in New York was that at Governor's island where a charge in a blank shell exploded, probably fatally injuring one man and wounding others.

The majority of the day's accidents were in the class of burns from fire crackers, toy pistols and miniature cannon. One boy, Beott Quinto, was holding several giant fire crackers when some one threw a lighted fuse among them, and when the smoke of the explosion cleared away it was found that he was terribly burned.

There were no serious fires.

Fully one hundred persons of all ages and conditions in life were victims of the Fourth of July celebration in Newark, but no one was fatally hurt.

Coney Island had the largest Independence day crowd. Estimates gathered at the railroad terminals, steam boat landings and automobile stations showed that 400,000 visitors were at the seaside.

At the Battery landing of steamers the scenes yesterday were in some ways disgraceful when the Fourth of July crowds tried to get on the small steamers running to Long Branch. Women were crushed, children were torn from their parents and men engaged in fisticuffs.

There were inspectors from the custom house on each boat that went out yesterday. To aid these men from the department of labor and commerce from Washington were distributed among the vessels.

Seven boys, ranging in age from 4 to 14 years were frightfully injured by the explosion of a can of powder from which they were loading a toy cannon in Wyeth avenue, Brooklyn. Andrew Krecht, aged 13, had both eyes blown out and is not expected to live.

PREMATURE EXPLOSION.

Two Soldiers Severely Injured During Fourth of July Salute.

New York, July 5.—By the premature explosion of a shell in the open breech of a five-inch gun while a Fourth of July salute of 45 guns was being nred at Castle William on Governor's island, Private Cornelius Harrington of Company H, Eighth infantry, was so badly injured that he may not recover. One arm was torn off, his right eye was blinded and he was terribly burned on one side of his head and body.

Sergeant Frank Webb of the same company was also badly hurt and it is feared will lose the sight of one of his eyes, but is expected to recover.
